The NY Times Thinks its Objective, I Think the Word is Objectionable

Recently, a NY Times headline stated "Lack of Diversity Persists in Admissions to Elite City Schools." Listen to this. Entering classes in 8 elite schools will be 52 percent Asian, 28 percent white, 7 percent Latino and 5 percent black. The Times suggest this represents a "lack of diversity."

As NY Post columnist Michael Goodwin opines "only if you don't count Asians as a minority. MINORITY has come to be a synonym for blacks and Hispanics, and since Asians succeed wildly out of proportion to their numbers — they are about 15 percent of the school population — they are no longer considered a MINORITY or included in "DIVERSITY counts."

Shocking News

A recent poll showed a record low 43 percent consider President Obama to be honest. That number has to be incorrect. How could that many people still think Obama is Honest Abe?

Dunkin' Donuts

Removing Titanium from Racks

Dunkin' Donuts recently announced it would be changing its powdered donut recipe. It will no longer add titanium dioxide to whiten those delicious babies. This news followed an environmental group who said that an independent lab test showed the substance in the white powdered sugar used to make the donuts is also used to make sunscreen. Who knew that a donut could help someone get a nice safe tan, eh?

No More Circus Elephants

The news is out, Barnum & Bailey Ringling Bros. Circus will only be using elephants until 2018

DREAMS OF FREEDOM:

Boston's Immigrant Experience Re-Imagined and Revitalized
Skywalk Observatory Celebrates
Grand Re-opening of Boston's Only Educational Immigration Experience

With a history of serving residents and visitors alike, Skywalk Observatory is celebrating the Grand Re-Opening of the fully re-imagined and revitalized immigration exhibition, Dreams of Freedom: Boston's Immigrant Experience. Located on the 50th Floor of The Prudential Tower, 800 Boylston Street, Boston, MA. The Skywalk is New England's tallest observatory and Boston's ONLY sky-high vantage point.

A glance at the headlines shows the debate over immigration is as timely a topic today as it was hundreds of years ago.

Dreams of Freedom serves as a virtual passport through time, offering interactive multimedia exhibits that bring to life the unified experience of the thousands of immigrants who have made Boston their home for more than 400 years. The city's only educational experience dedicated to Boston's rich history of immigration, the exhibits have been completely re-imagined and refurbished under the direction of Dr. Westy A. Egmont, Exhibit Curator. Dr. Egmont is Associate Professor, Boston College School of Social Work and Director of the BCSSW Immigrant Integration Lab.

As noted at the entrance to the exhibition area, "Boston, 'the city on the hill,' was founded by people who sought a new life, free of the inequities and disappointments of the old world. The Puritan settlers hoped to create a city that would be a beacon to the world, and it has been. For centuries, immigrants have traveled from all over the world to build new lives. They journeyed far, built communities, became citizens and left their mark on Boston." Dreams of Freedom is both their story and everyone's story. Ultimately, this is a story of commonality.

As a melting pot of the world's communities, Boston has a tradition of inclusion

A weekly column highlighting some of the more interesting aspects of our ancestry . . . our lineage . . . our roots.

VENUS

Last week's column highlighted Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of love. This week your attention is directed to Venus, the Roman counterpart. Prior to her identification with Aphrodite, Venus was the goddess of gardens and spring, one of the least important of the Roman deities. She was also worshipped as "Calva" (The bald), a cult which was started about 625 B.C. by Ancus Marcius, the third Sabine king of regal Rome, because his wife was losing her hair. Some historians attributed the name Calva to the fact that on her wedding day, each Roman bride cut off a lock of her hair and sacrificed it to Venus. "Paetus" was another name often used in Rome. It identified a person who squinted in one eye. The Latin expression was "Venus paeta" (Venus-eyed), because it was regarded as an added dimension to one's beauty.

In later years, the worship of Venus became more closely associated with that of Aphrodite, consequently, new dimensions were added. During the third or second century B.C. the worship of Venus Erycina was introduced from Sicily's Mt. Eryx. A temple in her honor as Venus Verticordia (from the Latin vertex or vortex), the goddess who turns the hearts of men, was built in Rome after a Vestal Virgin was killed by lightning. Even Julius Caesar caused the construction of a temple called Venus Genetrix (Venus the Mother), because he claimed that, as mother of Aeneas, she was the ancestor and guardian of the entire Roman race.

Aphrodite and Venus were worshipped as one and the same more often than any other deity in mythology. Also, more often than not, the location of a statue or painting of this goddess determined whether she was called Aphrodite or Venus. Here again, as in the case of Apollo, there is hardly a famous artist from the past who didn't take a turn in presenting his own version of this queen of beauties, according to some particular story or legend that he wished to portray. Her most celebrated statue, of course, just has to be the "Aphrodite of Melos" or as it is more popularly known, "Venus de Milo". It was found on Melos, the most westerly island of the Cyclades, in the Aegean Sea. The island became an Athenian colony sometime around 400 B.C., however, there appears to be no information about the masterpiece, other than the fact of being found among some ruins, in the year 1820. It was purchased by the Marquis de Riviere, who presented it to Louis XVII and it now stands in the Louvre.

Another well known statue of this goddess is the "Medici Venus." For those who are not familiar with the Medici family, please let me add that the family greatness started with Cosimo de Medici in the 15th century. He was known as "The Great Merchant of Florence" who spent his immense wealth liberally for the advancement of art and science. About fifty years later, Lorenzo di Medici became the greatest patron of literature and art that any prince had ever been, with a collection of sculptures, paintings, drawings, and carved gems, available to all artists and Feeling lonesome, forgotten? Just once give money to a political cause, or subscribe to a magazine with an ideological bent and you'll never again want for mail to read. Months go by with no letters from my family. Friends never write. But everyday my box overflows with appeals to become a "charter member," respond to an important "survey," or learn that "help is here!" And that's just from the envelopes of recent political mailings.

Return to Sender

Envelopes — large, small, brown, white, colored, self-mailers — when it comes to messages, political mail houses know how to stuff it. Only amateur outfits use plain white number ten envelopes. The big boys of the fundraising racket have graduated to oversized six-by-nine inch envelopes — or even bigger, up to a foot long.

For Official Use Only

"Postmaster: Deliver to Addressee Only," says the large print on the package. Now that begs the question, "What does the postmaster usually do? Hand my mail out to random strangers? Each piece bears all the marks of official correspondence, entrusted to the care of the U.S. Postal Service (even if only at the reduced bulk rate), expedited for my immediate action.

Do I agree that "students should be sent home from school for saying grace silently over lunch?" asks a conservative religious group's "official survey." Surely the tally on that question will be close. The Republicans want to know if I think that "Tax cuts that benefit all Americans, not just the Democrats' special interests" are important. I bet congressional Republicans are even now waiting for my answer. Then again, given some of their cave-ins on tax cuts, maybe they think there actually is a Republican constituency for tax cuts for Democrats' special interests.

Once, I answered a questionnaire as if the sender actually wanted my answers. The organization, National Right to Work Committee, lobbies for issues — mainly the right to choose one's own associates — which I support. Still, it is not a group that I choose to join. To the survey question "do you consider yourself a member of the NRWC?" I responded "No," and wrote in that I would, nevertheless, like to receive their newsletter. I also enclosed, to help pay for mailing the newsletter, a small contribution, well below the indicated membership fee. Back comes a form letter thanking me for renewing my membership. Enclosed was a membership card.

Gold cards, cards in every hue, all made to look like credit cards, complete with card numbers and expiration dates — I gotta slew of 'em. Over a three-year period I received nearly 50 of these cards from the Republican National Committee, the Massachusetts Republican Party, The Heritage Foundation, and several other organizations, most of which I have not given money to.

Presidential election years are the best. One year I got 11 membership cards just from the Republican National Committee. I can hardly wait to see what 2016 brings.

Recently one Christian organization sent me a solicitation for a real credit card — a Visa at the usurious rate of 17 percent. Usually rates that high are accompanied by complementary leg-breaking if you fall behind on payments. Perhaps they'll repossess my soul.

Giving your name to these vultures just to get more mail is a Faustian bargain to be sure. But, I'll always have my genuine color photocopy of a photo of Ronald Reagan and my secret decoder ring with the combination to the safe in Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office.

Keep those cards and letters coming.

CENTRAL ARTERY RAMP PARCEL STUDY

Wednesday, April 15, 2015

6-8 PM at the BRA

(Boston City Hall, 9th Floor, BRA Board Room)

MassDOT is required to consider options for covering the open ramp portions of Central Artery/Tunnel Parcels 6, 12 and 18 along the Rose Kennedy Greenway, resulting from environmental commitments made as part of the Central Artery/Tunnel project.

MassDOT and BRA officials are continuing to study options to define potential cover alternatives for the ramp portals. At this next public meeting, staff from MassDOT and the BRA, along with their consultant team will present refined ramp parcel cover concepts that have been developed based on feedback received from four (4) prior public meetings including formal comments received after the most recent January 8th public meeting. We would like to invite interested parties to attend for a study update and a discussion on the next steps in the process.

GUEST EDITORIAL

AMERICA NEEDS TO BIND UP ITS WOUNDS

by Sal Giaratani

As a retired police officer with more than 27 years of service to the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, I sometimes wonder why any young person out there would ever want to go into law enforcement when, thanks to apparent race-baiting by the mainstream media and those in positions of authority like President Obama and outgoing Attorney General Eric Holder, police officers have become target practice for those upset by the decision from the Feds not to charge the former officer in Ferguson, Missouri with a crime. It was justifiable. However, when Holder goes on to accuse the Ferguson Police Department of widespread and assumed racist-like practices and using sweeping assumptions not based on facts and talking about "disparate impacts." That decision only added fuel to the fire still burning in Ferguson.

The shootings of two police officers outside the Ferguson Police Headquarters late Wednesday, March 11th seems a direct result of the harsh tone of those in the Justice Department feeding racial tensions rather than trying to simmer that environment down.

As I watched the video on the Thursday morning news and listened to the audio on a radio show, it was clear that following the tragic shooting of two officers, that some in the crowd were heard taunting the downed officers after the shots stopped.

The sniper (or snipers) may have pulled the trigger, but the ugly incident had a direct correlation to the rhetoric of Eric Holder's Justice Department and the political verbiage of President Obama during his recent visit to Selma, Alabama to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the March to Montgomery across the Edmund Pettus Bridge on March 7, 1965 when the peaceful marchers were brutally attacked by police officers trying to break up the march.

When you sow the seeds of unrest, you can get unanticipated consequences like this latest act of violence against police. Now is the time to bring people together, not move them apart.

I am glad that the president and attorney general both immediately spoke out loud and clear on the shooting and condemned it.

America needs to bind up its wounds. We need to live as one nation and the only colors that should matter are red, white and blue.

On Wednesday, March 4th, 85 volunteer judges gathered at the Back Bay Events Center for The Max Warburg Courage Curriculum's 24th annual Essay Judging event. During the day-long event, volunteers read 2,000 essays on the topic of courage, written by middle school students. They selected close to 60 essays (including 5 from partner schools in foreign countries like Pakistan and India) for publication in The Courage of Children: Boston and Beyond Vol. XXIV. Winners will be announced later this month.

Currently, the Max Warburg Courage Curriculum is taught in over 60 schools in Greater Boston, in schools in 27 states and in 9 foreign countries. On Wednesday, judges read essays from schools all over Greater Boston, from national partner schools in cities such as Memphis and

Washington D.C., and from schools in India, Pakistan, and China.

The Max Warburg Courage Curriculum was recently awarded a $250,000 challenge grant from Ambassador Swanee Hunt in celebration of the organization's upcoming 25th anniversary. Funds raised will help sustain current programs in Boston area schools and expand efforts in the US and abroad.

The mission of the Max Warburg Courage Curriculum is to strengthen the character development and literacy skills of students. The program empowers children to discover, then recognize, the role of courage in the lives of the characters they read about, in the lives of those around them, and in their own lives — past, present and future.

BRA Board Approves Five Projects

New Hotel will Transform Historic Building in Charlestown Navy Yard

Chain Forge Building.

The Board of Directors for the Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) approved five development proposals. Combined, the projects represent over $131 million of investment in Boston's economy, and they are projected to create nearly 500 construction jobs. New housing projects were approved for East Boston, Brighton, and South Boston, and a new hotel in the Charlestown Navy Yard also won approval. Several of the proposals on the agenda involve adaptive reuses of existing buildings.

Historic building in Charlestown Navy Yard to be rehabilitated for new hotel and restaurant. Kavanagh Advisory Group received approval to redevelop the Chain Forge Building, also known as Building 105, in the Charlestown Navy Yard as a 230-key limited service and extended stay hotel with 6,000 square feet of restaurant space. The site, part of the Navy Yard's Historic Monument Area, has undergone extensive environmental remediation for asbestos, lead paint, and contaminated soil and piping to make way for the new Chain Forge Hotel.

Former Gate of Heaven School to be redeveloped for housing in South Boston. After a lengthy community process, the BRA Board approved Ornamore Enterprises' redevelopment plans for the former Gate of Heaven School in South Boston. Redevelopment of the property has been in discussion since the Archdiocese of Boston closed the school in 2008. While some community members pushed for another school to fill the vacant building, no viable option was found.

Ornamore's proposal involves an adaptive reuse of the existing four-story building, which will contain 26 condominium units, with a mix of one, two, and three-bedroom residences, when complete. Three of the units will be designated as affordable, in conformity with the city's affordable housing policy. There will also be 40 on-site parking spaces.

The developer hopes to begin rehabilitation of the property by the fall, with the goal of finishing construction within a year.

Boston Teachers Union set to construct new headquarters in Dorchester's Columbia Point. The Boston Teachers Union (BTU) will replace its existing headquarters in Columbia Point with a brand new building and parking structure as part of a two-phase project. The first phase of the BTU Building Replacement Project entails demolition of the existing building and construction of a new three-story building to be used for the BTU Health and Welfare Fund Offices, union offices, an optical shop, a credit union, meeting spaces, and a function hall supported by 135 surface parking spaces. A 300-space, two-story parking facility will be constructed in phase two, which will alleviate BTU's current need to utilize parking on the nearby University of Massachusetts Boston campus.

The project will include a pedestrian walkway that could serve as a future connection to the Boston Harborwalk. Designers also incorporated a 6,500-square foot outdoor event plaza.

80 New apartments slated for 1505 Commonwealth Ave in Brighton. An underutilized five-story office building will be transformed into 80 new apartments at 1505 Commonwealth Avenue in Brighton. Partners

Seeking Justice for Ryan Morrissey

Knowing that the three individuals who allegedly murdered young Ryan Morrissey last November as he stepped out of the A-1 Convenience Store on Main Street in Charlestown will face justice can only bring bitter solace to a family and community outraged at this murder on November 5th.

Ryan was minding his own business and reportedly was mistaken by the shooters for someone else. There's a saying about being in the wrong place at the wrong time. The Irish, as my mother always told me, are so fatalistic. Is there really such a thing as being in the wrong place at the wrong time? Was it Ryan's time as some might say? I guess being half Sicilian, I am not really into that "It's your time" thing.

Ryan had a right to be where he was without being killed by a so-called "mistake." As Peter Gelzinis wrote recently, "In the 17th year of his life, with a world of possibilities ahead of him, Ryan Morrissey was fatally shot."

Such violence is difficult to understand and very hard to move on from. We see instantly how fragile life can be. One minute here, the next moment gone. How does a family move on? Convicting his killers is the easy part, but a court verdict won't bring young Ryan back to his parents or to his sister and brother. There will always be a place at the table, a pew in the church, a ballgame to watch or a movie to see when his memory will come back to haunt the loved ones he left behind.

Charlestown over the years has had its share of violence. My mother, born in 1909, grew up in Charlestown and her family suffered through the same kind of violence, when her older brother John was killed and found in a doorway on Main Street. My mother always missed him and talked about him and never stopped loving him, but she never knew why he was killed.

Knowing that the culprits in the Morrissey killing have been arraigned at Charlestown District Court is the start of a painful journey the family must begin. Hopefully, at the end of this journey a verdict bringing justice for a young man who still should be with us will be reached.

Thanks go out to the Boston Herald for running an essay by Ryan just before his 15th birthday, which was originally published as a blog post by the Boston Centers for Youth and Families back in 2012.

Listen to Ryan speaking to us now, "Hi, my name is Ryan Joseph Morrissey and I live in Charlestown ... with my mom, dad, sister Michaela and brother Craig ... I have lived in Charlestown all my life and I am proud of it. The community is a lot better now, but the drugs are still big problems ... I love being a kid, but everyone has to grow up in the community to survive and that is what I'm going to do."

Ryan was hoping to play hockey and football, hoping to get a good education, hoping to buy a motorcycle, hoping to own two dogs and hoping to meet a nice girl and have kids. As he ended his blog he stated, "That is life for me. If I don't do right, I can't have this." Sadly, he did all the right things and he now can't have what he dreamed.

I am sure justice will be served because justice is needed. We all need to work overtime to make our communities and our neighborhoods safe for all who call them home. Many went to his wake and said good-bye to a friend who should still be with us. We recognize that life is a gift from God. We need to live it well. Ryan didn't live a long life, but it was a good life to be remembered by all who knew him.

I pray for the Morrissey family who will never forget that day last November when God took Ryan into his arms. This is when our faith takes hold and carries us through the anger, sadness and disbelief.

Ryan always loved Charlestown and Charlestown will always love him back.

From March 31st through August 22nd, The West End Museum will host a new exhibit in its Main Exhibit Hall. In Pursuit of Excellence: The West End House features artifacts, photographs, oral history video and memorabilia representing over 100 years. Among the club's most distinguished alumni are Leonard Nimoy and crooner Buddy Clark. The show reception takes place on Friday, April 10th at 6:00 pm. The exhibit and reception are free and open to the public.

Of the West End House, Nimoy said "It was a healthy, thriving place to go. The club offered me an opportunity to be well-rounded. I played basketball and was on a long distance running team. I also got experience in public speaking there. This was something I was particularly inclined to do. The experience helped me in my career because it taught me how to select appropriate material and then perform in front of an audience."

The path to the West End House began in 1903 when Impressed by the character and determination of these boys, James J. Storrow — for whom Storrow Drive is named — funded a home for the club in 1906 (at 9 Eaton Street) and changed its name to the West End House. Harvard Law School graduate Mitchell Freiman served as its first director.

The foundation of the West End House was its numerous clubs, which became the responsibility of its young members. There were more than 90 groups formed around athletic, scholarly and other pursuits. The clubs organized sporting events, socials and renowned declamation contests.

"The West End House was a training ground that allowed immigrant boys to enter corporate America with the skills they needed to succeed," said Curator Duane Lucia. "Our collection of records, photos and stories is extensive. It offers a comprehensive look at how the neighborhood changed in the first 50 years of the 20th century."

When Frieman passed in 1916, founding member Jacob "Jack" Burnes took over as director. In 1929, under Burnes' leadership, the club constructed a new building on Blossom Street. In 1966, amid urban renewal, that building was sold to MGH. Determined to continue the legacy of serving immigrant children and families, in 1971, the club opened its doors at 105 Allston Street in the Allston-Brighton neighborhood, where it remains to this day, now known as the West End House Boys and Girls Club.

In Pursuit of Excellence: The West End House is free and open to the public during regular Museum hours.

The Museum is located at 150 Staniford St. Suite 7, Boston, MA.

A Blast from the Past: November 1995, 20 Years Ago

The Privitera's and Leonard Nimoy at the 100th anniversary banquet in 1995.

Actor Leonard Nimoy came to Somerville and was greeted by his boyhood pal, Attorney (& Mrs.) Frank Privitera. Mr. Nimoy was here to kick-off the exciting 100th anniversary celebration of the Elizabeth Peabody House. He joined Privitera and a full house at the Somerville Theater for a Peabody House fundraiser. The two old buddies sported their "I'm from the West End" buttons noting where they both lived and that they had attended school together.

ALL THAT ZAZZ

Face, Skin and Hair Food —

Try it You'll Like it!

Ciao Bella,

Everyone has been talking about how they survived the winter of 2015. Come on, we're hearty New Englanders and choose to live here. The winter camaraderie was actually quite entertaining. Of course, I could sit back and listen and see it all. My commuter rail days of running to the train are gone. I live across from the Massachusetts State House, so the snow removal is fantastic and I don't have a roof to worry about since I don't own a home. In over 24 years of living here I have never picked up a shovel and the electricity has never flickered. I consider myself lucky and enjoyed the beautiful snow and ice formations from pictures, Facebook and my window. Beauty is everywhere.

Spring is around the corner and I've found some food recipes to use on your body to cleanse, hydrate and feel human again.

1) Natural Skin Scrub — use sugar or salt with one-third cup of olive oil and adding a few drops of your favorite scented extract. Gently rub on damp skin in circular motion while concentrating on rough spots. Rinse off. This will remove dead skin cells so skin looks brighter and feels softer.

2) Clove Hair Conditioner — known to thicken hair and enhance brown color. Boil one cup of water with two tablespoons of whole cloves for five minutes. Leave it overnight, straining twice in the A.M. Use once a week over strands before detangle conditioner. You'll have softer, fuller hair.

3) Exfoliating Facial — make a paste with baking soda, honey and a few drops of water. Apply for five minutes, then rinse. This mask will gently absorb excess oil while gently exfoliating leaving skin soft and clear.

So if this record-breaking winter has got you down? Just use these few spa-home pick-me-ups for a lift and think of all the spring flowers that will be coming your way!

Buona giornata and God bless the United States of America!

A Beautiful Day

by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari

walking along the sun drenched causeway and out into Boston Harbor. A brisk wind was blowing, cold but not biting cold, inviting us to quicken our pace along the walkway edged with snow and ice. We passed a lady walking two French bulldogs only to hear them scampering behind us. They ran past us, circled and back towards us, this time stopping in front of us, beckoning us to play with them. Their walker shouted out, "they won't leave till you pet them," so we crouched down, gave each a good shake. That seemed to delight them, and they scampered away, grunting happily back to their walker, who greeted them with open arms.

Elated by the brief encounter, we continued on our walk, rounded the lookout pavilion and crossed over the sluice gates that make up the outer boundary of the Sugar Bowl. We reached the boardwalk and the home-stretch of our walk. This stretch runs quite close to the beach which was completely covered in snow. The glow of the setting sun glistening on the ice clogged shore was beautiful. An unfamiliar beauty, both natural and magical.

We arrived back at our car, and treated ourselves to a cup of coffee, from a thermos we filled before leaving home. It was still hot and welcomed after the chilly walk. Sitting in the warm car looking out at the glistening ocean, we marveled at the natural beauty of the sea somewhat enhanced by the snow and ice. We commented, happily, "it's only a quick drive from home. It was a beautiful day."

The "Medici Venus" is attributed to Cleomenes, an Athenian sculptor. Authorities rank it with the finest statuary of ancient times. It was found in Emperor Hadrian's villa, near Rome, and was brought to Florence in 1680. It now

MOVING TO A NEW AREA

How My Pooch Friends Feel About Leaving the North End?

Most dogs take moving in stride, but others have difficulty settling in to a new home.

Pets easily pick-up on body signals and emotions, so if you're anxious, your pet can become anxious as well. The main issues to consider in moving are the change in routine and the new home itself. To help your dog adapt to any change in their daily routine, changes in scheduling and how family members might interact, should begin before the move. If the dog is not already on a fairly structured program, introduce a more predictable daily routine that can continue in the new home. While you are preparing for the household move, try to minimize disruption to your pet's schedule and environment as much as possible. If your dog becomes overly anxious, you may want to consider having someone care for it elsewhere while you pack up your belongings. On the actual moving days, the dog should be securely confined or out of the home to avoid anxiety, injury or escape. You should set up an environment for your dog in your new home that is as similar as possible to the dog's previous environment, especially with regard to the dog's sleeping, feeding and play areas.

Show your dog the new areas and spend some time with it until it becomes familiar with the new environment. Accompany your dog while it explores the rest of the new home so that you can reinforce desirable behavior and interrupt or deter any undesirable behavior such as marking or chewing. Because dogs are strongly scent oriented, investigating new odors and spreading their own odors gradually throughout each room can be important for them to become familiar and comfortable with the new home. The length of time it takes a dog to adjust to a new home varies, because every dog reacts differently. Most dogs start to relax within a few days of moving, while some seem to immediately enjoy the stimulation of exploring a new environment and others may take weeks to adjust. When first leaving your dog alone in the new home, it's best to match the time when the dog is normally sleeping or playing with its toys.

I hope my human companion isn't thinking of making any sudden moves to Florida with all its grass, big green trees and hot pavement for us to walk on. No way ... am I moving? Hey Boss, is that room still available for me at your home!!!! I'll behave, sit outside on the porch and promise not to bark ... I'm ready anytime you tell me to come.

That's all for now ...

REMEMBER TO PICK-UP AFTER YOUR POOCH AND KEEP OUR STREETS CLEAN.

and is home to someone from virtually every country on the planet. The city's culture, neighborhoods and history have all been shaped and impacted by immigrants — Irish, Italian, Chinese, Vietnamese, Dominican, Polish, Haitian, Nigerian, Turkish, Korean, Indian and more.

Touring the exhibits, guests will experience the stark reality of leaving family behind to travel to a distant land with a bare minimum of possessions. Family portraits come to life in a virtual dialogue debating the dreams and frustrations of arriving in a new homeland. The requirements and challenges of achieving American citizenship. The plight of the world's refugees. A celebration of immigrant scholars, activists, artists, lawmakers, builders, athletes and inventors who have called Boston home and impacted the world. And images of today's new Bostonians — adults and children — who have come from around the globe to build a better life and who will help shape our tomorrow.

Also displayed throughout the exhibit areas are a host of significant quotations relating to immigration from such leaders as Thomas Paine and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King Jr., Jimmy Carter and Boston Mayor Martin J. Walsh, who also appears in Dreams of Freedom: The Boston Story video, narrated by Jimmy Tingle and shown in the Skywalk Theater.

"I am deeply excited about Dreams of Freedom: Boston's Immigrant Experience," said Mayor Walsh. "Immigrants are influential, historically and presently, to our city, which I know firsthand as the son of immigrant parents. This exhibit is crucial in sharing and presenting the stories of numerous immigrant movements in Boston, and how their search for identity and place in their adopted home helped to shape and build our city."

Dr. Egmont agreed, saying, "From the Puritans aboard the Arabella to today's arrivals at Logan, Boston has welcomed the world and this exciting varied flow of people has become ever richer in diversity and human endeavor. Boston is a thriving center of health care, education, science, industry and progressive initiatives and this grows from, not despite, its role as an immigrant city. Dreams of Freedom is a story, the story of our city, told as a family tells its story about our background, our struggles, our home."

Raphael Oliver, General Manager of Skywalk Observatory and Top of the Hub added, "Boston is truly a global city. We have spent the past year working closely with Dr. Egmont to renovate, update and revitalize Dreams of Freedom to reflect Boston's ongoing story of immigration. The Skywalk, which has been home to the exhibition for the past ten years, has consistently ranked as one of Boston's most visited tourism sites since opening. The bright, new elements of Dreams of Freedom make the Skywalk an essential destination for visitors and residents alike, now more than ever."

The Skywalk Observatory is owned and operated by Select Restaurants, Inc., which also owns and operates award-winning Top of the Hub Restaurant, located above the Skywalk on the 52nd floor of The Prudential Tower. Visitors at both locations are embraced by panoramic views of Greater Boston and beyond. On a clear day, visibility is more than 80 miles.

Dreams of Freedom, originally conceived by Dr. Westy Egmont for the International Institute of Boston, is made possible with the general support of the Dreams of Freedom Society, Skywalk Observatory and Top of the Hub Restaurant.

Additional exhibits and experiences at the Skywalk include:

ACOUSTIGUIDE

LEONARD NIMOY, R.I.P.
Legendary Hollywood actor and West End native Leonard Nimoy recently passed away at age 83. Most of us know him as "Mr. Spock" on Star Trek, but Nimoy was a TV character actor and movie star for decades playing cowboys in the '50s and moving on to his greatest role in Star Trek where he played the very logical character opposite William Shatner's "Captain Kirk." I remember him back in 1978 when he appeared in Invasion of the Body Snatchers with Donald Sutherland.

WHAT SHOULD GOVERNMENT DO TO HELP WORKING PEOPLE?

A recent "Roving Camera" in the Bay State Banner asked the above question to six folks photoed for the piece. One of these folks was Chuck Turner who thought the minimum wage should be raised to $17 an hour or $34,000 a year. However, while Turner usually takes the cake, this time it went to State Rep. Evandro Carvalho (D-Dorchester), who opined, "Keep raising the minimum wage, the higher the better. Wages have to keep pace with the cost of living." OMG, this guy serves us on Beacon Hill?

I WILL MISS ANTHONY

I was shocked when I recently heard of the sudden passing of Anthony Vigorito. He seemed to represent what a North Ender was. He was always smoking his cigars and cracking jokes. I first met him back when I hung out in Contrada's (now My Cousin's Place), at the corner of Hanover and Charter Streets, a great places to catch up with the real North End news.

Back then, I was still a police officer and I can't tell you how many times he would tell me I really wasn't a cop. I just rented the costume. He said "Aren't you one of the inmates?" I would respond by telling him to keep taking his meds. We both got a good bunch of laughs over the years from it.

Whenever he saw me, he would call me "GIARRATANI" with his very loud North End whisper. I miss him and so will all his friends, especially all the guys down at Madonna Della Cava Society, where he could always be found during the daytime.

EXTRA SPECIAL GOOD FRIDAY PROMOTIONAL?

The Revere Spring Carnival is coming back to the Showcase Cinemas from March 26th to April 19th.

This carnival reminds me of the old days on Revere Beach when the amusements opened every year on Easter Sunday. However, I do not like the idea of a special Good Friday promotional rate, where the rides are unlimited from 1:00-5:00 pm.

For God sake, it's Good Friday, doesn't that mean anything anymore?

Ray Barron's 11 O'CLOCK NEWS

Oggi! "I shall return." Douglas MacArthur, promise to the Filipinos on March 20, 1942. Ready for this? Hearty breakfasts, after an Australian man discovered a nearly 7-foot python curled up inside a cereal box. "I peeked in the box, saw its head pop out," said Jarred Smith. "That's when I dropped my food on the counter and bolted for the door."

A millionaire motorist in Finland, where traffic fines are scaled to income, had to pay a nearly $60,000 fine for driving 64 mph in a 50 mph zone. "Finland is impossible to live in," the driver said, "for certain kinds of people."

Irony, after Alaska's annual Iditarod dog sled race had to be moved northward due to lack of snow. "If one more person says to move the Iditarod to Boston," said race director Mark Nordman, "I'm going to shake my head."

Morons? A student group at the University of California at Irvine voted to remove the American flag from a campus building to avoid "triggering" students who see the flag as a symbol of American "colonialism and imperialism." Since the flag may upset these students, the group said, displaying it is a form of "hate speech."

Boring news! The U.S. Supreme Court renewed the fight against Obamacare's contraception mandate, throwing out a lower-court decision that ruled against Notre Dame University's objection to providing birth control to its employees. The Roman Catholic college opposes the mandate on religious grounds. In 2013, the Obama administration issued an exemption for such religiously affiliated organizations, allowing them to fill out a form that punted the task of providing contraception to insurance companies. But the college says this certification process still forces the university to approve contraception coverage, even if it doesn't provide it. The 7th Circuit Court of Appeals will now have to reconsider Notre Dame's case.

Choo! Choo! Looking up, after a 27-year-old Florida woman had a miraculous escape after walking into the path of an oncoming freight train while texting. Sheena Keynna broke an arm, but survived.

Gossip stuff. Susan Sarandon has dumped her boy-toy lover, 37-year-old entrepreneur Jonathan Bricklin. The pair first got together in 2010, after meeting on a road-trip in Chile. But their May-December romance was strained by Bricklin's recent decision to accept a role in an upcoming AOL reality-TV show Connected, says the New York Post. A source said that Sarandon, 68, hated having cameras follow her everywhere and broke with Bricklin by announcing, "You're a cast member — I'm not."

Can fat really be good for us? Yes, but not all fats are created equal. Foods like beans nuts, and fish, which are rich in mono-unsaturated and polyunsaturated fats, are strongly linked to good cardiovascular health. But several recent studies found that even the saturated fats in red meat, butter, and cheese can be consumed in moderation, and that foods high in cholesterol do not raise cholesterol levels in most people. Those findings run counter to decades-old dietary guidelines from the American Heart Association and the U.S. government, which stated that people should avoid saturated fats because they clog our arteries, causing heart attacks and strokes.

To think, Americans have more food to eat than any other people on earth, and more diets to keep them from eating it.

The great Paul Waters of Swampscott, says, "Don't argue at the dinner table. The one who is not hungry always wins the argument."

Paul's son, Kyle, a brilliant student at Boston College, says, "The noblest of all animals is the dog, and the noblest of all dogs is the hotdog. It feeds the hand that bites it."

And Kyle's great mom, Robin, says. "Scientists tell us we are what we eat. Nuts must be more common in diets than we thought." Comes Tuesday, March 24th, Kyle's mom will be celebrating her birthday. As for gifts, she will appreciate more hugs and kisses.

What a dope!

A Nebraska man was fined $100 for marijuana possession after police searched his car and found his stash hidden in a container labeled "not weed." Sheriff Teny Wagner said that his deputies stopped the 21-year-old man on suspicion of driving drunk and discovered a pot-filled sour cream tub under a passenger seat. The words "not weed" were written in marker on the plastic container's lid. "We call that a clue," said Wagner.

Ireland, now a land of immigrants. The Irish people have done an incredible job integrating immigrants — but the state has not, said Fintan O'Toole. A decade ago, a nation as white as Wonder Bread and "as Catholic as a convent" coped with a sudden influx of foreigners — Poles, Brazilians, Nigerians, and others. It was a massive upheaval and for a nation used to emigrants and not imigrants, it seemed "a breach in the natural order of things." Yet somehow we absorbed these newcomers with no nationalist backlash. Integration happened at the societal level, in the schools. Faced with kids who couldn't speak English, teachers and students "deployed the native graces — humor, curiosity, rough decency — and muddled through." But the success story is now at risk, because the government has refused to spend any money promoting integration since the 2008 financial crash. Segregation is growing, with Catholic students opting for Catholic education and minorities left concentrated in a few urban schools. The solution is clear: It's time to take the church out of education and make our schools "community-owned public institutions in which all children are welcomed equally and all faiths are facilitated." "If we of different backgrounds are to form one nation, "our children must get to know one another." How true!

To think, in Boston we had school boy cadets who marched side-by-side with fellow students who were African-Americans, Hispanics, Irish, Italian, Greek, etc. Bring back the cadets! Well, yours truly helped to sponsor the last 10,000 Boston cadets on parade. We were invited to the reviewing stand. Enough said.

Useless information: In 1966 shock treatment was used to stop a sneezing fit that had wracked 17-year-old June Clark of Miami, Florida, for a record of 155 days.

The next time you purchase Planters Peanuts, bear in mind, Mr. Peanut and the Planters Peanut Company were created by Amedeo Obici and Mario Peruzzi, two Italian immigrants. Obici, who came to America from Oderzo in 1889, began selling five-cent bags of peanuts on the street. In 1897, he took Peruzzi as his partner. By 1930, the two had four huge factories, and raked in over $12 million annually. Today the Planters Peanut Company has over 5,000 employees.

Time to do some reminiscing with the stately musicologist Albert Natale. When Frank Sinatra first went from the Harry James Band to that of Tommy Dorsey, Frank had to wait out the two weeks' notice being served by Tommy's existing singer, Allan DeWitt. Ruby Keeler had this to say about Al Jolson. "He was my first husband. He used to boast that he was spoiling me for any man who might come after him. I think Al sensed that it wasn't easy for me being married to an American institution ... Was he right about spoiling me? I'm sorry, I couldn't possibly say. I couldn't be that indiscreet." Elliott Gould had this to say about Barbra Streisand. "It didn't help our marriage when I became known as Barbra Streisand's husband. When we met, I was the leading man, she was the newcomer." And Madonna claims "wouldn't mind having an affair with Marlene Dietrich when she was young. Like, who wouldn't?"

The Saint Patrick's Day parade was truly great!

Benvenuti! Let's "day trip" from Piemonte to Liguria to discover the traditional Torta Pasqualina, a savory pie that is prepared once a year to celebrate Easter. This old recipe, dating back to the 1500's, is a mix of Christian and pagan symbolism. According to the legend, the authentic recipe for this pie was prepared with 33 layers of dough to symbolize the life of Christ. Among the other ingredients are eggs to symbolize fertility, renewal, and life. Leafy vegetables symbolize the return of spring and the awakening of nature after the long, cold winter. Another interesting symbolism comes from the cheese used to prepare this pie: as cheese was once considered an expensive ingredient, used only on the occasion of special events like religious festivities. There are many regional varieties of Torta Pasqualina throughout Italy. This savory pie can be eaten warm or cold or even enjoyed the day after its preparation, that's why it is typical to pack some of it in the traditional picnic basket prepared in occasion of Pasquetta (Easter Monday) when Italians traditionally take a day trip to the country to enjoy the outdoors and the fresh breeze of spring, playing, relaxing and taking an afternoon nap under the shade of a tree. Easter eggs in Italy are made out of chocolate for the joy of all children and are called uova di Pasqua. They are handcrafted or store made, wrapped in shiny colorful paper, come in a range of sizes and decorations, and are hollow to be filled with a toy or other gift. It is typical to receive several uova di Pasqua from both family members and friends each year. Buona Pasqua a tutti! (Happy Easter to all!)

Torta Pasqualina (Serves 6)

1 package of puff pastry sheets (2 sheets)	One 12 oz package of regular whole ricotta cheese or goat ricotta cheese
14 oz Swiss chard	½ cup cheese grated
14 oz fresh spinach	Extra virgin olive oil
1 bunch arugula	6 eggs
1 medium onion chopped	Salt and pepper to taste
2 cloves of garlic, peeled and whole	1 tbsp fresh marjoram, chopped
3 Tbsp breadcrumbs

Preparation: wash and chop the Swiss chard, spinach and arugula. In a pan, heat the olive oil, add the garlic, the chopped onion; add a little water then cover to simmer for about 5 minutes. Remove the garlic and add the Swiss chard, spinach and arugula to the pan, stir well and allow to break up (15-20 min). Remove the vegetables from the pan, drain, squeeze out moisture, place in a bowl and mix with breadcrumbs, ricotta, grated cheese and two eggs. Add salt and pepper to taste and stir in the marjoram. Line a 10 inch pie dish with parchment paper, roll out enough (1/8 inch) pie crust dough to cover the base and the sides of the dish. The dough should extend a little over the top edge. Fill the lined dish with ¾ of the vegetable mixture. Level. With a spoon, make 4 deep equidistant hollows and carefully brake 1 egg into each whole. Carefully, without braking the eggs, cover with the rest of the filling, leveling it out. Roll out the remaining dough and cover the filling with it. Press the dough that was left at the edges down firmly over the lid to seal. Pierce the dough and brush with egg wash. Bake in a 350 °F preheated oven for 40 minutes. Allow to cool down before serving. Buon appetito!

Torta Pasqualina (Serve 6)

1 confezione di pasta sfoglia (2 sfoglie)	Una confezione da 300 g di ricotta di capra o mucca
400 g di bieta	50 g di formaggio grattugiato
400 g di spinaci freschi	Olio extra vergine di oliva
1 mazzetto di rucola	6 uova
1 cipolla media tritata	Sale e pepe q.b.
2 spicchi d'aglio pelati e interi	1 cucchiaino di maggiorana fresca, tritata.
3 cucchiaini di pane grattugiato

Preparazione: lava e taglia grossolanamente la bieta, gli spinaci e la rucola. In una padella riscalda l'olio e aggiungi l'aglio, la cipolla tritata e poca acqua quindi copri e cuoci per circa 5 minuti a fiamma bassa. Togli l'aglio e aggiungi la bieta, gli spinaci e la rucola, mescola bene e fai appassire il tutto (15-20 minuti). Rimuovi dalla padella, scola, strizza bene, trasferisci in una terrina e incorpora pane grattugiato, ricotta, formaggio grattugiato e due uova. Regola di sale e pepe e incorpora la maggiorana. Rivesti una tortiera da 25 cm di diametro con della carta forno e rivesti la base con uno strato di pasta spesso 2-3 mm. La pasta deve eccedere i bordi della teglia. Versa ¾ del composto di verdure nella teglia, livellando bene. Con un chucchiaino, pratica 4 conche equidistanti profonde nelle quali romperai le quattro uova rimaste facendo attenzione a non romperle. Delicatamente ricopri con il composto di verdure rimasto, livellando. Ricopri con un disco di pasta sfoglia e chiudi bene i margini. Con una forchetta, pratica dei buchini sulla superficie della torta e spennella con dell'uovo sbattuto. Inforna in forno pre-riscaldato a 180 °C per 40 minuti. Fai raffreddare prima di servire. Buon appetito!

Walking out the door. Revis (24) and Browner (39) transformed the Patriots defense for one magical albeit brief season.

Wilfork Signs with Texans
It was a move that was expected, and nearly matriculated last off-season, but this past Monday, Defensive Tackle Vince Wilfork officially confirmed that he would not be a member of the Patriots in 2015. The 33-year old signed a two-year deal worth $9 million, with $5 million guaranteed to join former Patriots offensive coordinator Bill O'Brien and the Houston Texans. In Houston, Wilfork will also be reunited with former Defensive Coordinator Romeo Crennel and teammate Mike Vrabel.

Wilfork thanked the Patriots organization and fans via twitter Monday afternoon.
The Kraft family will always B family...Thank you Bill for 11 years I have learned so much it's been an amazing run...My brothers on the field I love you all I wish you success & health changing teams will never change our bonds we are brothers forever...To all the fans this is the hardest choice I have ever had to make you guys are my back bone and you guys will always be my heart.

@wilfork75
Wilfork spent 11 years in New England, bookended with two World Championships, but most importantly was a class act throughout.
“He is the best defensive linemen I ever coached, an all-time great Patriot whose place on our team will be missed but whose remarkable career as a Patriot will be remembered forever.”

Nanna & Babbononno

by John Christoforo

A Nostalgic Remembrance

Last week, I ended with an audition at the Charter House Hotel on the Lynnway, at the Revere-Lynn boundary line. When we were to open, it was the same trio I had used in college that consisted of Tony Poto on piano, Rocky Freni on drums and myself on bass. That opening night, which was on a Friday, the management had invited several people in the hotel industry to be their guests. I had personally put ads in the East Boston Times and the Post-Gazette. The hotel advertised in several newspapers north of Boston. As a result, opening night was SRO: standing room only.

We began playing at 9:00 pm. The schedule was 9:00 pm to 1:00 am on Friday night and 8:00 pm to 1:00 am on Saturdays, 40 and 20. This means that we would play for forty minutes and break for twenty, a standard with night club bands back in the day. Well, as I said, we began playing at 9:00 on that opening Friday, and we began with selections from the pens of Cole Porter, Gershwin and Ellington. Tony, the pianist sang a couple of songs during that first set and that helped put us over the top, because when I looked up, the house was full and they applauded loudly. Just as we finished that first set, I spotted people in the crowd from my old neighborhood in East Boston and several friends from the North End. Just then, my eyes stopped at a table to the front left of the make shift stage. There sat my folks and Babbononno. Was I surprised. Dad was sitting there in his tux and I knew that he was supposed to be playing somewhere. When we took that first break, he told me that he had a friend playing the first half of his job, but he had to leave soon, head to Boston and finish the night.

This meant that I would have to drive Mom and Babbononno home. This was going to be a bit complicated as I would have my bass violin to bring with me and all of us would have to travel in my Thunderbird. Fortunately, the T-bird was a four-seater and Mom and Babbononno were on the small side. We eventually worked out the logistics and there would be no problem.

Dad had to leave and congratulated us on a great first set. I couldn't spend much time with my family as the hotel owner, Mr. Mazzeri, called me over to his table and introduced me to several people who were in management positions in the Charter House Hotel chain. They began talking about us touring the circuit and playing a month or two here or there. I smiled and nodded in approval, all the while knowing that no one in the group could travel. Rocky worked for his father who owned a garment factory. Tony had a day job, I believe in banking, and I was teaching at Hyde Park High School. I let them talk about us touring and just kept nodding in the affirmative, all the while knowing that we couldn't travel. I figured that I would cross that bridge when I came to it.

The second set included a lot of standards and jazz classics done in our style, and when it was over, I went table hopping, thanking the friends and neighbors who stopped by to help get us started. After I had made the rounds, one of the bartenders brought me to several tables and introduced me to groups of people from Revere, Medford, Malden and Lynn who came in for opening night. I shook so many hands, I felt like a politician. On the way back to the stage, Babbononno grabbed me by the wrist and said, "Jenny, you take-a me home-a peedy soona, I'ma get lilla stancho (tired)" I whispered back, "Babbononno, you'll have to wait until we finish, but don't worry, I'll buy you your next drink. That did it. I told the waitress that he was my grandfather and not to charge him for his drinks. I would take care of them. I knew that it wouldn't be too expensive. Mom only drank ginger ale and I received a discount of everything because I worked for the hotel.

As I was ready to head back to the stage, Babbononno grabbed my wrist and said, "Jenny, you play foh me, una nyzza canzone italiana (a nice Italian song)"

I said, "Sure, Babbononno, I have just the song for you." I had no idea what to play and searched my books once back on the stage. I finally found an Italian standard called Anema é Core and announced that it was a special request that came from my grandfather. Everyone applauded as I pointed to where he and Mom were sitting. After the first chorus, we added in a jazz feeling. Everyone was happy.

When the evening came to an end, I thanked everyone for coming, introduced the members of the group and welcomed one and all back at any time. As I was packing up, the head waitress came over to me and said that the owner had a room where we could leave our instruments and anything else that could remain in the hotel. This made it easier for me when it came to bringing Mom and Babbononno home. In spite of their diminutive sizes (Mom five feet tall and Babbononno at 4' 11"), they would have been uncomfortable with the lack of leg room in the back seat of the Thunderbird.

The next night, many of the people having dinner in the hotel's dining room had reserved tables in the lounge, and by the end of the first set, it was a sellout, once again. A few were friends from in town who made the trek north to hear what the group sounded like. At one table was a couple, about my age, the man was smirking at me, nodding his head when I looked in his direction. It was someone whom I hadn't seen since we both attended the Barnes School many years earlier. I approached the table and we shook hands and hugged each other. My former classmate introduced me to his date and then said, "When you were a kid going to the Barnes, you were so Gung Ho, all the kids thought you would carve out a career in the military." I laughed and said, "Well things happen in life and wearing a tuxedo for work is as close as I've come to anything that resembles a uniform." We laughed and I went back to work.

The weeks passed and we did rather well. Word got out about the new group at the Charter House and the lounge was packed on weekend nights. We even had people dancing to many of our selections.

This was not my first steady job as a musician, but it was one of the best I had had up to that point. The hotel was fashionable, it was clean, we were paid well and the owner treated us like royalty. After work on that Saturday of the first week at the hotel, I looked back at the entrance to the place, smiled and said to the guys in the band, "Not bad for three of kids from the streets of East Boston."

Who Believes Anything Hillary Says Anyway?

Former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton must think America is a nation of dopes who will believe all her hocus-pocus on why she needed to use her private email address and private server as means of convenience when doing government business. Once she co-mingled her private and government emails on one device, both her email name and her server in the Hamptons belong to the government and not her. She admitted to deleting her private emails and handpicking what government emails she would turn over to the State Department.

She also said she would not turn over her private server. That is outrageous. The government should be deciding what is relevant government emails and what is not.

It smells like a Nixonian cover-up to many, and not just conservative Republicans. It is time for the House Select Committee on Benghazi to subpoena her private server.

By the way, I loved one of her excuses for not turning everything over. She said some of her emails were notes between her and Bubba. I guess she didn't see what President Clinton admitted to the Wall Street Journal a week earlier about almost never using email in his life. He admitted to doing so only two times in his lifetime. Next time the two of them need to get their stories straight.

Obamacrats Seem Out to get Menendez

U.S. Senator Bob Menendez (D-New Jersey), is under fire from the U.S. Justice Department for corruption charges right after he dissented with some of the president's policies. The same kind of allegations that were being made about Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid not that long ago. That investigation of Dirty Harry went nowhere. Apparently, it depends on who is towing the party-line.

Menendez dared to stand up to Obama, Kerry & Company on this crazy on-going Iran agreement. Apparently, Obamacrats want Menendez removed as chair of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It looks like dirty Chicago politics at work. Remember back in the first term when the Obamacare fury was going on? A top White House aide offered fellow Democrats this advice: "If you get hit, we will punch back twice as hard." How about Obama himself back during Campaign 2008 who said that "if they bring a knife to the fight, we bring a gun."

This kind of stuff sounds so Chicago, doesn't it? Clearly, when it comes to corruption, New Jersey is now the J.V. team to Chicago's Varsity team, huh?

How many agree with me that Sen. Menendez may only be guilty of standing up to Obama?

Stupid Republican Senate Not Committing Treason

Apparently, the moonbats are livid over that letter sent by 47 Republicans in the U.S. Senate to the Islamo-Nazis in Tehran. These progressive leftists call the GOP actions an act of treason and want them put on trial for treason for violating the 1799 Logan Act.

Usually, Obamacrats are attacking old things like the Constitution or Bill of Rights as outdated, but in this case they have stretched back to the same old white male slave owners they are always bashing. The Logan Act made any negotiations with foreign powers by individuals and not the government itself an act of treason. What the Republican senators did seems rather stupid by giving the Iranians a civics lesson. It only produced bad P.R. for them as usual. They never seem to learn from their mistakes.

The president is trying to do another end-run around Capitol Hill by calling what he is doing simply an agreement — not a treaty needing Senate ratification. Libs should be upset with President Obama and Secretary of State John F. Kerry about their end-run around the Constitutional safeguards in our democratic republic.

An agreement is just a piece of paper. Let Obama think he won. When we elect a new president, the new president can just rip it up and say "no thanks" to it.

HISTORY OF FOOTBALL IN BOSTON — PART II

1920s

In 1929, professional football officially arrived in the City of Boston when the Maroons of Pottsville, Pennsylvania relocated to the city. Renamed the Boston Bulldogs, the organization and owner Robert McKirby found the move to be short lived as the team folded following their 4-4 inaugural campaign.

game lead over Pottsville, giving the Cardinals the title. The move to Boston was largely facilitated by a 2-8 season in 1928, which prompted owner Doc Streigel, a retired surgeon with deep pockets, to finally decide he was losing too much money to keep both Pottsville and himself afloat. He sold the team to a group from New En-

The 1929 Boston Bulldogs, the first professional football team in the city.

Prior to relocating, the Pottsville Maroons entered the National Football League in 1920 and enjoyed a rather star-crossed existence, as they were the rightful NFL Champions of the 1925 season. However, controversy hit the Maroons, who bested the second place Chicago Cardinals, today's Arizona franchise, 21-7 to clinch the best record in football at 10-2. This was before a playoff or Championship game was instituted, so the best overall record would equal a Championship. The league allowed teams to play some games following the official completion of the season to create more revenue. The Maroons decided to play a team of Notre Dame All-Stars in Philadelphia, which upset the local Frankford Yellow Jackets, citing that the Maroons had invaded their territory. The league agreed, suspending the Maroons, which allowed the Chicago Cardinals to gain a half gland headed by McKirby. The team, which donned blue uniforms, would play its home games at Braves Field, home of Baseball's National League Braves. The first professional football game for a Boston football team ended in defeat, as the Bulldogs were bested 7-0 by the Orange Tornadoes in New Jersey. The team's first win came at home a week later versus the Dayton Triangles by a thunderous 41-0 score. From there the team would split their remaining six games, finishing in fifth place in the NFL standings, but having never played the top four teams, the Green Bay Packers, New York Giants, Frankford Yellow Jackets and Chicago Cardinals. Professional football was a tough sell to the Boston fan base and it would not be any less challenging for the next pro franchise to call the city home.

JABAAL ABOARD!

Having lost out on retaining the services of all pro cornerback Darrelle Revis, the New England Patriots turned their focus to bolstering the defensive front seven by adding end/outside linebacker Jabaal Sheard, who spent his first four years in the league with the Cleveland Browns. Sheard made an immediate impact his rookie season tallying 8.5 sacks, and followed that up with a decent sophomore campaign with 7.0 sacks. His next two seasons in Cleveland were marred by continuous upheaval within that organization with a change in coaching staff bringing with it a brand new defensive philosophy. Sheard fell out of grace with the Browns, which clearly factored into his declining numbers, which saw Sheard register only 2.0 sacks last season.

BROWNER DEPARTURE REINFORCES SECONDARY CONCERNS

Last Tuesday, before news broke that Darrelle Revis had agreed to return to the New York Jets, the Patriots declined a $4.8 million option on Cornerback Brandon Browner making him a free agent. Although he was the most penalized player in the league during the 2014 regular season with 15 accepted penalties, Browner brought a physicality to the defensive unit that had been lacking since Safety Rodney Harrison roamed the team's secondary. Amazingly not one of his penalties directly led to a Patriots loss. Browner was of the mindset that referees would throw some penalty flags, but they wouldn't call them all; he could get away with a few here and there. Browner finalized a three-year contract with the New Orleans Saints last Thursday. With the losses of the teams top two cornerbacks, and with limited quality free agent options at the position, Head Coach Bill Belichick and Director of Player Personnel Nick Caserio now find themselves with a depleted secondary that may call upon slot corners from 2014, Kyle Arrington and Super Bowl hero Malcolm Butler, who made the greatest interception in Super Bowl history, but who is still an unproven commodity, thrust into starting roles. If the team is intent on rolling out the a 2.62 ERA and has become the primary setup guy for closer Koji Uehara. He had Tommy John surgery in 2010 and after the procedure, he went from a starter to a great relief pitcher.

Lester Opening Day Pitcher

Jon Lester will start for the Cubs on Opening Day. The former Red Sox ace signed a 6-year, $155 million deal in December and will take the mound on April 5th against the Cardinals.

Remy's Near Fenway
Closes

Jerry Remy's Sports Bar & Grill on Boylston Street near Fenway Park has closed. Apparently, in the off-season without baseball, the burgers were going very slowly. It's not always about location, sometimes it really is all about baseball games.

Happy Birthday to Rice

Former Boston Red Sox slugger Jimmy Rice recently turned a young 52.

Masterson Moves Up to Third Place

Former Red Sox pitcher Justin Masterson is back in the fold. He is now considered the number 3 starter in the Sox rotation. Last year, he was hurt and finished 7-9 with a 5.98 ERA. We got him back for a one-year $9.5 million bargain. Back in 2008 as a rookie for the Sox at age 23, he was a great setup guy. In 2013 with the Indians, he went 14-10 with a decent 3.45 ERA, from the Indians, he went to the Cardinals last season.

He is now back with us in Boston where it all began for him. Hopefully the arm still has magic on the mound for us. The season will tell.

Rocky 2 — Part 2

What if Marciano had made a Comeback?

Rocky With Trainer Charley Goldman.

It turned out Rocky Marciano never did enter the ring again, and we will never know if he had been really serious when talking about a comeback in 1959. But, let's suppose that he was and that he did. What would have happened? Could he have regained the title, and if he did, who would have been his challengers for it?

Ingemar Johansson won the Heavyweight Championship from Floyd Patterson on June 6, 1959. It has been said that when Rocky met Ingo he immediately felt he could take him easily. Rocky even set up a training camp in Florida and started getting serious about such a matchup. He was also reportedly offered in excess of a million dollars for the fight. Let's say he accepted the offer and continued training.

The first obstacle would be getting Cus D'Amato to negate the rematch clause that Floyd and Ingemar had. I believe this could have been done. First, because Floyd would have been given a substantial sum for not fighting along with a guaranteed shot at the winner, and second, because D'Amato would know that a fight between Patterson and Marciano (assuming Rocky won) would bring in more money than ever seen before. Also, I believe Cus would be convinced Floyd could take Rocky.

With the problem of the Patterson-Johansson rematch out of the way, Rocky could now start training in earnest for the bout. Marciano's last fight had been in September of 1955. It would now be over four years since he had been in the ring or in training for a fight. By the time the fight could be arranged and publicized, it wouldn't take place until June 1960 at the earliest (That was when the Patterson rematch took place), so it would now be close to five years since the former champion had fought. That is an eternity in boxing. Jim Jeffries had been out of action for nearly six years when he made his comeback against Jack Johnson, and while he looked to be in great physical shape, he was a shell of his former self. Of course, Johansson was no Jack Johnson.

Would Rocky have had any warm up bouts so he could work on getting his timing back? No, the promoters would not want to risk having the public see the former champ not looking his best. The selling point in this match up would be the belief that the Rocky of five years ago would be stepping into the ring. They would be taking no chances that the former champ would be seen as anything less than super human. Five years is a long time off for a boxer, but this was not just any boxer, this was Rocky Marciano, the man who had never been defeated, Rocky the indestructible.

Johansson was also undefeated at the time, meaning this would be the first meeting of two undefeated Heavyweight Champions who could lay claim to the title. Rocky had never lost the title, he just loaned it to these other guys while he took some time off.

Rocky would train hard for this fight as he always had. He would push his 37-year-old body as hard as he could. His chronic back problems would plague him. His trainer, Charley Goldman, concerned that he is going at it too hard, would try to get Marciano to moderate his workouts. Charley knows that an older fighter can easily leave his fight in the gym, but Rocky doesn't know how to workout at half speed. He gets his body looking like the Champion of 1955, he is flooring sparring partners as he still has his punch. In the public workouts he is looking sharp and formidable, but those who are there for the private sparring sessions notice his timing is off. He is not able to crouch down as low as he used to, and he is just a bit slower. His desire is there though and he is training to win.

Over in the Johansson camp it is a different story. Since winning the title, Ingo has been living the life of a movie star. Training is a bother and a chore to him, and he figures he can beat this old man without any trouble. Rocky is slow and easy to hit, and Johansson has his Hammer of Thor which he knows he can land on Rocky's jaw whenever he wants to. It should be an easy night and a big payday.

It is June of 1960 and the whole world is watching Yankee Stadium as the two undefeated Champions enter the ring. This fight is not only sold out at the stadium, but close circuit showings around the world are filled. This will be the most watched sporting event in history. Introductions are made, the referee gives his instructions to the fighters, and the bell rings for round one.

So, what happens? I think Rocky would not have looked good for the first couple of rounds. He would have been missing and probably would hit the deck either from a punch or from being off balance. Fans would be disappointed and saddened to see their idol looking so far off his game. But Rocky would not quit. Despite taking Ingo's best shots he keeps after him. In his prime Rocky would have ended this bout after a couple of rounds, but this one goes much longer. Heading into the tenth round, Johansson can't believe the old man is still coming after him. It seems as if Rocky is getting stronger while the Swede is feeling the effects of not only the punches he has been absorbing but also those late nights out on the town. Rocky pummels the Champion to the canvas where he lies exhausted and beaten. Rocky Marciano is once again Heavyweight Champion of the World.

What now? Would Rocky go on to defend the title against a crop of hungry young heavyweights? Guys like Floyd Patterson, Sonny Liston, Zora Folley, Eddie Machen, or maybe even a youngster named Cassius Clay? I'd like to think that he would have made this a one shot deal and grabbed his money and ran. I believe this is what he would have done. He would also now have a 50-0 record.

I am glad this fight never took place. Just training for it would have been murder for the Rock. I am happy with 49-0 and also glad there was at least one champion who was able to walk away from this brutal game and stay away.

HOOPS and HOCKEY in the HUB

by Richard Preiss

It was a happy bunch of Celtics that left for a brief road trip in their new role as one of the hottest teams in the NBA. Just think, after languishing in the nether world of the Eastern Conference for so long, the C's were suddenly in a three-way tie for seventh place and looking upward.

The road to a possible post season berth has been amazing. As of St. Patrick's Day, the Green had won 10 of their last 13 games — including 5 in a row and 7 of their last 8 games. That brought their season record to 30-36.

But just in case you thought the winning experience might be getting to their heads, think again.

"I haven't heard them talk about it (possible playoff berth) once," said Celtics Head Coach Brad Stevens with reference to his players. "I'm dead serious. I don't hear it. I have not heard them say who is Miami playing or who is Charlotte playing today. They haven't talked about it around me. I just want them to play good basketball and I think our guys want to play good basketball. I think as a result you have a lot more fun when you spray the ball around the way we're spraying it around and when you're competing together and pulling for one another and five guys are playing together defensively."

And maybe that is the key. The Celtics finally are a team — not a collection of individuals, some of whom were just passing through on their way to other places. It may seem hard to believe, but a total of 25 players have been on the roster for the C's this year. That instability is over, steadiness is now the hallmark and the very real potential of earning a playoff berth is a reality.

"The whole year we've been changing," noted Tyler Zeller after pouring in a career high 26 points against Philadelphia at the Garden. "I think Danny (Ainge) has done a great job putting together the team that we've got. We've been playing with different players every night and finally have a team where we've settled in, playing with the same players every night. It's fun to go battle that way. We do a great job of playing hard and playing together."

And Avery Bradley credits Coach Stevens: "We've been in just about every game since the All-Star break so it shows that we're making strides and we're continuing to be a better team. I think it all starts with Brad. He's getting us all together, having us believe in one another. We're like a family out there. We're a lot closer than we were earlier in the season and it shows on the court."

And Bradley, like his fellow teammates, takes every game as a challenge. "It's a blessing, that's the best thing about the NBA. Every night you get a chance to go up against another great opponent and go out there and get a win. You get a chance to prove you're improving as a team, improving as individuals. We're definitely showing that everyone's improving."

Indeed, it's an exciting brand of basketball that these Celtics are playing with the ball being whipped around the court until an open man is found. What we've found interesting is that the Celtics seem to have a repertoire of surprise plays, any one of which often stuns the crowd into amazement if carried out successfully. There are behind-the-back passes, back door plays, hook shots and scoring attempts from the corner — after getting a pass from a player at the other corner. It's fun to watch and sure keeps fans engaged.

Gone are the days from earlier in the season when the Celtics folded in the second half and lost the game. They might still lose, but it won't be as often and it won't be because they simply folded in the latter stages of the game.

Gone also is the talk of tanking that prevailed in some quarters earlier in the season. We know Coach Stevens and the players never bought into that, but a good number of fans obviously thought it was the way to go. It was a topic that consumed some segments of the media in the first few months of the season.

Now, talk has properly shifted as to how high the Celtics might finish in their quest for a playoff berth and what a stunning reversal of fortune that would mean if that eventually came to pass. As the day after St. Patrick's Day dawned, the Celtics were still in that three-way tie for seventh with Indiana and Miami with 16 games remaining in the regular season.

It's obviously a very fluid situation, but right now it seems that it's the Celtics that are rising. Sure, they are going to lose again before the regular season ends. But those setbacks won't dispel the positive attitude that is surging through the Celtics locker room as the campaign comes down to the wire. The Celtics were still 30-36 on the morning of March 18th and for the first time in a long time, the possibility (however slim), of drawing even at .500 was on the horizon.

There's a host of reasons for the odds to be against it. Then again, how many would have thought that the Celtics would actually be contending for a playoff berth with less than a month to go in the regular season? In a season of surprises there may be more that come to pass.
