120 Years of Continuous Publication

One hundred and twenty years ago, an Italian immigrant who arrived in Boston when he was only 16 years old saw the realization of his fondest dreams, to establish an Italian language newspaper that would be the genuine voice of the increasing flow of Italians to the United States. The boy was James V. Donnaruma, the newspaper was LA GAZZETTA DEL MASSACHUSETTS which is now published in English as the POST-GAZETTE.

He remained at the helm of this well-known publication until his demise in 1953 at which time his son, Caesar, took over the reins of running the now famous national weekly newspaper located in the North End of Boston. Caesar was loyally assisted by an ingenious wife, Phyllis, who assumed the role of publisher in 1971, as one the nations first Italo-American women publishers. Upon Phyllis' death in October 1990, their daughter, Pamela, continued the tradition as the third generation publisher of the POST-GAZETTE.

The GAZZETTA, as it was properly called, was very short in financial means but had a large vision, to give its readers a better and wider understanding between two countries. The so-called Italian Colony, or "La Colonia," had to face a complexity of problems and the GAZZETTA had to understand the slow and hard transition of men who, in most cases, had been engaged in agriculture in the home country. Here, they were to work in construction, factories and restaurants, eventually emerging as small storekeepers and finally the professionals, heads of business enterprises and eventually to become industrial leaders, heads of state, people to be respected by others.

If America was to some a bitter disappointment, to more it remained a great adventure and excitement. There were new ways to be learned as well as new institutions. There were speculators and exploiters to be fought, a "padrone" system needed to be destroyed. There were churches to be built and above all, immigrants took advantage of America's free education while learning the process of citizenship. We devoted pages and pages to that very important mission!

The GAZZETTA became, in a way, a sort of guide, so to speak, the go-between that brought American political life to the Italian immigrant. Many times our people were sent unknowingly to work in places subject to a strike and were therefore exposed to physical violence on the part of strikers ... in time, the situation changed as they learned more about the new land of opportunity.

The Italian immigrant was a hard worker, a thrifty man, a family man. He had pride. As a family their goal was to build a future in America. The GAZZETTA stressed these virtues. We began to publish an all-English section which became a real forum, discussing many problems, criticizing discriminating laws while advocating Americanization and responding to community needs such as the Red Cross appeals.

A typical Horatio Alger story could be repeated by thousands of immigrants and their American-born children who became an integral part of this great country, fighting in its wars and facing every national crisis. It would be impossible, space wise, to enumerate the many initiatives taken by our publication from its

San Rocco Annual Procession

by Matt Conti

The Society of San Rocco held their annual procession on Sunday, July 17, 2015 through the streets of Boston's North End. Traditional music was played by the Roma Band and Northeast Italian Band.

The Story of Saint Rocco - Saint Rocco was born into an aristocratic French family. He turned away from his worldly inheritance and status, giving all of his possessions to the poor and the sick. He traveled plague stricken Europe caring for the sick and ultimately, through the grace of God, miraculously cured those he encountered. Saint Rocco escaped death from starvation and plague by eating food brought to him by a dog.

San Nicola Baronina, a small town in Italy, adopted this Holy Man as their patron saint. Immigrants from this town established a Society dedicated to his works in Boston, MA, in 1921. The Society of San Rocco of San Nicola Baronina annually celebrates a festival in his honor and strives throughout the year to perform charitable works.

HORSES THAT EAT PEOPLE

Stories will always be told about the various circumstances under which men have eaten horse-meat. The story that is told today is reversed and tells of some horses that ate people.

The legend starts with a man named Diomedes. There were at least three famous men in antiquity who bore this name. The first Diomedes was a king, and one of the bravest of the Grecian chiefs in the Trojan War. The second Diomedes was a Roman grammarian who lived during the 4th century A.D. And the third man, our subject for this article, was a king of the Bistones, a Thracian people who dwelt near the Aegean Sea. This king was a son of Ares. We remember Ares as the Greek god of violence, brute force and the slaughter of war. It was often said that Diomedes inherited many of the violent characteristics of his father.

Hercules-and-the-Mares-of-Diomedes

For his eighth labor, Hercules was required to go to Thrace and capture the four flesh-eating mares of Diomedes. The travel route took the strong man through Thessaly, where he was hospitably received by King Admetus. The king was in mourning for his wife, but out of respect for Hercules, and in order that his guest's pleasure would not be lessened, Admetus pretended that the dead person was a minor servant in the household.

While becoming familiar with the king's palace, Hercules was told that it was actually Alcestis, wife of King Admetus, who had died. Also, learning that Thanos, the Greek god of death, was about to carry off the woman, Hercules rushed to the Queen's casket, ambushed death and took her from him by force.

After returning Queen Alcestis to her grateful husband, Hercules and a small band of followers journeyed to Thrace. The grooms of Diomedes were quickly overpowered and the mares herded toward the boats. Some of the Bistones came in pursuit, causing Hercules to leave the mares in the care of his young assistant Abderus while the pursuers were being repulsed. After killing King Diomedes and driving off the other Bistones, Hercules returned to the boats. One version of the story tells of the mares attacking and consuming most of Abderus, while a second account claims that Hercules calmed the voracious beasts by feeding Diomedes to them. The mares were finally brought back to the city of Tiryns and presented to King Eurystheus as was required.

The horses were freed but were attacked and killed by wild animals on Mount Olympus as they attempted to find their way back to Thrace.

Bringing Textile Jobs Back to the USA

As this week's Post-Gazette goes to press I am in Washington, where, among other meetings I attended to support American textile manufacturing, I attended a meeting of, and submitted comments to, the United States Manufacturing Council, part of the Department of Commerce. Here are my comments.

I am pleased to note that since the establishment of the Council in 2004, the textile industry has been represented among its members, including, currently, by Warwick Mills of New Ipswich, New Hampshire. No discussion of manufacturing in America is complete without including our first industry, the textile industry. According to the American Textile History Museum in Lowell, Massachusetts, Samuel Slater, by constructing a fully functional water-powered yarn spinning mill in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, in 1790, became known as the Father of the Industrial Revolution in America.

The quality and creativity of today's American textile industry makes this one of our newest industries as well; one that is attracting companies that desire to operate within the world's most desirable consumer market. In recent years we have seen a trend toward "reshoring" textile manufacturing and jobs. I am pleased to say that I played a small role in helping a new wool fabric-weaving mill open in Connecticut last year. In recent years there has also been investment in yarn spinning capacity in the United States.

However, the American textile industry faces obstacles to achieving full potential growth. According to my client Max Brickle, of the Brickle Group, Woonsocket, Rhode Island, "The problem is poorly educated workforce and [lack of] manufacturing skills." Mr. Brickle believes that workforce-training grants could be a great help. He also stated that our high schools and colleges should do more to direct students toward, and prepare them for, careers in manufacturing.

Don Rongione of Bollman Hat Company in Adamstown, Pennsylvania, echoed the need for training when I recently spoke with him. He also called for grants for machinery purchases. One of Bollman's current projects is reshoring knit hat manufacturing. He believes that high quality manufacturing can be a strategy for America to compete internationally, but that we are limited due to lax enforcement of trading rules. According to Mr. Rongione, "We need government policy to police and penalize trade partners who violate currency and human rights for workers."

America has a very broad industrial base, nevertheless, we don't make everything, and therefore some inputs must be imported. For 30 years, from 1982 to 2012, Congress gave relief to manufacturers by suspending the import

Open for a few weeks in Boston's North End, the new modern Japanese restaurant, Crudo, and property owner Chris Young, hosted an informal lunch with some neighborhood folks last week. Located at 78 Salem Street, the sushi and Japanese fusion eatery (once referred to as Sushi Rock) occupies the recently expanded two-story building in the space formerly housed by Pulcinella Mozzarella Bar e Ristorante.

Crudo's tagline is "Sushi • Sake • Socialize." It feature sushi bars on both floors, regular dining tables and a hip soundtrack. Sushi Chef Ken Iwaoka comes from Osushi (Copley Place) and the eclectic menu is filled with surprises like Kobe steak, cru-oh lasagna, one night stand, octopus and pink tacos. Drink offerings include sake, Japanese beer and signature cocktails. Crudo is currently open for dinner from 5:00 pm to 11:00 pm (Sun-Wed) and to 12:30 am (Thu-Sat). Lunch is expected to be added in a few weeks.

Crudo's website is currently under construction, but you can check out their Facebook page and on Twitter @crudoboston.

L'Anno Bello: A Year in Italian Folklore

Hello L'Anno Bello Readers!

by Ally Di Censo Symynkywicz

As many of you know, one of my favorite things to write about is food. Over the years, I have spoken about ricotta pie for Easter, ginger cookies on St. Michael's Day, and struffoli for Christmas.

I am looking to hear about special seasonal dishes from my readers. Do you have a traditional or unique Italian recipe that accompanies a holiday, events like birthdays or weddings, or a specific time of year? If so, I'd love to hear about it and the story behind it! I am looking to mention these recipes in a future edition of this column.

Thanks! Grazie Mille!

Ally Di Censo Symynkywicz is a Graduate Student in History at the University of Massachusetts Boston. Any comments and suggestions about Italian holidays and folklore can be emailed to adicenso89@gmail.com.

Red Velvet Cupcakes for St. Valentine's Day.

Soft-baked ginger cookies for St. Michael's Day.

Traditional ricotta, chocolate and orange peel pie for Easter.

Almond and chocolate Harvest Moon cookies for the Autumn Equinox.

Zebra Pudding for Fourth of July.

Cream cheese sugar cookies for Christmas.

Strawberry cream crepes for Midsummer.

Pumpkin, cream cheese swirl loaf for Halloween.

King Cake for Epiphany.

Onion and rosemary focaccia for Lammás.

Saint Bridget, also known as Saint Birgitta, is the most celebrated saint of Sweden. Together with Benedict of Nursia, Saints Cyril and Methodius, Catherine of Siena and Edith Stein, she is one of the six patron saints of Europe. She was born in 1303, the daughter of the Knight Birger Petersson, one of the country's richest landowners, and his wife Ingeborg, who was a member of Sweden's ruling family. Bridget's family was pious; her father made long and arduous pilgrimages as far away as the Holy Land.

Ingeborg died, when Bridget, was ten years old, leaving Bridget, Katharine, age nine and a newborn baby boy, Israel. The children were sent to their maternal aunt for further education and care. From her early childhood, Bridget had visions which became more frequent and definite during her life. She believed that Christ Himself appeared to her, and she wrote down the revelations she then received, which were in great repute during the Middle Ages.

As was usual during the Middle Ages, Bridget was married when she was very young, 13 years old, to a young man, Ulf Gudmarsson with whom she had eight children, four daughters and four sons. Almost all of them survived infancy, which was very rare at that time. One of her daughters was Saint Catherine of Sweden. Bridget became known for her works of charity, particularly toward unwed mothers and their children. When she was in her early thirties, she was summoned to be lady-in-waiting to the new Queen of Sweden, Blanche of Namur. In 1341, she and her husband went on pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostella. Shortly after their return, Ulf died at the Cistercian Alvastra Abbey in Östergötland. After this loss, Birgitta became a member of the Third Order of St. Francis and devoted herself wholly to a life of prayer and caring for the poor and the sick.

It was about this time that she developed the idea of establishing the religious community which was to become the Order of the Most Holy Saviour, or the Brigittines, whose principal house at Vadstena was later richly endowed by King Magnus IV of Sweden and his queen. One distinctive feature of the pre-Reformation houses of the Order was that they were double monasteries, with both men and women forming a joint community with separate cloisters. Members were to live in poor convents and to give all surplus income to the poor; however they were allowed to have as many books as they pleased.

In 1350, a Jubilee Year, Bridget braved a plague-stricken Europe to make a pilgrimage to Rome accompanied by her daughter, Catherine, and a small party of priests and disciples. This was done mainly to obtain the authorization of the new Order from the Pope. This was during the period of the Avignon Papacy within the Roman Catholic Church, and she had to wait for the return of the papacy to Rome from the French city of Avignon, a move for which she had agitated for many years.

It was not until 1370 that Pope Urban V confirmed the Rule of the Order, meanwhile Bridget had made herself universally beloved in Rome by her kindness and good works. She remained in Rome, except for occasional pilgrimages including one to Jerusalem until her death on July 23, 1373. She was canonized in the year 1391 by Pope Boniface IX, which was confirmed by the Council of Constance in 1415. She is the patroness of Sweden. Her feast day is July 23.

Freeway
Says ...

You can email your questions to postgazette@aol.com to the attention of Freeway. Don't forget folks, Freeway is not a vet, so please keep the questions light-hearted! Thanks.

Freeway says, want to rescue an animal? Rescue an animal, welcome love into your family and save a life. What could be more wonderful? Just make sure you are prepared. Adopting a pet is a wonderful way to share your family's love with another living being. Rescuing a cat or dog from the shelter also saves lives. But you should not take entering into pet ownership lightly. It's a long-term commitment with several things to think about before you bring home your newest family member. Ask these questions before committing.

1. How Much Will It Cost? Some municipal shelters offer free or low-cost adoptions, or may simply request a donation of anywhere from $10 to $100. This cost doesn't include basic vet care, however, or any special treatments the animal may require. The main risk with adopting a dog from most municipal shelters is that many do not have budgets to assess the dog's health and treat any issues they find or go through a rescue group, which often assumes the risk of getting the dogs healthy and ready for adoption. This includes things like vaccinations, spaying and neutering. The cost to adopt a pet from a rescue group can also vary, and can range from $250 on up.

2. Are There Other Costs Involved? Also consider long-term costs, which include food, toys, hiring a pet sitter, veterinary care or boarding your pet if you want to go away.

3. What Are the Challenges of Caring for a Rescue? When rescuing a pet, there are needs to consider that are less tangible than standard supplies. Rescuing a pet can be a difficult, yet rewarding experience. Generally the rescue is a bit older. It may take more training to develop skills and it may take longer to socialize dogs left in shelters. In addition to the supplies that all pets need, rescue animals may require more training, patience and time than pets that come from other sources. Some animals may have been abused or neglected and, as a result may take extra attention to transition into family life.

4. What Type of Pet Should you Get? It's important to consider not only your family's lifestyle when selecting a pet, but also the individual temperament of each animal. People usually fall in love with a picture or kind of dog. It is important to be able to talk to the rescuer or group about temperaments of breeds and about specific critters.

Keep an open mind when adopting a pet. Look online and research animals that fit your family, such as these 10 great dog breeds for children. But keep in mind that not every (animal) reads the book. Just because a dog is a Labrador retriever, does not mean it will behave and interact according to what you read. Talk to the people at the rescue groups or shelters and meet the prospective animals.

5. Is Your Family Ready? Adopting a pet means welcoming a new member into your family. You need to consider whether you're willing and able to provide the daily care a pet needs. Animals require attention, activity and exercise. They also need training and boundaries to be good family members. Some of this takes time; some of it also takes money. Bringing a new companion into your home should never

Lombardo's Receives Multiple International Award Nominations

Lombardo's in Randolph received two nominations for the International Special Event Society (ISES) Esprit Awards. The nominations are for two events that took place at the venue in 2014. The awards ceremony will take place on Saturday, August 22nd in New Orleans at the ISES Live Conference.

The family owned event venue is nominated for two events in two categories: Best Catered Event and Best Event for a Non-Profit Organization. One of the event's that was nominated was the annual South Shore YMCA Enchanted Evening Gala that Lombardo's hosted in November 2014. David Lombardo, General Manager and fourth generation of the family, worked alongside event chair Mary Orne of the South Shore YMCA to plan and design the annual gala. "I am honored that our work was recognized on a prestigious and international level" Lombardo tells us.

Produced by the International Special Events Society (ISES), ISES Live is an international conference created to deliver an experience of stimulating ideas and knowledge sharing with other creative professionals from around the world.

Lombardo's is a full service event venue located in Randolph, Massachusetts. Owned and operated by the Lombardo Family, now in their fourth generation of ownership, Lombardo's hosts weddings, social events and corporate events. Lombardo's originated in East Boston in 1963 and celebrated 50 years of business in 2013.

The laughter, joy
and happiness ...
precious memories ...
the best kind.*

*Today
I'll do my very best to try and find a happy place ...
struggling to hide
my heavy heart
and the tears on my face.*

*I'll sit quietly and look at your picture thinking of you with love;
hoping you're doing ok

*May the angels hold you close and sing you a happy song ...

LITTLE ANTHONY: MY JOURNEY, MY DESTINY
Arlene Krieger

Jerome Anthony Gourdine is best known as 'Little Anthony,' and he recently joined author Arlene Krieger to put pen to paper, resulting in 'My Journey, My Destiny', a 366-page memoir that tells how a kid from Fort Greene, Brooklyn, went on to become an inductee into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame (2009), along with being one of the vocal architects to emerge in the era tabbed 'The Golden Age of Rock and Roll.' Enjoy reading about his family, his parent, his aunts, his boyhood friends, and his showbiz fathers: Redd Foxx, Sammy Davis, Jr., and his "brother" Smokey Robinson. Listed are his friendship with Paul Simon and the support of Ed Sullivan, Dick Clark, Moms Mabley, Eartha Kitt, Frankie Lymon, the Motown artists, Don Costa, Teddy Randazzo, Bobby Weinstein, plus Bruce Springsteen and The E Street Band, all people who influenced him. Considered one of the pioneers of the early days of Rock and R&B, Anthony had his first singing gig as a 14-year-old and now 60 years later, the 74-year-old considers himself a 'lucky man.' From the streets of Brooklyn, Anthony and his harmonizing friends became The Imperials, and he a teenage heartthrob with a smooth-as-silk voice that possessed three octaves and a falsetto. Summing it up best is legendary DJ Cousin Brucie Morrow who stated, "Little Anthony has one of the most angelic voices in the world. The story of his life is a fascinating read. He made history with the sound of his voice." A one-man show will highlight Anthony's classic hits along with fresh new tunes as he tours around the country. MY KID BROTHER'S BAND
A.K.A. THE BEATLES
Louise Harrison

It's rare that a member of The Beatles have had a family member reveal the inner workings of their success story and the details of how it came to be. That is, until Louise Harrison raised the curtain, and detailed the story about the band, and especially about her kid brother George Harrison, Louise takes readers through the success enjoyed by the Fab Four in Britain and Europe, right through to their landmark first broadcast in the U.S. on the Ed Sullivan Show, viewed by 73 million people. Ride the wave as Louise relates the journey through the years, touching on emotional, spiritual, and professional points along the way. Relive through Louise's words, the hysteria of 1965's Beatlemania, as The Beatles played for presidents, heads of state, and a command performance for Queen Elizabeth II. The Beatles' fame reached such tremendous proportion that in June 1965, the Fab Four were named Members of the British Empire — a tremendous honor for four kids from Liverpool. Few had ever heard of Louise's move to the United States in 1963, and her tireless efforts to help pave the way for her kid brother's band to come to America. She outlines George's preliminary trip to Chicago, Illinois to visit, radio interviews and local music gigs, all before the hysteria of Kennedy International Airport and the Ed Sullivan Show appearances. Louise's interesting life and career are detailed as she moves from Beatlemania into radio broadcasting, writing, and promotion throughout The Beatles' recording years, and later into environmental and social movements. Enjoy the wit and insights from a perspective only Louise can provide in a way only she can deliver on life, love and above all, her kid brother's band. A heart-felt, powerful memoir! Mago Abdusalamov tragedy. Mago was complaining for round after round about a strange feeling in his head. He had too much pride to quit and nobody else paid attention. He is now confined to a nursing home. Another case is from years ago. For weeks leading up to Benny Kid Paret's fatal fight with Emile Griffith, he complained to his management about having headaches. Nobody listened and Benny was killed. He, too, had too much pride to just say he couldn't fight. That pride killed him.

I have always admired Teddy Atlas. He is one of the most knowledgeable fight people out there. This incident truly surprised me, and I am hoping that he just did not realize the severity of the cut.

I am seeing more and more instances of fighters being asked whether or not they want to continue. This is unfair. As I have written, referees and corner men can see cues from the fighter that let them know he has no more fight left in him. They can also see more clearly than the boxer can the seriousness of his injuries. It makes no sense to shove a camera in a fighter's face and ask him to publicly quit. It is a form of shaming, especially when you know the commentators are going to question your courage. Officials are there for a reason. They should do their jobs without worrying about answering to the promoters, TV people, or the fans. Their job is to protect the fighters. As far as I am concerned, a fight cannot be stopped too early.

Ray Barron's 11 O'CLOCK NEWS

This just in! Democratic front-runner Hillary Clinton raised a record $45 million in the first three months of her 2016 presidential run. Her campaign says that more than 90 percent of that money came from individual donations of less than $100. Clinton's total tops Barack Obama's previous record of $41.9 million in the first three months of his 2012 re-election campaign.

Ready for this? Health officials around the world have warned that drinking soda or other sugary beverages is harmful, but now a team at Tufts University has some hard numbers to back it up. The new study ties sweet drinks to an estimated 184,000 adult deaths each year, including 25,000 in the U.S. alone. After analyzing dietary surveys involving more than 600,000 people from 51 countries conducted between 1980 and 2010, the Tufts group found 133,000 deaths from diabetes, 45,000 from cardiovascular disease, and 6,450 from cancer. All of the fatalities could be directly attributed to sugar-sweetened drinks, including fruit drinks, soda, iced teas, and sports drinks that deliver 50 calories or more per 8-ounce serving. "This is not complicated" the study's senior author, Dr. Dariush Mozafarian, tells the Los Angeles Times. "There are no health benefits from sugar-sweetened beverages," and the potential impact of reducing consumption may be the prevention of "tens of thousands of deaths each year."

Wow! As much as 40 percent of America's food supply gets thrown away every day. The total annual food-waste bill for consumers is $162 billion. American families waste between $1,300 and $2,300 of food annually.

Good news! The U.S. has added jobs for 57 consecutive months, the longest streak since World War II. The unemployment rate fell to 5.3 percent in June, the lowest since the spring of 2008.

Good move! Donald Trump, was told, "You're fired!" by NBC, Macy's and the Spanish-

TV network, Univision, all of whom severed their business relationships with him over his comments that Mexican immigrants are "rapists" and "criminals."

Beefing up security after escaped Mexican drug lord Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman tweeted threats against Donald Trump for insulting Mexicans saying, "I'm going to make you eat your words." Trump said he now has guards "hanging out in trees."

Taste good? More than 1,000 competitors in a recent "Mud Day" race in Nice, France, were stricken with painful abdominal cramps and diarrhea because the mud — which inevitably gets in the runners' mouth — was full of animal fecal bacteria.

Bartenders at a traditional pub in Scotland were forced to don trousers because too many female customers were lifting their kilts for a look. The pub's manager said, "The first few times, it's funny," but then "you feel vulnerable."

Skirts OK: In a victory for women's rights, two Moroccan women have been cleared of charges of "gross indecency" for wearing tight skirts. The women, ages 23 and 29, were walking through a market last month, wearing skirts just above the knee, when they rebuffed a man's advance and he and other men attacked them. When police arrived, they arrested not the men but the women. The arrests sparked large protests in Moroccan cities, and thousands of Moroccan women tweeted pictures of themselves in miniskirts along with the phrase, "Wearing a dress is not a crime."

Bang! Bang! Police officers have shot and killed at least 514 people in the U.S. this year, according to data tracked by The Washington Post. The first week of July was particularly bloody, with at least 31 people shot dead by cops, including 8 in one day.

Latinos have overtaken whites as the biggest racial or ethnic group in California. There are now 14.99 million Latinos in California according to census figures, compared with 14.92 million non-Hispanic whites. California is the third U.S. state, after Hawaii and New Mexico, to have a non-white majority.

Our great musicologist Albert Natale reminds us, the Dorsey Brothers went their separate ways in 1935 over a dispute concerning the tempo of the song "I'll Never Smile Again." Bandleader Artie Shaw was the first of six husbands for actress Lana Turner. Artie and Lana were married for one year (1940-41). "Take away Julia Robert's wild mane of hair and all those teeth and those elastic lips, and what've you got? A pony!" says Joyce Haber. "Barbra Streisand was my opening act in Las Vegas. She was multi-talented from the start, but with the social instincts of a landlady. Barbra is interested in Barbra, and her only marriage that will survive is the one between her ego and her career," says, Liberace.

It was in 1827 that Father Joseph Rosati, an Italian, became the first Bishop of St. Louis. During his 13-year tenure, Bishop Rosati was instrumental in building churches, colleges, academies, convents, hospitals, cathedrals, and orphan asylums — some 34 in number. And, in 1837, John Phinizy, son of Italian immigrants from Parma, became mayor of Augusta, Georgia, perhaps the first Italian-American mayor in the nation. Reminder! In 1865, 300 Italians wearing black arm bands, white gloves, and a small picture of the President took part in the Lincoln funeral procession in Washington, D.C.

Parla Come Mangi!

(Speak as You Eat!)

by Alessandra Sambiase

Benvenuti! Right between the tip of the heel and the sole of the Italian boot lies the Gulf of Taranto named "Mar Piccolo," "Little Sea" by the locals. Mar Piccolo's warm temperature from spring to fall is ideal for oyster and mussel breeding. Frutti di mare, literally "fruits of the sea," is the name given to mussels, oysters, clams, scallops, shrimp and other local species of shellfish. Top quality mussels, called cozze in Italian, are bred on floating farms where ropes of nets provide the perfect habitat for them to grow, holding on firmly through filaments and getting their nutrients from the sea's shallow clean waters. The harvesting process consists of sorting the cozze by size. The larger ones are sold and the smaller ones are returned to the nets to continue growing. The mussels are then sent to the purification plant so that the algae and chalk deposits grown around them are removed. This process follows strict inspections by the Italian supervisory authorities to ensure hygiene at the highest level before the mussels are packed in plastic nets and sent to the market. This is what gives these tasty frutti di mare their top quality label. Enjoy cooking cozze the way they do in Taranto with this easy, very popular and tasty soup recipe that makes a delicious antipasto di mare, seafood appetizer, for your summer meals. Toasted slices of bread are a must to accompany this dish and their purpose is to be used to absorb the last of the sauce on the plate. This Italian-only ritual is called scarpetta, literally, "little shoe." Fare la scarpetta, make the little shoe, refers to using a small piece of bread to absorb every bit of sauce left on the plate. It is a very popular ritual that compliments the cook and is allowed by the informal table etiquette!

2½ pounds mussels

Red pepper flakes

1 clove of garlic, whole

2 Tbsp Extra Virgin Olive Oil

¾ pound ripe tomatoes, skinned, seeded and finely chopped

1 glass dry white wine

1 clove of garlic finely chopped

Salt and pepper to taste

Finely chopped fresh flat Italian parsley

Slices of toasted bread

Preparation: scrub and wash the mussels under running water. Sauté the garlic clove and the desired amount of red pepper flakes in olive oil. As soon as the garlic starts to brown, remove it from the olive oil and add the tomatoes. Simmer for 10 minutes, then add the mussels. Increase the heat and boil until the shells open, shaking occasionally. Discard any unopened shells. Add the wine and reduce. Finally add the chopped clove of garlic and season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve hot with slices of toasted bread to make your scarpetta. Buon appetito!

Zuppa Di Cozze Alla Tarantina

1.2 kg di cozze Peperoncino q.b.

1 spicchio d'aglio, intero

2 cucchiaini di olio extra vergine di oliva

300 g di pomodori maturi spellati, senza semi e ridotti in piccoli pezzi

1 bicchiere di vino bianco secco

1 spicchio d'aglio tritato finemente

Sale e pepe q.b.

Prezzemolo finemente tritato

Fette di pane tostato

Preparazione: pulisci le cozze strofinandole bene sotto l'acqua corrente. Fai soffriggere nell'olio lo spicchio d'aglio e la quantita' di peperoncino desiderata. Rimuovi l'aglio quando inizia a colorarsi troppo e aggiungi i pomodori all'olio. Fai sobollire per 10 minuti, quindi aggiungi le cozze. Aumenta il volume della fiamma e cuoci fino a completa apertura dei mitili, mescolando di tanto in tanto.

Elimina le cozze che non si sono aperte. Aggiungi il vino e fai ridurre. Aggiungi lo spicchio d'aglio tritato ed aggiusta di sale e pepe.

Guarnisci con il prezzemolo tritato e servi la zuppa calda e con delle fette di pane tostato per fare la scarpetta. Buon appetito!

Nanna & Babbonnonno

by John Christoforo

A Nostalgic Remembrance

As some of you know, I attended Boston English High School, the oldest public high school in the country. Someone is going to say, "Boston Latin is the oldest." My answer to them would be, "Latin is the oldest school in America (1630s), but English is the oldest public high school, opening its doors in 1821."

There is a group of individuals that surround my year of graduation and get together at least once per year for lunch or dinner just to reminisce about our days at English.

There is also another group that I'm involved with ... a group of English grads from various years who get together once per month at Florian Hall for lunch. More often than not, I'm the youngest of the crowd that gathers. We reminisce about our days at our alma mater, banter about the current events (especially political) that are topical, and complain about aches and pains.

Florian Hall's restaurant seems to be the lunch-time gathering place for many city workers ... police, firemen, teachers and folks from just about every department at city hall. Two of my classmates, John Sheehan and Paul Fitzgerald, both worked at Boston City Hall for over 40 years and, when they arrive at our monthly luncheon, they become celebrities and schmooze at almost every table in the place.

This month, we are off schedule. We normally meet on the first Tuesday of each month, but when July comes around, it's the second Tuesday. Well, this past Tuesday, I entered the restaurant part of Florian Hall and saw someone waving in my direction. It was Tony DeMarco, the former welter-weight champ of boxing. I looked at the members of his table and almost every male looked like a former fighter. As a matter of fact, the table looked like the back page of this newspaper. It seems that many retired pugilists from bygone days have similar monthly gatherings and this was one of them.

Tony and I spoke for a while, catching up on things. I hadn't seen him since around last Christmas and both of us had health issues we mentioned to one another. I said hello to Tony's wife and the rest of the members of his crowd. I then had to head to where I would be sitting to help set up the tables, as we never know how many alums are going to be there until they show up. Within the next 20 minutes, nine others showed up and we all greeted each other while selecting our seats at the English High table.

Once we had ordered, Tony came over to the table to ask me something and I introduced him to my crowd. A few of them had followed his career in boxing and were amazed at how he has stayed in such great shape. Once he left us, we began to eat our lunch selections and his table began to depart. One of the men came over to me and we spoke. We had never met but knew each other from my picture above my column and his picture quite often located in the boxing column on the back page. He, Mickey Finn, is the unofficial head of the group of retired fighters and it seemed that we knew many of the same people. My lunch got cold, but I didn't mind as we went on and on. When his lady friend finally dragged him away, I went back to my lunch with my friends, asking if there was anyone I didn't know. A couple of hours later, someone took a picture of us just before we ended our luncheon meeting and we headed off. On the way home, I began to think of the get togethers involving Babbonnonno or my father and Uncle Nick and Paul when I was just a kid.

Monday was meeting day for the members of the musician's union. The offices and meeting hall were then located on St. Botolph Street in Boston's Back Bay. From about 10:00 am until around 4:00 pm, musicians, band leaders, contractors, bookers and a few singers would hang around the meeting hall and look for future work. Each would have a date book and a pen and, if it was a busy time of the year, the work would be plentiful and the facts about each job could be written in the book.

On many occasions, I accompanied Babbonnonno, Uncle Paul and Dad to the union. Uncle Nick would already be there as he was the vice president for about 25 years and had an office located between the president and secretary-treasurer.

For the members of my family, these get togethers were as much social occasions as business. Babbonnonno would corner some of the old-timers, Italian musicians whom he had worked with in marching and concert bands from his youthful days as a new arrival to the United States. His was the crowd that played in parades on Boston holidays and in concert bands for Saints Day celebrations in the North End, East Boston, Cambridge, Revere and Providence, Rhode Island.

For Dad and my uncles, the work they booked wasn't necessarily Italian. They were trained to play all types of ethnic and American music. As a result they were capable of playing an Italian Christening, a Jewish wedding, a Yankee coming out party, a college dance or a Christmas party or two. You name it and they could play it. The union get together was as much a social gathering for Dad and my uncles as it was a work-booking event. Fortunately, they were among the best musicians in Boston and before the morning was over, their books would be filled with dates — jobs that could require them to play anything, anywhere. The rest of the time was for socializing, and they did so with the first generation of sons from families from all over the world.

The union is just a group of offices today and those weekly gatherings are long gone. Both Babbonnonno's and my father's generations are no longer with us, and the music scene is altogether different. But, as I said, my luncheon get together from last Tuesday reminded me, in a way, of those "old timers" meeting to talk about work, book in jobs and possibly head to the North End for lunch.

The funny part about my crowd this past week was that I was the youngest man there. We've lost a few of our unofficial members but, fortunately, most of the guys are still around to join in on these monthly lunches. Here's to those retired fighters, and the Boston English High alums, may we be getting together forever.

American textile manufacturers face additional obstacles, in the form of non-tariff barriers and lack of enforcement of intellectual property rights when they attempt to export their products.

With support in these critical areas of workforce development, trade law enforcement, tariff relief via the MTB, and international enforcement of intellectual property rights, the current trend of reshoring textile manufacturing jobs with continue and expand.

6. Where should you find your Pet? Prospective pet owners have several choices for adoption, including rescue groups, no-kill shelters or shelters that euthanize animals when the shelter runs out of space. Prospective pet owners should stay clear of breeders or pet stores to adopt a pet. The choice of shelter doesn't matter. It's the choice to rescue an animal that's important. Going to any shelter or rescue group will save a dog, period.

its 120 years of uninterrupted publication. We never missed an issue, even when the going was very hard.

The moral reward, over the years of hard work, came in many ways when American presidents, senators, congressmen, governors and other officials praised the work of the newspaper in times of war and peace. The newspaper had to fight vigorously against all forms of discrimination in employment and immigration laws, yet on the issue of loyalty and patriotism, there was never any question.

The Italian immigrants after a long period of confusion, which was often bewildering, accepted in full the American concept of school, church and state and have become part of this democratic society, bringing to it all the qualities the Italians always possessed as builders, dreamers, organizers, fighters, artists, inspired teachers and defenders of Italo-American ideals.

Throughout the United States and in Boston, especially where freedom began over 225 years ago, the GAZZETTA or the POST-GAZETTE has played a vital part in history.

Today, the University of Minnesota and the University of Florence in Italy have compiled all of our issues from the first to its current publication on micro-film for future generations, thereby recognizing the POST-GAZETTE's historical contribution to this country and the development of our unique culture to the people on these shores.

We continue to bring to our readers the incredible stories of Americans from coast-to-coast who are the “Builders of America.” We salute these great men and women who have made a unique contribution to our country and heritage.

idly reconstructing the short — lived career of Otis Redding against the striking panorama of a country seething with political and racial turmoil. A decade — long time that began in 1957 with the segregation of Little Rock schools and ended with the deaths of Redding, Martin Luther King, and Robert Kennedy. Redding's husky tunes ushered in a “New Frontier” for Southern soul music and, with it, a soundtrack to the civil rights movement. It was Redding's emotional performance of “Try a Little Tenderness” at the Monterey Pop Festival in the summer of 1967 that allowed soul to cross over on the music scene. Less than six months later, the voice of the son of a Macon, Georgia preacher was silenced at the much too young age of twenty — six! Just days earlier, Redding had recorded “(Sittin' On) the Dock of the Bay.” The success of the song, selling four million copies, earned him two Grammy Awards: ‘Best R&B Vocal Performance Male’ and ‘Best R&B Song.’ Ribowsky also details the dirty side of the music business and how Redding's success had breathed life into the small Stax Records label which, following Otis' death, managed to slip into bankruptcy in a few short years. In 1989 The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame inducted Redding as a name “synonymous with the term soul music.” Otis made excellent use of his short life, creating soul music gems. now assistant general managers with Pittsburgh.

One of Fitzgerald's duties is to monitor the progress of Penguin prospects at W-B/Scranton so you know that he and Sullivan will be talking quite a bit. Guerin, who won a Stanley Cup with Pittsburgh in 2009, also served as a player development coach with the Pens before being promoted. So he and Sullivan will also have a lot to talk about as well.

In addition, when Sullivan was on the coaching staff at Tampa Bay, former Bruin Mark Recchi was a player with the Lightning. Like Guerin before him, he's now a player development coach with the Pens organization. So there's another familiar face that Sullivan can count on.

And down on the bench, Sullivan will also have a former Bruins player as his right hand man since he has added Jay Leach to his coaching staff. Leach, who is 35, is fresh off a one-year stint as an assistant coach with Alder Mannheim, which won the Deutsche Eishockey Liga Championship this past spring.

A former Bruins captain, Leach was a four-year letterman at Providence College from 1997-2001 and was a co-captain of the Friars during his senior season.

During his 12-year career in the pros, he played with Springfield, Providence, Bridgeport, Norfolk, Portland, Lowell/Albany and Worcester, putting up 87 points 25 goals and 62 assists in 499 games with those AHL franchises. In the NHL, he played 70 games with Boston, Tampa Bay, New Jersey, Montreal and San Jose.

So, it's proud group of former B's now working for the Pens, making it interesting to see how things develop — both in Pittsburgh and W-B/Scranton — over the course of the coming season.

Is it Up to the Fighter to Decide When He Has Had Enough Punishment? The Collazo Thurman Controversy

For years, the decision to stop a fight was left in the hands of a few people: the referee, the attending physician, and the chief second in the corner. This doesn't mean a fighter wouldn't quit if he felt he had enough, Max Baer taking the count against Joe Louis is an example of this, but the boxer was not usually asked flat out if he wanted to quit. Referees would instead ask questions such as "Are you okay?", "How many fingers am I holding up?", "Can you see okay?" They would have the fighter take a few steps towards them to see how steady on their feet they were. If a cut was involved, they would have the doctor step into the ring to examine it and give an opinion. They would very rarely ask the boxer flat out if he wanted to quit, and there is a good reason for that. A fighter may know he has had enough, but saying so would bring into question his heart, though it shouldn't. What a good referee looked for is cues from the contestant. When answering one of the questions, the boxer might look down or not answer immediately. This was a signal to the official that the fighter has had enough without forcing him to publicly quit. It is a way for him to leave the ring with his pride intact. Things have now changed, and the recent Thurman Collazo bout is a prime example of this change.

Luis Collazo was brought into the ring as what is known in the game as an "opponent" for Keith Thurman. An opponent is usually an old veteran whose best days are behind him, but still has a decent enough record sprinkled with names of top fighters to make him look credible. He is expected to be able to stand up to the rising star, but is fully expected to lose. The opponent himself usually knows his role and is in the bout mostly for the payday.

As this bout began, everything seemed to be going according to the script. Collazo was moving about very tentatively, expecting Thurman to tear after him with power punches. It looked like just a matter of time before Keith would explode on the old veteran and end things. But something happened in there. Thurman seemed confused by his opponent's southpaw style. Thurman started moving backwards and staying away from Luis. After a few rounds passed, Collazo started getting a rhythm and picked up the pace. In the 5th round he started landing serious body punches on Thurman including one to the liver that almost floored the young prospect. Suddenly this bout was not going according to the script. When Thurman went back to the corner after the 5th round, he looked like a fighter in trouble. Body punches not only hurt, but they stay with you. You can recover from a head shot, but body shots take a lot out of you. "Kill the body and the head will die" is an old boxing expression.

Things became more interesting when Collazo was badly cut over his right eye. I am not sure when this happened, but the referee ruled it an accidental head butt, meaning that if the fight were to be stopped they would go to the judges' scorecards to determine the winner.

At the end of the 7th round, the doctor was examining the cut and asked Collazo if he wanted the fight to be stopped. Collazo said "I can't see," so the fight was called off. The officials ruled that, since Luis had said he couldn't see, he had quit and Thurman was automatically the winner. No scorecards necessary.

Things became more interesting when Teddy Atlas, who was doing commentary for the fight, accused Collazo of quitting. He compared what went on in this fight to what happened in the first Clay Liston fight when Clay wanted to quit because he couldn't see due to an astringent that had gotten into his eye. Angelo Dundee pushed Clay out for the next round and the rest is history. He strongly implied that Collazo should have pushed on as these things have a way of clearing up. Social media picked up on this with people posting comments about how Luis could have continued but instead chose to quit. Many also stated that the cut was under the eye, which is blatantly false. In fact, Collazo had two cuts OVER his right eye, and they were deep gashes. He never should have been asked if he wanted to continue. The doctor, the referee, or the corner should have waved the fight over, and the decision should have gone to the scorecards. Check out the photo I have included with this column to see just how bad these cuts were.

Teddy Atlas's criticism and the ridiculous media frenzy following this bout will only serve to make boxing more dangerous. Boxers and their seconds will be more reluctant to stop a fight. Publicly shaming a fighter for giving a doctor factual information will only serve to cause more injuries. We have these officials in there to see that the boxers are protected from serious harm. The fighter should not have the final say on whether the fight is stopped. Just think of the

HOOPS and HOCKEY in the HUB

by Richard Preiss

The sign on the door says Wilkes-Barre/Scranton Penguins, denoting the top minor league affiliate of the Pittsburgh Penguins. But it doesn't take much to make a P turn into a B — just add another loop at the bottom of the P.

Maybe they should consider doing since the number of former B's — as in Bruins — now working for the Penguins organization is quite impressive as thoughts turn toward the coming of the 2015-2016 American Hockey League and National Hockey League seasons.

One can start by noting that former Bruins Head Coach Mike Sullivan was recently appointed to the head coaching post with the W-B/Scranton team. For Sullivan, a Marshfield native and a former Boston University and Boston Bruins player, it will be a return to his earliest coaching days when he barked out orders from behind the bench in Providence — which was then, as now, a station stop for a number of future Boston Bruins players.

Mike wasn't in the Ocean State long — just 71 games — where he logged a 41-7-9-4 (.669) before getting called up to the big club as an assistant late in the 2002-2003 season. He was on the fast track and a rising star, as they say. Before that summer of 2003 had faded to Labor Day, Mike had received another promotion — to the head coaching job of the Boston Bruins — at age 35 no less.

Right out of the box his team was a success, compiling a 41-19-15-7 (.634) record while winning a Northeast Division Championship, this in the era when the B's were not the powerful Stanley Cup team they would become less than a decade later. A second season did not go well and Mike, like many other coaches caught in the Bruins revolving door policy of the time, was let go. By contrast, current coach Claude Julien will be entering his ninth season behind the bench on Causeway Street this fall.

But Sullivan quickly found work — as an NHL assistant coach with various teams over the course of a seven-season span. Initially, it was two years with Tampa Bay, followed by four with the New York Rangers and one season with Vancouver — being appointed just months after another former Bruins head coach was let go from an assistant's position with the Canucks. That would be Rick Bowness, who was the last man to coach the B's to the Conference Finals (back in the 1991-1992 season) before the Black and Gold won the Stanley Cup in 2011.

Last season, Sullivan was a member of the Chicago Blackhawks development staff where he worked primarily with Chicago's forward prospects.

In a way, Sullivan's coaching career would mirror his playing years when he played with four teams — San Jose, Calgary, Boston and Arizona — over the course of 11 seasons. When he retired Sullivan, a former team captain at Boston University under legendary coach Jack Parker, had put up 54 goals and 136 points in 709 NHL contests. On many occasions, Mike didn't need all of his teammates — some 16 of those 54 goals were shorthanded ones.

Sullivan won't lack for familiar faces in the Pens organization. During his second year on Causeway Street he coached Tom Fitzgerald and Bill Guerin. Both are
