Adolescents vs. Adults

Recently, I read a press release from advocates concerned about the prison/jail population of 16-25-year olders. This group believes that this age group should be considered not adults by the prison system so they would not have a record upon release.

However, at the same time, U.S. Rep. Ayanna Pressley is pushing to allow 16 year olders to vote in federal elections. What gives here? Commit a crime and they call you a juvenile up to age 25 but when it comes to voting, treat these same folks as adult enough to vote. Can't have it both ways. Sixteen is too young to vote period.

Now it's Bribery?

The Democrats were hell bent on getting the president on his "quid pro quo" but when that was selling with the American public, Speaker Nancy Pelosi said "It's all about bribery which is even a better impeachable crime." You know, the reason quid pro quo was selling is that members of Congress have no understanding of Latin. Many of them weren't altar boys as kids. All that term means is giving something for something else. Not a crime. When bribery falters what will they come up with? This whole thing is a sham and Trump will get re-elected because the Democrats continue to be The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight without actor Robert Mitchum at the helm.

What's Up with the Democrats

What is their end game? They all know the U.S. Senate will not convict President Trump after the House impeaches him. The President will not be removed from office. So what is with all this drama from the likes of U.S. Rep. Adam Schiff? It began the moment Trump was declared the winner of the 2016 election.

Liberal and progressive Democrats are too far gone to step back now. What are they going to do when nothing happens to Trump? Why they are doing this seems clear to me. They want to hurt his credibility so a Democrat could beat him in 2020. Trouble is, most voters are seeing through this partisan sham of theirs. Prediction: President Trump wins a second term and the haters continue their hatred another four years because they can't do anything else.

Are We Living In George Orwell's 1984 Today?

George Orwell's 1984 wasn't an instruction manual and yet, nearly half of adult Americans are currently in a law enforcement facial recognition database. Facial recognition technology is fundamentally biased, and misidentifies women and people of color at disproportion-

Veterans Day Remembrance

VFW Post 144 is celebrating its 98th year as part of the U.S. Veterans of Foreign Wars. In 1921, North End WWI Veterans formed VFW Post 144. Since then, the Post has continued to honor and remember North End veterans from WWI, WWII, Korea, Vietnam, and the more recent conflicts.

VFW Post 144 members conduct a remembrance ceremony in the Pardo to honor North End, and all veterans on Veterans Day and Memorial Day.

As part of the North End and Boston community, VFW Post 144 provides support to "Local Veterans Services" and charitable contributions to "North End Community Organizations."

Paul Spera, Past National VFW Commander, currently serves as VFW Post 144 Quartermaster.

Saint Melchior Grodziecki

by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari

Melchior Grodziecki was born in 1584 in Cieszyn. He was born into the noble Grodziecki family. At the beginning of the 16th century his ancestors moved to the Duchy of Cieszyn and settled in the castle in Grodziec. His grandfather and father were castellans of Cieszyn.

Melchior received his education in the Jesuit college of Vienna. In 1603, he entered the Jesuit novitiate of Brno. After making his first religious profession in 1605, he went on to the Jesuit College in Kłodzko

To be able to teach in high schools, he spent a year in the seminary in České Budějovice. In 1608, he returned to Kłodzko to complete his education in music. He graduated from philosophy and theology in the Clementinum of Prague and in 1614 was ordained a priest. From 1616, he was entrusted with the management of a hostel in Prague for poor students and also became a youth educator. After his solemn vows in 1619, the Order directed him to Košice, where he became chaplain of the imperial army. Apart from him, two other Jesuits — the Hungarian, Stefan Pongracz and the Croatian, Marek Križ - canon of the Cathedral of the Primate of Hungary in Ostrzyhom - also fulfilled this mission.

When the army of the Prince of Transylvania, George Rákóczi, took Kassa, Melchior stayed at the castle, together with István Pongrácz and canon Marko Krizin. On September 7, 1619, the Transylvanian army stormed the castle and arrested the priests. They gave them a death sentence on charges of treason;

Introducing a new book by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari, lifelong residents of the North End, entitled:

Four Women "Quattro Donne" subtitle, A North End Love Story

In the next few weeks this column will feature excerpts from this book.

Pietro was to spend the summer at our flat. We were already cramped, five of us living in a tiny apartment with one and a half bedrooms, but we did have a cot that could be set up in the living room, sharing the room with Bobby and Charlie. To welcome Pietro, Mom decided to re-wallpaper the living room, something she had done every three to four years. She got in touch with Mr. Levine, the wallpaper hanger Mom used who lived in the West End, choosing a floral paper from among his samples. Mr. Levine returned a week later with rolls of wallpaper sticking out of an old baby carriage he used to transport his supplies. After stripping the old wallpaper, he filled the cracks and crevices of our damaged walls with newspaper, gluing it flat, before wallpapering. Once done, it was cup of coffee, a bit of conversation, and Mr. Levine, pushing his baby carriage, was off to his next

"Roberto and Carlo, I will be your guest this summer," Pietro said on the first night of his stay with us. We were happy to have him share our room, and we let it be known by tossing our pillows at him, the moment he jumped onto his cot. In time, Pietro became like another brother to us. Mom, who was full of fun, only separated in age from Pietro by little more than a decade, became more his sister than cousin.

Chapter 7: A Great Catch

Pietro was quite busy that first week. Since he was planning to enter seminary in the fall, he contacted Father Francesco, our pastor, as advised by his pastor in Rome, seeking his spiritual guidance while in Boston. Wanting to blend in, he found his way to Filene's Basement where he augmented his hand-made Italian clothes with khaki pants and sneakers. The change of dress almost, but not quite, pulled off the transformation. Pietro had the look and bearing a change of clothes can't disguise, and new money can't buy. He was an aristocrat with the bearing and manners of old money. His world was one of privilege. In Rome, you would seldom see his family on the street or have occasion to run into them in everyday life. He mixed in circles defined by class and his was one of the most exclusive. It was a world of walled villas and glittering salons, where a renowned family name opened doors that new money could never achieve. Pietro spent most of his early teen years at a Swiss boarding school where he rode out the war. It was there he learned to speak English with a charming Italian accent, and further refined his comportment to a classy demeanor, little concealed by his newly acquired American clothes.

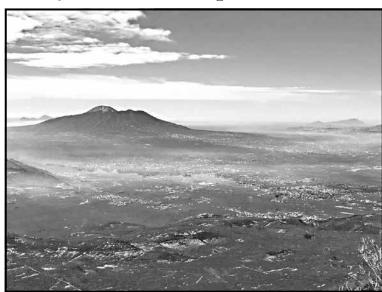

There is a saying, if you sit at one of the outdoor cafes along Rome's Via Veneto, you will eventually see the entire world pass by. So it was with the North End's Hanover Street of 1949, where the favorite pastime was to pull up a chair at any of its sidewalk cafes, order an espresso, and watch the constant flow of North Enders interspersed with an occasional intrepid tourist. It would not be long before you were joined by a friend.

Bitter Chicory to Sweet Espresso

After 32 years teaching physics at a university in Boston, author Carmine Vittoria, a local professor, turned a page over in his career to write a nonscientific book that he always wanted to write. The title of the book, Bitter Chicory to Sweet Espresso, is a metaphor for the hard and better times of WWII in the Naples area.

Why write a book that covers the years from 1940 to 1949 in Italy when there are at least a thousand books describing every imaginable aspects of that period of time? Usually books about WWII are presented from the perspective of an adult, whereby general topics such as war strategies, number of casualties, devastation and territories occupied are written about. These topics in themselves are important in understanding general events of WWII and how it impacted society. The point is that the description of this period has always been from a window seen by an adult, but rarely from a child's perspective. Ordinary people in society are usually presented in previous books as being separate entities from strategies of war, with no linkage to war or decision makers. That perspective is much too narrow a view to present, especially when wars are waged on lands where casualties to local adults and children are unavoidable. As such, the full story of WWII taking place in the Naples area has yet to be told. This human and military story is being told from what a child saw and heard then in the town of Avella.

Avella sits at a critical junction point on the slopes of the Apennine Mountains near Naples. From the surrounding mountains Via Appia, the old Roman road, Bay of Naples, Vesuvius and the coastline along the Tyrrhenian Sea are visible on a clear day.

Monte Avella overlooks the order of things in nature from above it all and her strong icy blast of winds reveals her mood and seasons. Fields of red poppies, chicory flowers, lavender violets, white and pink daisies, and wild dandelions adorn the farms and foothills of Avella in the spring, much like Monet's landscape paintings. The flowers remind farmers and shepherds it is time to prepare for the next crop and remove the thick wool coats on sheep. Since ancient Roman times, Hazelnuts and olives from here have been exported to every corner of the world. The mountains have protected the people in the valleys below from invading armies for centuries. They were a source of food and a symbol of inspiration to resist or survive foreign invasions. For over 3,000 years invading armies have come and gone in the town of Avella. The town has adapted and survived through all these invasions in the past as well as WWII. Depending on which army was in town, different shades of misery came with them. Dante Alighieri's Divine Comedy described imaginary atrocities during travels from purgatory to hell; journeys in Avella from purgatory to hell were of this earth and the atrocities were real.

L'Anno Bello: A Year in Italian Folklore

The Special Ingredients of Thanksgiving

by Ally Di Censo Symynkywicz

As November curls its golden glow around us, my mind wanders to images of Thanksgiving, as vivid and fragrant as a perfectly seasoned stuffing. I think of pale sunlight painting patterns on the floor, shining through the last orange leaves which stubbornly cling to otherwise bare branches. Memories of relatives bustling through a crowded kitchen carrying plates of steaming food fill me with the warmth of a hug, especially when I smile as I remember the peals of laughter ringing throughout the house. The buzz of cheering crowds emanates from the sound of the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade on television, occasionally interrupted by commercials featuring jingle bells and Santa's robust ho-ho-ho. Most of all, however, I can taste the explosion of flavors in my mouth from our delectable Thanksgiving dishes: creamy sweet potato, tart cranberries, a velvety pumpkin cheesecake. Thanksgiving remains one of my favorite holidays because it celebrates the very essence of togetherness, reveling in the pleasures of the home and hearth. My family's Thanksgiving combines Italian and American customs, resulting in a feast that honors the universality of love and family.

Food has always been an invaluable staple of Italian culture, and as such my family views Thanksgiving as the epitome of the primordial desire to share a meal. Every item on abundant amount of thought and care - yes, even my vegetarian Tofurkey, replete with its own gravy and wild rice stuffing. I always eagerly await my mother's sweet potato casserole, warm with autumnal spices and topped with a crunchy streusel of brown sugar and pecans. I contribute my fresh New England-style salad made with crisp apples, blue cheese and cranberries, as well as a pumpkin cheesecake with a seasonally appropriate gingersnap crust. My father-in-law provides a pecan pie with a silky chocolate bottom, while my grandmother would make heaping bowls of spaghetti homemade on an ancient hand-cranked utensil known caked with flour. No matter the food on the table, however, whether Italian or American, what proves most important is that we honor the bountiful harvest of the Earth. Thanksgiving occurs at the point of the year after the gathering of the harvest and withering away of vegetation; as such, it beckons us to enjoy the cozy warmth of family and friends, forming a barrier against the encroaching dark, cold winter. This symbolic connotation compels me to believe that Thanksgiving should never be celebrated alone but rather with others in a celebratory atmosphere, sharing in communal feasting and unending love of family. The more the merrier on this most ritual of holidays!

Indeed, communal food-based festivals similar to Thanksgiving dot the Italian calendar during the autumn and winter. The most famous of these, St. Martin's Day, occurred this past week on November 11th, when Italian villages gathered for banquets featuring chestnuts, goose, and the year's new wine. Now that the Christmas season quickly approaches, Italians are busy in the kitchens or markets preparing delectable meals for the holiday gatherings and various saints' days that pepper the months of November and December. These ritualistic celebrations and meals tap into the powerful desire not only to share strength and sustenance with the community, but also to maintain an irrevocable connection to the traditions of the past. According to Italian-American author Helen Barolini in her book Festa, the most significant part of sharing food is the ritual behind it, the repeated customs and motifs that link it to larger, universal themes. Whenever I gather for a Thanksgiving feast, I sense a special kinship with my Italian ancestors of yore, who also congregated around a family table on cool, blustery days to pay homage to the last bounty the Earth bestowed on them before settling for its long winter nap. A tradition does not have to be intricate and fancy to remind us of our subconscious desires for love, gratitude and hope. For example, my husband and I sometimes go out for sushi the day after Thanksgiving, a way of eating a light meal to counterbalance the excesses of the day before and to eschew the rampant commercialism of Black Friday. Honoring our

Remembering Why We March On Veterans Day

On November 11th, I marched in the Quincy's Veterans Day parade. The parade was pretty large and well attended by marching bands, veterans (young and old), and elected officials, etc. The streets were lined with spectators cheering on all those who have served their country when called. I want to thank the Quincy veterans who put on this annual salute to veterans and to the City of Quincy for making it one of the best Veterans Day parades in Massachusetts year after year.

Following this parade, I ended up in Boston, watching the Capital City's annual Veterans Day Parade. I was a bit sad and angry to see how few people were lining the streets and cheering on all the veterans in the line of march. When I was a kid growing up in Boston, this parade was one of the biggest every year. Today, it's a mere shadow of past glory days. Where has everyone gone? Have they forgotten why these parades are held? Do they understand the courage those who marched? Soldiers who risked all for us today. We didn't know their names and they didn't know ours, but this parade brings all of us together as Americans.

I marched in the 2017 and 2018 Veterans Day parades in Austin, TX. Both very long and impressive parades. Crowds were lining both sides of Congress Avenue starting at Lady Bird Lake and ending at the steps of the State Capitol. Oh, and the temps were a beautiful 69-71 degrees, which is kind of cold down there, but heaven for a Boston cowboy like me.

I found something worth repeating from an anonymous writer, "You always have two choices when you wake up; wake up and sleep again, and continue dreaming; or wake up and stand up, and make your dreams come true."

I am writing this commentary on November 14th. Fifty-three years ago, I enlisted in the United State Air Force right out of high school. I was an 18 years old from Roxbury, who thought service to my country was the honorable thing to do. I never hesitated. I am an American and this is what Americans do, I never regretted joining the service. This is why I continue to march today and will do so until I can no longer march. I do hope to see more folks lining the streets of the parade route and cheering us on.

Simple TIMES . . .

by Girard A. Plante

During this month of the Holy Souls, Catholics honor loved ones gone before us, especially remembering the brave souls who served America's military.

The Post-Gazette's Owner/ Publisher Pamela Donnaruma offered me the opportunity to write this column in November 2003. She allowed me to create a name for the column. And she instructed me to write about community-based issues and human-interest anecdotes. but to stray from criticizing President George W. Bush as the aftermath of 9/11 began to take shape. War in Iraq seemed inevitable. More loss of life brought dread. Thoughts of another Vietnam War struck everybody old enough to live through it or remember its 14-year nightmare.

So I decided that my column's name reflected a better time of our collective lives. My many chosen stories about people, places, and things would receive a comforting look-back. Simpler times meant people unified for a cause that ultimately brought some semblance of normalcy, free from mayhem and chaos, and disruption in peoples' daily routines no matter the nation's challenges and difficulties.

I spiced my columns with various types of people from American history-makers who resided in Boston to citizens who fought in WWI, WWII, and the Vietnam War. The veterans were people I knew from childhood and since moving to Newton two decades ago. The WWI veteran was an immigrant from Italy, Joe Mazza, whom I grew up next door to in my hometown during the 1960s and '70s. Newton's Armando Rossi served in the Navy in WWII. And my longtime vocational rehabilitation counselor in New York, George Pfaff, was severely injured protecting his Army platoon of 25 soldiers in DaNang in 1967.

A host of vital communitywide issues impacting peoples' lives such as homelessness to shuttering decades-old stores and restaurants and uncertain changes as Boston's older neighborhoods began confronting soaring rents threatened to push people out of their decades-old living spaces.

These stories and many more have kept this column a comforting reminder and passionate perch for me to relive with readers.

It is difficult to stay silent about the political climate swirling about our nation's capital since I began this column. The Iraq War had begun in 2003. Yet I stayed true to my column's name and Pam's directive. While I was given latitude to write on virtually any issue, I preferred its easygoing flow of principles I hold dear to a blessed upbringing surrounded by wonderful kinfolk, their friends, our neighbors and my longtime friends.

The past 16 years have witnessed many personal losses of loved ones, particularly the past 26 months as my eldest brother and three elder cousins, all born within a few years of each other. They represent the largest human loss my family and cousins have experienced in such a short span. This is a primary factor as to my column's missing published deadlines the past several months. A concerned e-mail from a caring Post-Gazette staffer last week pushed me to get beyond a sort of writer's block. For that kind gesture, I am refreshed and happily return to writing this column anew!

Through the rough journey of life my impenetrable faith has proven immensely beneficial. As the two years have moved along, I realize the abundant blessings and rich life bestowed upon me. We humans reflect on loved ones gone before us mostly during Holiday season.

Autumn presents its shorter dark days as we prepare for the winter season. Some people fall into a deep depression during this time. Yet I am keenly aware that the dark days never last long as the timeless lurch towards light begins again after the Feast of the Immaculate Conception on December 8th.

Blessings come from the loved ones whose wisdom carried beyond tough times. Spiritual readings such as "My Changeless Friend" by Fr. Charles F. Dolan, a Jesuit priest I grew up around with my six siblings and many cousins, offers hope to plow through the stuck stage and "Get above the clouds" to "see the light of hope, promise and salvation," Fr. Charlie Dolan offers.

I am happily surprised when certain people have thanked me for helping them move beyond their own dark moments caused by life's painful events. Never realizing my support is a source of uplifting help, I recognize then my faith working in othremember.

Happy Thanksgiving!

As this month of Remembrance wanes a somber pall hangs over our nation as uncertainty daily meets us. Veterans Day signifies the pain of lost young men and women barely enjoying life as war's evils cut them down. The solemn event remains as racially motivated. within the very being of veterans despite 75 years after a battle in WWII or 50 years removed from a tour in Vietnam or 15 years out of Iraq. It's okay to

ately higher rates. Such flawed and discriminatory technology has no place in our society, and certainly not in our criminal legal system. We need your support today to help prevent the use of facial recognition in our communities.

Residents of our communities shouldn't be under constant threat of being monitored by the government. It's unconstitutional, and only worsens existing disparities in our criminal injustice system. That's why U.S. Rep. Ayanna Pressley recently co-introduced a piece of legislation to ban facial recognition surveillance in our public life. I remember reading Orwell's 1984 from high school, then read it again in college and every so often even up to the present moment. Back in high school I thought it could never happen in America but today I have noticed more and more people seem okay with this benign surveillance because too many of us have fallen for that line from government. As Ben Franklin often stated, "Those who are willing to give up their liberty for security, deserve neither.'

Stephen Wilson is Out At the Charter School He Founded

Educator Stephen Wilson founded Ascend Charter School in Brooklyn a number of years ago and it produced such good results; it now has a number of addition campuses educating mostly Black and Latino students.

However, recently, he wrote on a blog certain ideas not viewed positively by social-justice educators and he was fired from the school he founded for being politically incorrect. What horrible thing did he blog about? How about objectivity when writing ideas down? How about urging students to read the classics. That was considered a mortal sin by those who see everything

None of his critics even seem to notice that students at his charter school were succeeding on national tests and actually learning how to be future leaders of this country. All they saw was a guy with a mind of his own who didn't take his marching orders from these liberal elitist.

Stephen Wilson is just another victim of this new mentality that they know better than you or I of a guy named Wilson.

VNA Care hosted its 14th Annual "Heroes in Health Care" awards gala at the Mandarin Oriental on Saturday, November 2nd, raising a record $325,000 to benefit the Visiting Nurse Association's Nursing Services

This year's honorees were Dr. Tony Coles of Cerevel Therapeutics and Yumanity Therapeutics, Dr. Steven Strongwater of Atrius Health, and Patricia Joyce, RN. Joyce is the first VNA Care clinician to receive a "Heroes in Health Care" award.

Attending this year's gala was Mayor Walsh, who shared the impact VNA Care had on his family as his father's health declined nine years ago.

"What we experienced was love and compassion as a family," said Mayor Walsh. His father was able to remain at home throughout his illness and die peacefully, surrounded by loved ones with the support of VNA Care. Mayor Walsh thanked the nonprofit on behalf of his family and the City of Boston for more than 130 years of caring for the community. He said, "People can take comfort in knowing their loved ones are getting the compassionate, the quality, the incredible care that they receive the from visiting nurse."

The annual Boston gala is VNA Care's signature fundraising event and has raised millions in essential funding for home health and hospice care in Massachusetts.

VNA Care has a 133-year history of providing health care in patients' homes and the community. VNA Care provides a comprehensive range of home health, palliative, and hospice care in more than 200 Eastern and Central Massachusetts communities.

Thanksgiving Tips for You and Your Pet

Thanksgiving Safety Tips

Thanksgiving is a time for friends, family and holiday feasts but also a time for possible distress for our animal companions. Pets won't be so thankful if they munch on undercooked turkey or a pet-unfriendly floral arrangement, or if they stumble upon an unattended alcoholic drink.

Check out the following tips for a fulfilling Thanksgiving that your pets can enjoy, too:

TALKIN' TURKEY: If you decide to feed your pet a small bite of turkey, make sure it's boneless and well-cooked. Don't offer her or him raw or undercooked turkey, which may contain salmonella bacteria. Do not give your pet the left over carcass-the bones can be problematic for the digestive tract.

NO BREAD DOUGH: Don't spoil your pet's holiday by giving him access to raw yeast bread dough. When a dog or cat ingests raw bread dough, the yeast continues to convert the sugars in the dough to carbon dioxide gas and alcohol. This can result in bloated drunken pets, which could become a life-threatening emergency, requiring hospitalization.

A FEAST FIT FOR A KING: While your family enjoys a special meal, give your cat and dog a small feast of their own. Offer them made-for-pets chew bones. Or stuff their usual dinner-perhaps with a few added tidbits of turkey, vegetables (try sweet potato or green beans) and dribbles of gravy inside a food puzzle toy. They'll be happily occupied for a while, working hard to extract their dinner from the toy.

A few small boneless pieces of cooked turkey, a taste of mashed potato or even a lick of pumpkin pie shouldn't pose a problem. However, don't allow your pets to overindulge, as they could wind up with a case of stomach upset, diarrhea or even worse an inflammatory condition of the pancreas known as pancreatitis. In fact, its best keep pets on their regular diets during the holidays.

Be kind to your pet sharing is okay but don't overdo it! ... It's all about Unconditional Love'

Things to consider before boarding your pets:

- BEFORE you make your reservation, and you will need one ASAP. If you're traveling over Thanksgiving & Christmas holidays; ask to see the kennel/ cattery BEFORE dropping off your pet!
- Be sure the facility has an emergency policy in the event of a medical emergency, power outage or other disaster. In writing give the facility agent your Veterinarian's phone number along with a back up phone number of a family member or friend, that can make a critical decision in your absence.
- Air conditioning is a MUST if your pet is boarding during our summers! Barn facilities transformed into boarding kennels do not commonly have A/C.

- · Look for a medium or small facility that has a good ratio of staff to animals. Often if you are a regular client at a veterinary clinic many do board, i.e. Angell Memorial Animal Hospital/ commonly know as the MSPCA in Boston.
- Ask how & where your dog will be exercised. In other words will dogs be grouped together? If your dog is not usually exercised with other dogs; can you choose individual exercise.
- Does this facility insist that all dogs be up to date on vaccinations?
- · Can you make special requests if your pet happens to be on special food or medication.
- If the facility boards both dogs and cats, can you be assured that your cat will be separated from the noise of barking dogs?
- Bring a familiar toy, bowl and perhaps a favorite blanket.
- Last but certainly not least, BE SURE TO NOTIFY YOUR VET that "Snoopy" or "Mittens" will be boarding at

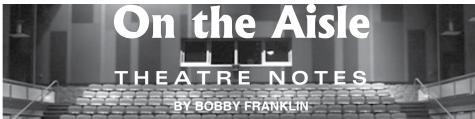

Give them the name and phone number of the boarding

An All-Star Cast to Perform in the Ogunquit Playhouse Holiday Production of

at The Music Hall in Portsmouth, New Hampshire

The Music Hall and Ogunquit Playhouse are thrilled to announce the cast and creative team of the beloved musical Annie, on stage November 27th through December 22nd at The Music Hall in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. The Music Hall is located at The Historic

The Ogunquit Playhouse production is helmed by Broadway Director/Choreographer James A. Rocco. Leading the all-star cast are Josie Todd as Annie, Emmy nominee Robert Newman as Oliver Warbucks, Golden Globe and Emmy winner Sally Struthers as Miss Hannigan, and Broadway veterans Angie Schworer as Lily St. Regis, Jeffry Denman as Rooster Hannigan, and Gail Bennett as Grace Farrell.

Starring as the lead character Annie is Josie Todd who is making her Ogunquit Playhouse debut. She recently performed in Because of Winn Dixie at Goodspeed Musicals and Annie at Casa Mañana. Her many theatre roles include Beauty and the Beast as Chip, The Music Man as Gracie Shinn, The Best Christmas Pageant Ever as Maxine, and Freaky Friday, Jr. as Monica.

Joining the cast as Oliver Warbucks is Robert Newman who is perhaps best known for his 28year run as Joshua Lewis on the longest running program in broadcasting history, Guiding Light (which he also directed).

Sally Struthers returns to the seacoast to reprise her role as Miss Hannigan. Ms. Struthers is a two-time Emmy Award and Golden Globe Award winner for her performance in the groundbreaking TV series All in the Family.

Ogunquit Playhouse is thrilled to welcome Gail Bennett back to the stage in the role of Grace Farrell. Ms. Bennett has performed in the Ogunquit productions of My Fair Lady as Eliza Doolittle opposite Jefferson Mays, The Sound of Music as Maria opposite Rex Smith, and as the title role in Mary Poppins on both the Ogunquit and The Music Hall stages.

Joining the cast as Rooster is Jeffry Denman who has performed, directed, and choreographed at Ogunquit Playhouse. He returns to the seacoast after directing/choreographing the highly acclaimed Ogunquit Playhouse 2018 production of An American in Paris, for which he won an IRNE award as Best Choreographer.

Rescue dog, Macy, will be playing Sandy. Macy was adopted by guardian and trainer Bill Berloni from Rocky Spot Rescue of Oklahoma City, OK in December of 2009 at the age of 18 months after seeing her on Petfinder.com. Sandy's first production of Annie was in the summer of 2010 and since she has starred in dozens of productions nationwide. On Thanksgiving Day 2011, she was seen on NBC during The National Dog Show, sharing spots with John O'Hurley.

Bill Berloni is the top recognized trainer for theatrical animals in the U.S. He received a Tony Award for Excellence in Theatre in 2011, honoring his 30 years of rescuing shelter dogs and humanely training them for a career in the entertainment industry. He is also the recipient of 2014 Outer Critics Circle Special Achievement Award and the 2017 Drama League Award for Unique Contribution to the Theater. Bill Berloni's animals have appeared in hundreds of Broadway, Off-Broadway and regional theatre productions, tours, movies and television shows all starting with Annie in 1977.

Greater Boston Stage Company Rings in the Holidays With

MIRACLE ON 34TH STREET

Greater Boston Stage Company cheerfully presents Miracle on 34th Street — based on the much-loved motion picture from Twentieth Century Fox. Directed by Associate Artistic Director, Ilyse Robbins, Miracle on 34th Street reminds us that if you really believe, anything can happen. Performances run November 29th through December 22nd

"The Miracle of 34th street is that people learn to believe - both in oneself and in the kindness of others. It is about faith. Not necessarily in the religious sense, but rather faith in what is possible," shares Robbins. She continues, "Stories about kindness and goodness are needed now more than ever. There is such importance simply in the telling of stories like these."

The cast features Barlow Adamson, Juliet Bowler, Margaret Ann Brady, Sara Coombs, William Gardiner, Sarah Gazdowicz, Arthur Gomez, Jade Guerra, Michael Jennings Mahoney, David Jiles, Jr., Gary Thomas Ng and Emme Shaw. As part of The Young Company Meets Mainstage program, the cast also includes Young Company actors Mia Galego, Shea Killeen, Graham Layton, Addison McWayne, Gwendolyn Symes, Norah Symes and Young Company Alum Stephen Zubricki IV, making his GBSC Mainstage

Miracle on 34th Street celebrates the season by taking us to Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in the 1940s where Kris Kringle steps in as a last-minute replacement. When he claims to be the true Santa Claus, he needs to convince the doubters, including a little girl longing to find something to believe in. Greater Boston Stage Company is dedicated to fostering an inclusive and accessible environment for all. A sensory-friendly performance of Miracle on 34th Street will be offered on December 21, 2019 at 2:00 p.m. The sensory-friendly production will be a performance dedicated to creating a more welcoming space for individuals with sensory-input disorders. There will be modifications throughout the theatre that create a friendly and supportive environment, encouraging patrons to experience the magic of theatre in their own way. Families, friends and caregivers of individuals with sensoryinput disorders are also encouraged to attend. Please visit https://www.greaterbostonstage.org/ sensory_friendly.html for more information.

Recently, Father Tom DiLorenzo from Holy Rosary Parish in Winthrop celebrated Mass for his 40th anniversary to the priesthood. The pews were packed and a testimony for all that he does for the people he has served over his 40 years as a priest. Following the Mass over 250 folks gathered at the Cottage Park Yacht Club for dinner with more memories to be made.

"X" MARKS THE SPOT FOR MA RMV

The Registry of Motor Vehicles has given Massachusetts drivers a third gender option for people who don't identify as either male of female. The agency is still knee-deep in a records keeping scandal which involved a failure to keep up with license suspensions from out of state and led to the deaths of seven people in the month of June alone.

Perhaps, the RMV should be spending more time checking licenses and less time being politically correct.

HARVARD STUDENTS SIMPLY DON'T UNDERSTAND FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND PRESS

Harvard University's student government is backing anti-ICE protesters who are boycotting the campus newspaper (Harvard Crimson) after reporters followed basic tenents of journalism and asked U.S. Immigration and Enforcement for a comment on the campus and anti-ICE activities.

The newspaper covered an Anti-ICE rally on campus and simply called ICE for its reaction. Apparently students in Harvard Yard don't believe in free speech of the free press unless the free press agrees with them. This is the future of America? God help us all!

BAY STATE DRIVERS COULD BE FACING TWO GAS PUMP HIKES

For policy makers juggling two crises (what are the two?), the state's gas pumps could ultimately provide a ripe resource to help fund Massachusetts transportation needs and its fight against climate change. But that shared interest has created another possibility: Motorists could actually absorb not one, but two types of increases in gas prices to help pay for it all. While the Beacon Hill considers a hike to the gas tax as part of a transportation financing package, Governor Charlie Baker has for months pursued a separate, multistate effort to curb greenhouse gas emissions that his administration acknowledges also will likely increase gas prices, perhaps by as early as 2022.

The state tried raising the gas tax hike a few years back but Bay Staters took them on and defeated that tax hike and they can do it again with this twofer coming up.

Nanna Babbononno

by John Christoforo

A Nostalgic Remembrance

For most of my life, I thought I was indestructible. I always knew I took after Babbononno, who was never sick a day in his life and made it to age 99. Well, I was wrong.

My problems began about six years ago, when I began losing hearing in my right ear. I started listening to the phone with my left ear, and that worked to my satisfaction. I blamed the situation on many loud drummers I had worked with over the years as a musician and just let the loss of hearing go as an occupational hazard.

Due to Loretta constantly pushing me, I made an appointment with a hospital-based hearing specialist. Prior to this, I tried every hearing aid money could buy from the cheap ones found in drug stores to the sophisticated electronic devices that cost thousands. Nothing worked.

One of the heads of the Department of Otology at Mass Eye and Ear examined me and sent me for an MRI. The results showed that I had a brain tumor on the right side of my head between the right ear and my brain. It was non-cancerous (thank God) but it had to be removed surgically. Mass Eye and Ear continued to check the progress of its growth, and sure enough, the mass continued to grow. The next step was to select a neurological team to do the operation. I researched the names of the best possible choices and came up with Frederick Barker from Mass General. After discussing him with several friends who are in medicine, I knew I made the right choice.

On October the 16^{th} , 2013, the surgical team was ready for me early in the morning. Loretta, both sons, John and Michael, and my son John's fiancée (now his wife, Beth) were all there for moral support. I don't ever remember going under from that point on. I guess that was a blessing because, as I now understand it, they had a hard time ... nothing knocked me out. They had to give me quadruple the dosage two or three times to finally get me under. Finally, I was out cold and the neurosurgical team operated for the next 8-9 hours removing the tumor. I woke up in an intensive care unit unable to swallow, had sever muscle cramps in my neck and throbbing pain across my forehead. I was totally out of it, screaming for help, aspirins and something to drink. If they had shown me how to use the signaling device, I wasn't aware of it, but I sure made enough noise for them to keep me comfortable and quiet. The next day, they sent me home. I thought it was a bit premature, but they insisted.

Once home, I had a problem that had to be addressed. It seems that with these tumor operations, they take a piece of fat tissue to fill in the spaces where the tumors had been. With about maybe 10% of the cases spinal fluid runs into the brain and ear canals and I got caught in that 10%. This can be dangerous as it could cause spinal meningitis and it had to be corrected. This time, I headed to Mass Eye and Ear and the same medical team was ready to solve the problem. After about a three-hour operation the leaks were stopped. The only problem was they had to give me three spinal taps to finalize things. That wasn't fun. The next thing I knew, my heart was fluttering and in came a team of cardiologists to equalize everything. Well, this time I stayed in the hospital for about a week or so in order that the teams could observe me each day, each team making suggestions and prescribing meds that would get me back to normal.

Thanksgiving was approaching and I had taken time off from my teaching schedule. The only task I allowed myself was this column and I wrote it from my bedside.

What I didn't realize until all of this happened was the amount or friends I had made over the years. Close friends were by my side non-stop. Several people had put prayer group's together and formed vigils for me to rely upon. After the first surgery, a Priest came to visit and put me at ease. Twice after that, Eucharistic ministers dropped by with Communion.

Relatives began calling from all over the country to check on me and if one more Edible Arrangement arrived, I could have opened my own fruit store. To top it all off, my wife had taken a short leave of absence from her job and had been constantly next to me assisting me with whatever my needs were and eventually told me that I could be a pain in the butt.

Once I was back home, each day, several people arrived from various levels of home health care. The most important was the nurse who gave me my daily intravenous meds. She was there on a daily basis for a few weeks until I didn't need meds on a strict and scheduled time frame any longer.

Lots of things were happening within the family while I was going through my recovery. My son, John, and his fiancée, Beth, decided to get married and John bought a house in the suburbs. I really liked Beth and she has become part of the family with no effort at all. I wished I could have been more a part of the process with their real estate, but considering what's been going on, I just observed the transaction and saw my son handle things rather professionally.

As I said, that was October of 2013, and since then, John and Beth married and are now the parents of my first grandchild, Lina. I have to brag, she's now three, petite, but her IQ is off the scale.

As we speak, we are planning on who is doing what for Thanksgiving. I think everyone will gather at my house this year, John, Beth, Lina, son Michael, Loretta's brother Mike and my sister-in-law Lin, and who knows who else.

As I think back to six years ago, and what preceded both Halloween and Thanksgiving, I scare myself with the concepts of what could have been. You know, when you're young, you think you are indestructible, but that's not the way it works when you get older. Hopefully, I have inherited Babbononno's genes. When I was a kid, I always thought he was super human.

Thanksgiving is certainly not a holiday that is observed in Italy. However, for Italian Americans, it is a day most often spent giving thanks for life's most precious blessings. Celebrations include family, friends and of course, food. Usually an abundance of it that took days and days to prepare! Traditionally, Turkey is the main course, gara di mani, stuffed with the family's own special ripiene "stuffing." Customarily, antipasto, soup, lasagna, side dishes and desserts, are also included. While the menu is similar in most Italian American homes, the one item that is truly unique and most often the most prided, is the "stuffing"!

I am sharing this truly amazing recipe that comes from my dear friend, Robert Barbato, whose mother, Maria, was an absolutely fabulous cook. Her treasured recipe is much different than most and has been in their family for many generations. Undeniably, this could actually be considered "a meal in itself"!

NONNA MARIA BARBATO'S BREAD STUFFING Ripieno di pane di Nonna Maria Barbato

3 loaves hard Italian bread (must be hard and stale) 1/2 to 1 pound genoa salami (sliced from the butcher)

1/2 to 1 pound genod salami (sliced from the butch 1/2 to 1 pound capicola (sliced from the butcher)

1/2 to 1 pound plain ham (not prosciutto; sliced from the butcher)

1/2 to 1 pound pepperoni (sliced from the butcher)

3/4 pound provolone cheese (sliced from the butcher)

3/4 pound fontina cheese (sliced from the butcher) 1/2 pound (8 ounces) grated parmigiano reggiano cheese 3 eggs (1 egg per loaf of bread is recommended), beaten

salt and pepper (to taste)

olive oil

Take the loaves of bread and place them in a clean sink, that has been filled with warm water. Soak the loaves until completely saturated (this takes about a half hour). Remove loaves, peel off crusts, and squeeze the water out of the bread. Place this bread in an extra large mixing bowl (as you will eventually be mixing everything in this one bowl). Take all of your sliced meats and working with a little at a time, cut them into 1/2 inch squares. Do the same with the sliced cheeses. Add all of the meats and cheeses to the bread in the mixing bowl toss together, to evenly distribute. Add the eggs, grated cheese, and salt and pepper, to taste. Using your hands, mix everything together well. This next step is extremely important and must be followed precisely. For the next 20 minutes or so (depending on the quantity you are making) the stuffing will have to be tended to. Take a large frying pan and add enough olive oil to coat the bottom of the pan. Turn the heat to medium; add the stuffing mixture to the pan. After a couple of minutes, using a spatula, check to see how the stuffing is browning. When it has browned, take the spatula and "flip and chop" it. The process is simply flip and chop, flipping browned pieces over, and then chopping them back into the moist mixture. Continue this until the cheese has melted, the sliced meats have blended their flavors in with the bread, and you have browned pieces of stuffing throughout the mixture. This serves to evaporate the water in the bread and give you some nice brown pieces in the otherwise soft stuffing. It is important that you do not cook it until it's dry, just long enough to get some "toasted pieces", while maintaining the stuffing's moistness. When cool, place as much stuffing as you can fit into the turkey's cavity. The leftovers can be placed in a casserole dish, covered with aluminum foil, and baked in a 350° oven for about 20 minutes, being careful not to overcook.

THOUGHTS BY DAN ABOUT THIS & THAT

with Daniel A. DiCenso

Teddy Roosevelt's African Journey

Teddy Roosevelt hunting rhino

The Smithsonian-Roosevelt African Expedition is a paradox, especially so to the modern conservationist. It brought a better understanding of Africa's wildlife to Americans at a time when the flora and fauna of the continent remained an almost fabled mystery and, as was always a mission with Theodore Roosevelt, a plea for conservation. And yet, collectively, the former President and his son Kermit bagged over 500 animals (including seventeen lions, eleven elephants and eleven black rhinos), most of which were donated to the American Museum of Natural History and the Smithsonian Institute as specimens. It was also an affirmation of Roosevelt's love of adventure and sense of manhood.

Despite his popularity, Roosevelt did not run for reelection in 1908 and Taft took the victory of William Jennings Bryan. After attending Taft's inauguration in March of 1909 at the White House, Roosevelt left for East Africa along with his son Kermit. The expedition was financed by the Smithsonian and was led by famed tracker R.J. Cunninghame. Accompanying the Roosevelt's on the expedition were several scientists from the Smithsonian.

In April, the troop arrived in Mombasa and covered much of British East Africa, the Belgian Congo, and Sudan. In the span of ten months, Roosevelt and is son collected much of the big game, while other scientists collected an array of plants, fish, birds, insects, amphibians and also cultural items.

While much of the meat was consumed, the skins were sent back to the States. They were coming in such large numbers that New York's Museum of Natural History and the Smithsonian both had trouble keeping up and, all in all, in took them eight years to prepare all the specimens.

To modern conservations the details of this trip are the stuff of horrors, but to Roosevelt it was the first step toward a better understanding of the natural world

"I can be condemned only if the existence of the National Museum, the American Museum of Natural History, and all similar zoological institutions are to be condemned," was Roosevelt's defense of the trip, indicating how crucial specimens were to zoology in the early 20th century.

And yet, even then, much as he did in his own country, Roosevelt saw the importance of the game reserves the British government was setting aside for the preservation of Africa's wildlife. "In the creation of the great game reserve through which the Uganda railway runs the British Government has conferred a boon upon mankind," he said. And ended his journey with a stop in Great Britain to attend the funeral of King Edward VII and then in Norway to receive the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts during the Russo-Japanese War, before returning to America in June of 1910.

traditions, no matter how small, simultaneously joins us to our past while imbuing our present with renewed meaning.

There are many ways we can commemorate the importance of feasting and tradition this Thanksgiving — ways that last beyond the date of the holiday on November 28th. We should donate food to local charities and food banks, giving families in need the chance to partake in this festival of gratitude, togetherness, and love. We should relish the time we spend in the company of family and friends, ensuring that we fill the air with

Cherry Could Always Be Own Worse Enemy

I wasn't surprised to hear that former Boston Bruins head coach got into trouble up in Canada recently. He's been bombastic before. His opinions were always loud and sometimes plain silly.

He's mocked climate change and suggested those folks come up to Toronto "we're freezing to death." He's been known to scold female hockey fans too. He got canned by the Bruins and just recently got canned by Canadian Sports TV when he insulted Canadian immigrants as he recently did. It was Remembrance Day in Canada, akin to our Veterans Day holiday. He was mad that many immigrants aren't wearing poppies worn in honor of the nation's war dead. Anytime someone's comment starts with "You people," you know nothing good follows such a remark.

Down here in Boston on Veterans Day, I saw few people observing the holiday or passively watching a parade pass by. I spoke to one person he asked what the parade was for. I looked at him and said, "You're kidding, right?" He wasn't. That's how we are living today in 2019. It happens in America and I guess Canada too.

You know when you are on TV doing a broadcast, sometimes you need to know when to open your mouth or keep it shut. I am not sorry, Don Cherry got fired. By now, he should know better.

Happy Birthday To ...

Pitcher Gary Bell recently turned 83 years old. He was a great addition to the starting rotation during the 1967 Impossible Dream year going 12-8 after arriving from the Indians in June of that year with a losing record. He also threw eight complete games. He also appeared in three games in the World Series and got a save in Game 6. The following season he went to the Seattle Pilots in the expansion draft and started their first home game shutting out the White Sox. Also drove in two runs. He finished his 12 season career with 121 games and is living in Texas today. Sorry when they let him go to the Pilots. In 1968, Bell went 11-11 and the team finished going 86-76. I can only imagine how the '69 Sox would have done with Gary Bell in the starting rotation with Dick Ellsworth, Ray Culp and Sonny Siebert. Without Bell they went 87-75.

It would take the Red Sox until 1975 to get back to World Series form.

THE CO-PILOTS — That's what they are, this group of talented individuals who assist in keeping the successful plane that is the Boston Celtics team this year above it all, flying along in the first place position in the Eastern Conference.

So, who are the members of this select group that have helped the Celtics team ascend to these lofty regions?

Well, of course, there is Head Coach Brad Stevens, now in his seventh year with the team. And there are the players, all of whom must take the floor and actually do their best to win those games.

But then there are others. They are the assistant coaches, many of whom have been with the Celtics for a good number of seasons. Like the vast majority of assistant coaches throughout the league, they do not hold press conferences, only being seen as they sit on the team bench during games. Thus are never heard by the members of Celtics Nation.

This season, there are seven listed as assistant coaches in the current Celtics media guide. We thought we might take a moment to tell you about each of them.

Jay Larranaga's most recent experience prior to the Celtics was serving as the head coach of the Erie BayHawks of the NBA Development League for two seasons. Over that span, the BayHawks made the playoffs both times, achieved a 60-40 regular season cumulative record and set a franchise mark with 32 wins in a single season.

Larranaga, now in his eighth season with the Celtics, played his college hoops at Bowling Green in Ohio, going on to compete in Europe for various pro teams for 12 seasons. He is the son of Jim Larranaga, the coach at the University of Miami.

Jamie Young had been with the Celtics for nearly two decades and is now in his fifth season as an assistant coach. He started with the C's as their video coordinator, a challenging position that provides an extremely vital service to the coaching staff.

All coaches want to watch video, most on a daily basis. We remember Head Coach Brad Stevens telling us during his first Celtics training camp in the fall of 2013, that he had watched all 82 regular season games from the prior season in the two months after he was hired on July 3, 2013.

Young played football and basketball at Blackburn College in Illinois before joining the Celtics staff in 2007 as the video coordinator and later serving as an advanced scout.

Jerome Allen, who played with Minnesota, Denver, and Indiana during his NBA career, is in his fifth season as a Celtics assistant. Prior to that he was the head coach at the University of Pennsylvania for four seasons, coming back "home" since Penn is also his alma mater.

During his playing days, he was a four-year starter at the school, leading the Quakers to four Ivy League titles in the mid-1990s.

Scott Morrison, hails from north of the border, Prince Edward Island in Canada. Now in his third season as an assistant, he previously was the head coach for the Maine Red Claws, the C's affiliate in the NBA Development League, for three years. He won Coach of the Years honors in 2014-2015 for leading the team to a 35-15 finish, a franchise record. He also coached college basketball in Canada for 11 years. As a player for the University of Prince Edward Island, he finished his career as the all-time leader in assists and three-point field goals.

Newly hired Kara Johnson left the world of sports media when she was hired by the Celtics over the summer.

Before coming to Boston, Johnson was the primary television analyst for the Washington Wizards broadcasts for two seasons while also working as an analyst for ESPN Radio.

A 13-year veteran of the WNBA, she split her playing career between Sacramento, Connecticut, and Washington. She also won a gold medal as a player for Team USA in the 2008 Summer Olympics in China.

In college, Lawson had the opportunity to learn from one of the best, playing for Head Coach Pat Summit at the University of Tennessee. During her playing days, the team advanced to the women's Final Four three times.

Brandon Bailey, also is in his first year with the Celtics, he came aboard after serving the past two seasons as the head coach of the Maine Red Claws. He had joined the Celtics as a video intern in 2011. Before that, he had worked as an intern for the men's and women's basketball team at DePaul University. He also played basketball at Saint Patrick High School in Chicago where his father served as head coach.

FLUTIE, A FAN FAVORITE

- It was 35 years ago (November 23, 1984) that Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie completed his famous game-ending pass that enabled the Eagles to defeat defending national champion Miami down in the Sunshine State.

There were only six seconds remaining in the contest when BC lined up for the final play of the game at midfield. Flutie took the snap and scrambled backwards, avoided a potential tackler and then threw the ball 64 yards into the end zone where it was caught by his roommate Gerard Phelan, giving BC a dramatic 47-45 victory. It is one of the most remembered plays in the history of college football.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY -That's what it was 56 years ago on November 22, 1963, when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas. For those of a certain age, November 22nd floods the mind with solemn memories every year.
