DEATH

PENALTY

Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev was sentenced to death on Wednesday, June 24, 2015. Tsarnaev will most likely be sent to the death row at The United States Penitentiary in Terre Haute, Indiana, a high-security federal prison for male inmates. USP Terre Haute houses a Special Confinement Unit for inmates who have been sentenced to death.

Mayors Coffee Hour

The rain held off for the annual Mayor's Coffee Hour with Marty Walsh at Christopher Columbus Park on Tuesday, June 16th. Dozens of North End and Waterfront residents came out to speak with Mayor Walsh about various issues. In his remarks, Walsh noted that he is hearing a lot about development and traffic concerns. Also speaking at the event were State Rep. Aaron Michlewitz and Boston Parks Commissioner Chris Cook.

Rep. Michlewitz and Mayor Walsh used the occasion to recognize longtime neighborhood coordinator Nicole Leo, who is leaving for a new position at City Hall. Mayor Walsh also announced that North End native Maria Lanza will be taking up the liaison position for the neighborhood. As always, complementary Dunkin' Donuts coffee and potted plants from the city's nursery were handed out to attendees.

Quote to Note

"We have a significant population gap among African-American males because so many of them have spent time in jail and, as such, we can't hire them."

— NYC Police Commissioner Billy Bratton over the issue of appointing minority cops

The San Patricios Battalion

Back in 1998, there was a documentary about the tragic story of St. Patrick's Battalion, which fought shoulder to shoulder with the Mexican Army during the U.S.-Mexican War of 1846. These men were mostly Irish immigrants who deserted the U.S. Army to fight for Mexico. Were they traitors or heroes?

Back following the Battle of the Alamo, when General Santa Anna was captured, he said there was no good or bad, just winners and losers. If you haven't seen this documentary, you should see it if you are a lover of history.

This group of Irish soldiers was led by Capt. John Riley from County Galway. He was captured and executed by his former comrades in the U.S. Army. This is a story virtually unknown to every American ... a perfect example of historical amnesia.

"Honor Box" Payment System at MBTA Parking Lots to be Eliminated

Effective July 6th, the so-called "honor box" payment system will no longer exist at MBTA parking lots. The MBTA is eliminating the much-maligned process of folding individual dollar bills and stuffing them into tiny slots. The easier, more convenient payment method is PayByPhone which allows customers to pay parking fees by using any phone or any internet connected device. PayByPhone is already used by more than 75% of MBTA customers parking in "honor box" lots throughout the transit system.

Another convenient option for customers is the monthly permit system, which includes a built-in discount. At "honor box" lots where the daily parking fee is commonly $4.00, a $70.00 monthly permit can save daily parking customers up to $30.00 a month. In August, monthly permits will have another benefit when they become "universal." One permit will be accepted at any MBTA parking facility with the same or lower daily parking fee. To learn more about the monthly permit, further information is available at www.mbta.com/riding_the_t. For customers who choose not to sign up for PayByPhone, the MBTA will mail a monthly invoice to the address listed on the vehicle owner's registration. Customers choosing the invoice method of payment will pay 50 cents more than PayByPhone customers. If invoices remain unpaid for more than 30 days, subsequent reminder invoices and notices of non-payment will be accompanied by a fine. Similar to All Electronic Tolling used on the Tobin Bridge, this payment system is licensed plate based and eliminates the need to pay for MBTA parking using cash.

Effective Monday, July 6th, PayByPhone customers can make payments over the phone at 1-866-234-7275, or using the PayByPhone app. Customers are encouraged to sign up for PayByPhone at www.paybyphone.com.

PARKING PRICES:

PayByPhone customers pay $4 to $7 depending on parking lot.

Invoice customers pay $4.50 to $7.50 depending on parking lot.

Discounted monthly permits range in price from $70 to $90.

INVOICE SCHEDULE PLUS FINES AND PENALTIES:

Monthly invoice: For parking transactions within the preceding 30-day period, customers have 30 days from invoice date to make payment.

30 days after invoice: 2nd notice mailed — each unpaid parking transaction is assessed a $21 late fine.

30 days after 2nd notice: 3rd notice mailed — each parking transaction not paid as of 3rd notice date results in a

A weekly column highlighting some of the more interesting aspects of our ancestry . . . our lineage . . . our roots.

HERCULES, THE LEGENDARY STRONG MAN

Mythology identifies Primary Beings, Titans, gods, and demigods. They have all been discussed in previous issues, except the demigods. This last group is imagined to be the offspring from the union of a god with a mortal being. Dardanus, the founder of Troy, King Minos of Crete, Helen of Troy, Aeneas, the ancestor of the Romans, and Hercules are some of the better known demigods. Hercules (Heracles in Greek) is claimed to be one of the most ancient and most famous of all mythological heroes, and his legendary accomplishments are said to be the richest and most comprehensive of all myths.

Hercules was born in the ancient Greek city of Thebes, the son of the god Zeus and a mortal named Alcmene. The legend tells of Alcmene being visited by Zeus one evening, and by her husband on the following evening. Consequently, she gave birth to twin boys. One child was named Hercules and the other was named Iphicles. Visits of this nature were not uncommon in the many legends of Zeus (that little rascal.) Hera, the wife of Zeus, was not unaware of her husband's extramarital activities. Usually, her only recourse was to hate the illegitimate children with a passion, and to do all in her power to cause them misery and despair during their adult lives. As a test to determine which boy was the son of Zeus, two snakes were placed in the crib with the brothers. Iphicles screamed in terror, but Hercules grabbed the snakes by the throat and strangled them.

As Hercules grew into young manhood, a number of famous athletes contributed to his education in the various sports. He was instructed in chariot racing, wrestling, archery, and fencing. Linus, the brother of Orpheus, also instructed the strong man in the use of the lyre.

By the time he reached the age of seventeen, Hercules was over six feet tall and an expert marksman with bow and spear. His amazing strength, coupled with his excellent training in wrestling, commanded the greatest respect from all who knew him. This notoriety soon came to the attention of King Thespius, whose flocks were being ravaged by a ferocious lion. When asked if he would stalk and kill the beast, Hercules refused. Some early writers, in a humorous report, indicate that the king's fifty daughters, plus great quantities of wine, convinced Hercules to change his mind. Other writers insist that Hercules conserved his strength for the fight with the lion, and that his rewards came after he slew the beast.

The next phase in the story of this legendary strong man is most important as it identifies the series of events which led to the imposition of the celebrated "Labors of Hercules." (The principal characters involved in those labors were sculpted in marble by Phidias on the frieze of the Parthenon in Athens, Greece. Some of these pieces are now in the British Museum as part of the Elgin Marbles that Lord Elgin stole from Greece about 1800 A.D.) Hercules aided King Creon of Thebes in a war against the Minyae (an ancient race in Thessaly.) As a reward for this service, Hercules received the Princess Megara for his wife. Later, in a period of madness brought on by the unrelenting hostility of the goddess Hera, Hercules killed his wife and children. When he regained his senses, he was horrified at what he had done. Upon seeking advice from a high priest, he was told that as punishment for his crime he was required to go to Tiryns, a small country on the plains of Argos and perform whatever ten labors their king Eurystheus would demand of him. Also, if he was successful in these tasks he would achieve immortality along with purification of the murders.

NEXT WEEK:
The labors of Hercules.

Five Congressional Democrats from Massachusetts Vote against Bay State Jobs

This month, the U.S. House voted to repeal the medical device tax, a job-killing impediment to growth and innovation in Massachusetts. The Commonwealth hosts over 400 medical device firms directly responsible for 25,000 jobs and impacting over 80,000 more in related industries. Yet five Massachusetts Democratic congressmen voted to stand against Massachusetts workers by maintaining the medical device tax, which costs these companies over $400 million annually. MassGOP Chairman Kirsten Hughes released the following statement:

"Given the size and scope of the medical device industry in the Commonwealth, this tax is a direct attack on Massachusetts. The Massachusetts Democrats who voted to keep this job-killing impediment to growth have shown that they care less about the interests of the Commonwealth and more about their partisan Washington, D.C. agenda."

The five Massachusetts Democrats who voted against 400 Massachusetts companies and 100,000 Massachusetts workers are Michael Capuano, Joseph Kennedy, James McGovern, Richard Neal, and Niki Tsongas.

"Legislation repealing the 2.3 percent federal tax on medical devices cleared the U.S. House Thursday on a vote of 280-140, and an industry leader in Massachusetts predicted the proposal would pass the Senate if it emerges for a vote but faces a veto from President Barack Obama. Members of the Massachusetts delegation were split on the vote, with four voting for repeal and five voting against repeal." (Michael Norton, US House votes to repeal medical device tax, State House News Service, 6/17/15)

The costs of the medical device tax affect tens of thousands of Massachusetts jobs and hundreds of Massachusetts businesses in the health care sector, according to a recent study by the Pioneer Institute. "The new report, authored by Pioneer Health Care Policy Director, Josh Archambault and Xiaofei (Jackie) Zhou, examines the potential impacts on the over 400 medical device companies in Massachusetts, making the state the second highest concentration of employees in the nation, at 24,268. The law could also impact 82,000 additional jobs in related industries." ("New Report: Medical Device Tax Will Cost MA Employers $422 Million+ Per Year," Pioneer Institute, 4/18/13)

* Annual Percentage Rate

This rate is effective June 19, 2015 and subject to change without notice. Rates and Annual Percentage Rate are calculated based on a $200,000 loan, for single owner-occupied dwellings, with 20% down and no points. APR's will be slightly higher on 2, 3 or 4 family owner occupied dwellings; however will have the same interest rate as single family dwellings. Rates on Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARM) are subject to change after the consummation of the loan and is subject to credit approval. Caps on the 5/1 ARM and 7/1 ARM are 2/6. The 5/1 ARM has a floor of 2.875%. Rates and payments are fixed for the first 5 years, then adjust annually at 2.75% above the weekly average yield on the U.S. Treasury Index adjusted to a constant maturity of 1 year. The principal and interest payment for a 5/1 ARM with 0 points is $4.15 per $1,000 borrowed for the first 60 months. Future payments reflecting the fully indexed rate for 300 months would be $4.21 per $1,000 borrowed. The 7/1 ARM has a floor of 3.375%. Rates and payments are fixed for the first 7 years, then adjust annually at 2.75% above the weekly average yield on the U.S. Treasury Index adjusted to a constant maturity of 1 year. The principal and interest payment for a 7/1 ARM with 0 points is $4.42 per $1,000 borrowed for the first 60 months. Future payments reflecting the floor of 3.375% for 300 months would be $4.42 per $1,000 borrowed. These payments do not include taxes and insurance therefor the actual payment obligation may be greater. This rate reflects automatic deduction from a checking account. Rate will increase 0.25% if consumer elects not to have automatic deduction from checking account. Property must be an owner-occupied dwelling in the Massachusetts communities of Chelsea, East Boston, Everett, Lynn, Lynnfield, Peabody, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Revere, Saugus, Somerville, Winthrop. Rates outside of these communities will increase 0.125%. Restrictions apply for minimum credit score, maximum loan-to-value ratio, debt ratio, household income and loan amount, and other credit underwriting factors.

L'Anno Bello: A Year in Italian Folklore

WILL RETURN NEXT WEEK ...

Dear L'Anno Bello Readers:

I am happy to announce that my husband and I are expecting a baby boy in the fall! We are so excited to introduce him to the Italian culture and traditions that I regularly write about. Expect to see an article about Italian baby-related traditions soon!

In the meantime, if anyone knows of any Italian superstitions or customs concerning pregnancy, birth or babies, let me know, so I can incorporate them into the article!

Thank you for reading, and I am happy to share this news with you.

Sincerely,

Ally Di Censo Symynkywicz

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Sal Giarratani

Simple as Black or White, Isn't It?

We have all heard the story about the boy who cried wolf once too often. Well, this story tops that one. Here we have a woman who grew up white with blue eyes and blond hair who now believes she is black, or at least that's what she keeps repeating to anyone in earshot.

Rachel Dolezal, 37, was the fiery president of the NAACP Spokane, WA Chapter until she decided to get out when the getting is good. The jig is up passing for African American. Never thought anyone ever did that. Usually, it is the other way around.

She reportedly darkened her skin, changed her eye color and even crimped her hair into an Angela Davis hairdo from the '70s. When asked by a TV reporter a couple weeks ago if she was posing as African American when she's really white, her answer was, "I don't understand the question." The rest of us understand that question and it's the answer that says it all. Has she been posing so long as something she is not that she now believes she is? If that's the case, she doesn't just have a racial identification problem, things are far worse than that.

She graduated from Howard University, and according to those who knew her, she was already going black back then. According to her thesis advisor at that historic black college, "She was a blue-eyed blonde woman," a view most of her professors also saw in her.

According to the NY Post, around 2007, she started posing in public as a black woman and reportedly even told folks her dad was black. She is Czech, Swedish, German and a tiny bit American Indian. Her parents are both white, which makes Racial, oops I mean Rachel, as black as a loaf of white Wonder Bread. Her parents are very upset with all her pretense and can't figure out where it all came from.

Well, let's see, she got a job with the Spokane Police Department while seemingly posing as African American and she even got a good paying job at Eastern Washington University where she held a part-time teaching position in the African American Studies Department. Duh, sounds like she did well for herself passing as an African American, huh?

I still find it difficult to understand how she did it, since she really doesn't pass for anything but a dark skinned white lady using the wrong color foundation.

Things have changed much in modern culture — we can choose our hair color, our religion, and our politics. But we can't choose our race. On this, it is still as simple as black or white.

MOST CONVENIENT AND FASTEST WAY TO COMMUTE BETWEEN ROME AND MILAN. It has taken some time for people to realize how convenient the train is, rather than the plane, to travel between the two cities. Business people who used to take the plane, allegedly to save time, have discovered that using the train for their daily commute is far less expensive than the plane. They also discovered it is quicker. The reason being is that the train departs from the downtown of either city, saving a lot of time spent at the airport for the ritual long security inspection, as well as other impediments. The world EXPO that began on May 1st, and will close on November 1st, has given a big burst to the daily commuters, realizing that the train is easy to board at the station, at any time. The high-speed trains that operate between Italy's major cities now offer speedy travel, not available before. At the end of 2014, the number of commuters who took the train (between the two largest Italian cities) rose above 52%, mainly by business travelers. With regard to other major cities, the flight destinations have seen a considerable jump in air traffic, albeit modest. Nonetheless, we would like to submit to our readers that the most expensive Italian city remains Venice, where the cost of a hotel room, or a dinner at a typical restaurant, has gone sky-high! Thus, if you plan to visit the city in the lagoon in the near future, you can save a lot by staying at Mestre, last stop of the train right before Venice. Buon Viaggio!

A PRECOCIOUS INVENTOR AND SUCCESSFUL BUSINESSMAN AT THE RIPE AGE OF ... 16! Antonio Lui is only 16, but he came up with a new idea: How to sell web Services at a very low cost. The invention is very remarkable, but not easy to implement. Because of his age he cannot run his own business. He is considered a minor, and in Italy he cannot legally send a bill for payment to customers. The resourceful Antonio decided to contact one of his school teachers who suggested creating a cooperative. Fortunately, there was one that two teachers and eight students had founded ten years earlier. He now has a web site (island of host) that offers web services to businesses at a low cost. Furthermore, businessmen can reach him anytime, any day, to ask for a solution to a problem "at once" with a smart phone, or P.C.!

A Wonderful Weekend

by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari

In a time when extended families seem to be a thing of the past, we have had the good fortune to have our relationships go in just the opposite direction. Not only has our family remained closely knit but, over the years we as have been able to overcome distance to renew and sustain relationships that mean the world to us.

Two weekends ago, cousins of ours from New York and New Jersey came to Boston for a visit on their way to Maine for a brief vacation. They were anxious to tour the North End and visit the places their grandmother, who is also our Aunt Mary, grew up. They arrived on Saturday and it was great to see them as it had been several months since we last got together in New York. We quickly caught up with news of the family and we were off to the North End for a quick visit to our apartment, then lunch at a great seafood restaurant. We then drove out of the city to attend a birthday party and introduce the cousins to another branch of the family. Then it was back to the North End and dinner at our favorite restaurant where the food was great, the ambiance fun and the company the best — it was a wonderful evening! It was there that we promised to join them the following day for a walk along Ogunquit's beautiful Marginal Way.

Sunday began early with Mass at Sacred Heart Church, then breakfast and finally the promised tour of the North End. We visited Saint Leonard's where Aunt Mary was baptized and Hanover Avenue where she lived as a child. We then drove through the narrow streets of the North End that had changed little in appearance in the years since Aunt Mary walked and played in them so many years ago.

It was then back to the hotel to check out and we were off to Ogunquit where we were walking the Marginal Way in little more than two hours. It was a spectacular afternoon, the weather could not have been more perfect and we took full advantage of it with photos taken in every combination of ourselves imaginable. We then searched out the restaurant serving the perfect lobster roll and when we found it we had an enjoyable dinner together.

Our favorite part of the day (and their visit for that matter) came late in the afternoon, when we sat together on the deck of their suite. The sun was low in the sky and the ocean in the distance formed a perfect setting for a lovely hour of remembrances, while we munched on the local goodies, especially the homemade chocolate. It was simply one of those memorable moments in life that comes unexpectedly, that you know will always remain close to you.

In these rapidly changing times where life seems to be becoming more impersonal and indifferent, our cousins' visit served to remind us how important it is to take the time to remain close to family and friends.

ABOUT THIS & THAT

with Daniel A. DiCenso

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE

(August 15, 1769-May 5, 1821)

More than Meets the History Books

What more can be said about Napoleon Bonaparte? Well, the main facts of his life are well known, but given how little room has been allowed for interpretation and how much has given way to myth, I would say still quite a bit.

First, let's get one thing straight, the term "Napoleon complex" is based on false information. Napoleon was not a short guy. At 5'7" he was of average height for his time. It's possible the false legend was started by his name, which translates to "The Little General," though in a figurative sense. But it likely had more to do with the British propaganda machine attempting to discredit their national enemy.

Be that as it may, there can be little doubt that Napoleon led France through many bloody battles before his defeat at Waterloo in 1815 and his second imprisonment in St. Helena, where he died in 1821. Thus he has gained the distinction of being responsible for more bloodshed in European history than any other military leader, though modern historians dispute the extent of his involvement in many of the battles and wars that bear his name.

However true this savage reputation, there is much, that Napoleon did that is to his credit. While these things may not be as relevant to his legacy as his war tactics, they are worth noting for a full portrait of the man.

It's important to remember that Napoleon rose to power, as second lieutenant in France's La Fere Artillery, supporting the Jacobin faction during the French Revolution. This was a time of much confusion in France and hostilities were high, especially toward the establishment and everything it stood for, including religion. Over in the Vatican, Pope Pius VI tried to maintain a certain level of peace, but after the death of French Ambassador Mathurin-Léonard Duphot, who was killed at the embassy in Rome, General Berthier had reason to invade and demand the pope renounce power. When Pius VI refused, he was arrested and consequently executed.

Napoleon had been trying to restore the Catholic Church in France for some time, and this incident proved the perfect way in. One thing Napoleon always pushed for was religious tolerance. One of his first orders of business was signing the Concordat of 1801, allowing the Catholic Church back into France after church officials had been hounded out during the Revolution. In a surprising move, Napoleon began reaching out to the European Jewish population, dismantling the ghetto in Venice and granting Jews equal rights.

This was all part of the Napoleonic Code which, at its best, was based on enlightenment ideals. This granted all male citizens equal rights regardless of religion or economic status and devised programs to fund the maintenance of infrastructure and established public schools.

While there were many good points to Napoleon's early influence, there were many areas where he stepped directly backwards and showed telling signs of his ultimate downfall. The Napoleonic Code reduced the rights of women and reintroduced slavery in a lot of French colonies.

What happened to Napoleon around this time is an all too common trait among leaders. His power turned him into a megalomaniac with a loony idea of conquering the world. He got into the habit of censorship and imposed austere laws in the lands he conquered, such as banning the Venetian carnival. There was more than a hint of vanity in the way he fought wars, stealing artwork and jewelry from a lot of the lands he conquered.

The wars that bear his name proved very costly, both financially and in terms of casualties. A lot of European farmland was destroyed as well as infrastructure and, outside of Great Britain, the financial and structural devastation resulting from the Napoleonic Wars proved a major obstacle in the Industrial Age.

Even some of Napoleon's own men turned against him and deserted. The turning point was his invasion of Russia in 1812, where his stubbornness and pride led to the death of many of his men while many others deserted after suffering brutal battle conditions in a harsh environment.

Napoleon Bonaparte is one of the most talked about, ridiculed, and disdained military leaders in history. It is precisely that which has buried the more complicated man behind the legend. The blood ran high in his battles and so did his passions and motivations, which deserve a study themselves.

Fourth of July

The Fourth of July is not far off, so here are some safety tips for my pooch friends and their human companions for ALL the pooches out there that don't like fireworks because they hurt our ears. For many people, nothing beats lounging in the backyard on the Fourth of July with good friends and family, including the four-legged members of the household. While it may seem like a great idea to reward Oliver with scraps from the grill and bring him along to watch the fireworks, in reality some festive foods and products can be potentially hazardous to your pets.

Never leave alcoholic drinks unattended where pets can reach them. Alcoholic beverages have the potential to poison pets. If ingested, the animal could become very intoxicated and weak, severely depressed or could go into a coma. Death from respiratory failure is also a possibility in severe cases.

Do not apply any sunscreen or insect repellent product to your pet that is not labeled specifically for use on animals. Ingestion of sunscreen products can result in drooling, vomiting, diarrhea, excessive thirst and lethargy. The misuse of insect repellent that contains DEET can lead to neurological problems.

Always keep matches and lighter fluid out of your pets reach. Certain types of matches contain chlorates, which could potentially damage blood cells and result in difficulty breathing or even kidney disease in severe cases. Lighter fluid can be irritating to skin and, if ingested can produce gastrointestinal irritation and central nervous system depression. If lighter fluid is inhaled, aspiration pneumonia and breathing problems could develop.

Keep your pets on their normal diet. A change, even for one meal, can give your pets severe indigestion and diarrhea. This is particularly true for older animals who have more delicate digestive systems and nutritional requirements. And keep in mind that foods such as onions, chocolate, coffee, avocado, grapes, raisins, salt and yeast dough can all be potentially toxic to companion animals.

Do not put glow jewelry on your pets, or allow them to play with it. The luminescent substance contained in these products is not highly toxic, but excessive drooling and gastrointestinal irritation could still result from ingestion, and intestinal blockage could occur from swallowing large pieces of the plastic containers.

Keep citronella candles, insect coils and oil products out of reach. Ingestion can produce stomach irritation and possibly even central nervous system depression. If inhaled, the oils could cause aspiration pneumonia in pets.

Never use fireworks around pets! While exposure to lit fireworks can potentially result in severe burns and/or trauma to the face and paws of curious pets, even unused fireworks can pose a danger. Many types contain potentially toxic substances, including potassium nitrate, arsenic and other heavy metals.

Loud, crowded fireworks displays are no fun for pets, so please resist the urge to take them to Independence Day festivities. Instead, keep your little guys safe from the noise in a quiet, sheltered and escape-proof area at home.

All said and done, I hope ALL my readers and pooch friends and especially my friends at the Post-Gazette have a wonderful fun time and a safe Fourth of July.

Remember to PICK UP after your pet and keep our neighborhood streets and sidewalks clean.

That's all for now!

Socially Scene

Socially Scene Reviewed ... This past week one of Boston's most famed fashionistas, Denise Hajjar, celebrated her two years of residency at the Intercontinental Hotel Boston.

Hajjar usually holds her shows in the hotel's chic Rumba Lounge but with the wonderful weather finally in our presence, the event took place on the beautiful waterfront patio that overlooks the Four Point Channel. The evening was set to begin at 6:00 pm sharp and it was no surprise to see every table taken in anticipation of the first designs to show.

Hajjar's Spring/Summer 2015 collection started off strong with a bold neon cocktail number, and one of the things that make Hajjar a clutch designer, the garment had just been made that morning. As models came down the waterfront runway, there were vibrant dresses that focused on pastel patterns, Hajjar's couture taste keeps these young looks high-end with that classic appeal.

The evening welcomed some of Boston's finest in the fashion world, such as fellow gown guru David Josef; model/fashion photographer/luxury accessories designer Amber Lu; fashionista Sonia Garufi, and models AJ Williams and Simone Aptekman. Aptekman from Dynasty Modeling Agency is a rising star in the city. She had just returned from New York City that morning where she was modeling the fall collection of iconic designer Victoria Beckham.

The night was a stunning success with Hajjar herself glowing in a simple neon peach knee-length that brought out her gorgeous skin tone. This unique fashion show, where the models mixed and mingled with the guests as they showed the collection, was one to remember. Being on the Boston Harbor for a gorgeous spring evening didn't hurt.

I was able to catch up with the design diva and ask what her time has been like at the Intercontinental Hotel thus far. Hajjar said, "I can say after the two year mark I'm finally happy, it was an interesting start. I'm a staple fixture here now and the hotel got to know me. I love the customers and that I am able to provide service in the neighborhood." When I asked Hajjar to comment on her current collection she responded, "I'm in a really good place, my clients are getting older, but still want to look young and fresh and this is a focus for me. I pride myself that tonight there is a size fourteen garment being modeled, it looks just as fabulous as the size four and these are pieces that never go out of style."

After spending 2006 through May of 2013 as the in-house designer for the Copley Plaza Hotel, Hajjar made the move to the Intercontinental as their "Designer-in-Residence" in fall 2013. The new boutique enables Hajjar to have her retail store and design studio at the same location. The larger space enables her to expand her services, including custom designs, expert tailoring, couture alterations for men and women. Hajjar has also acknowledged that she is surrounded by residential real estate and has partnered with an eco-friendly dry cleaning company to provide the neighborhood and commuters with convenient drop off / pick up service five days a week.

Last year during the 2014 Fall Boston Fashion Week, Hajjar set a standard with an entertainment-packed show held at Royal. The setup was perfect and the runway was top-notch along with the guest list. Starting off the night were salsa pair dancers from The Fred Astaire Dance Studio who also performed in-between and along with models down the catwalk. Hajjar was all smiles yet secretive about what she has in store for this year's Boston Fashion Week edition (back at Royal, the date and time to be released.) Denise Hajjar's boutique is located at 510 Atlantic Avenue in Boston. Find out more about her services and collections by calling 617-266-2296 or visiting www.denisehajjar.com.

Outdoor Tabata ... This innovative style of breaking a sweat will be offered only two more times in the outdoor Faneuil Hall area — a summer must you don't want to miss!

This summer Equinox, the upscale fitness and lifestyle leader with four locations in the Boston area, is offering Bostonians an unparalleled workout experience through August. Equinox will offer one complimentary Tabata class each month at Faneuil Hall, open to members and non-members.

What is Tabata you ask? It is one of Equinox's signature programs, Tabata is an intense workout that torches calories, boosts endurance, and strengthens every muscle with a high intensity routine. Perfect for beach season, the dynamic conditioning experience consists of 20 second bousts of high-intensity training followed by 10 seconds of rest. This is done eight times at four minute intervals meant to increase athletic performance, boost VO2Max, and decrease body fat.

The invigorating classes will be led by Equinox's well qualified instructors. Registration is not required. Can it get simpler? The next session will be held on Monday, July 13th from 6:15 pm to 7:00 pm with instructor Rachel Poor. The last session will be on Monday, August 17th, also from 6:15 pm to 7:00 pm, both located at Faneuil Hall, 1 Faneuil Hall Square, Boston. If you happen to have any questions or want more information on Tabata you can visit www.equinox.com.

High Society Fashion ... Boston's earliest high-fashion gown, an embroidery masterpiece, is now on view at the Old State House.

Do you ever dream of living in a different century and being able to dress the part? The Old State House in Boston is bringing you a chance to get a firsthand view of some of fashion's first looks. The prized hand-embroidered 18th century wedding gown on display was designed and embroidered by Elizabeth Bull, Boston's original fashionista.

In today's society, it's all about the dress on that special day, as even wedding planners in the colonial era were evidently already well aware. In fact, Boston Designer Elizabeth Bull took the precaution of designing her own colorful, hand-embroidered silk wedding gown several years before she even had a groom in mind.

"America's colonial era schoolgirls were remarkably fashion-forward designers," observed Patricia Gilrein, Collections Manager at the Bostonian Society. "They were keenly aware of European fashion trends, and adapted these styles to suit their purposes."

Elizabeth Bull started designing, sewing, and embroidering her China silk gown when she was only 14, while still in school. Embroidery was often undertaken by young women at the time to practice and perfect the art of needlework, but Bull proved to be one of the most extraordinary embroidery artists of her day. By 1734, she had already been at work on her gown for several years when she met a handsome stranger, Roger Price, the Rector of Trinity Church in Boston. At the time, Rev. Price was busily making preparations to make his escape from the uncivilized colonies to assume a more gracious lifestyle in England. Yet, he met Miss Bull and his ship sailed without him. Within a year, he accompanied Elizabeth Bull as she walked down the aisle wearing her embroidery masterpiece at their wedding in King's Chapel.

gown, a stunning example of Boston's earliest haute couture, will be placed on temporary display through the end of this year at Boston's Old State House. The exhibition of the Elizabeth Bull gown was made possible by a generous gift from an anonymous donor.

The Bostonian Society was established in 1881 to preserve Boston's historic past and explain the revolutionary ideas born here. For 134 years, it has managed the Old State House, the oldest and most important public building in American history prior to the Revolution, where, John Adams insisted, "Independence was born." It now serves as a museum and historic site, open to the public seven days a week, from 9:00 am until 5:00 pm. The Old State House and the Bostonian Society is located at 206 Washington Street, Boston and more information about the museum can be found at www.bostonhistory.org.

Newsies Hit the Hub ... The Disney favorite comes to the Boston Opera House in July to spread "the news."

The Max Warburg Courage Curriculum's 24th Annual Awards Luncheon

Boston 6th Graders Honored for Exceptional Courage by Mayor Walsh

Nina Hunnewell, Tess Anderson and Kate Anderson

Boston Mayor Martin J. Walsh joined The Max Warburg Courage Curriculum in celebrating the exceptional courage of 40 sixth grade students from 35 schools in Boston and surrounding communities at the 24th annual Awards Luncheon that was held on Thursday, May 14th, at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel Ballroom. The award-winning students' essays on courage were selected for publication in the 24th volume of The Courage of Children: Boston and Beyond, which was also released on May 14th.

Mayor Walsh delivered the keynote address at the event, commending the students for sharing their personal stories and inspiring their communities, and presented each student with their award.

The event was attended by 300 guests, including families, educators, community leaders and friends of The Max Warburg Courage Curriculum.

In attendance: Bob Gittens, VP for Public Affairs at Northeastern University;

Joyce Linehan, City of Boston; Bob Turner; Joan Kennedy (Trustee); Carrie Minot Bell (Trustee and event chair); Stephanie, Jonathan, and Fred Warburg; Barry Bluestone, Northeastern University; Suzanne Bloomberg (Trustee); and MWCC Advisory Board chair Alexandra Marshall.

About the Max Warburg Courage Curriculum

The Max Warburg Courage Curriculum is a yearlong language arts curriculum that invites young people to explore their own capacity to act courageously. The organization was founded in memory of Max Warburg, a courageous eleven-year-old whose hope and determination in the face of his battle with leukemia continues to inspire our work.

Our programs meet the Common Core State Standards in English Language Arts and are voluntarily adopted by teachers in classrooms throughout Boston and beyond the city limits. They have positively impacted the academic performance of over 150,000 students since the organization's inception in 1991. For over twenty years,

THE NEWSROOM: THE COMPLETE THIRD SEASON
(DVD)
HBO Home Ent.

“The Newsroom” is back for its third and final season. Picking up five months after the end of Season 2, The Newsroom team — anchor, executive producer, their newsroom staff, along with the news-division boss and parent company CEO. They will fight for control of Atlantis Cable News Network (CAN), and manage the repercussions of Neal’s receipt of confidential documents leaked by a mystery government source. Subpoenas are served, and hostile-takeover rumors fly, as the team redoubles its efforts to “do the news well,” in an increasingly competitive digital universe, where tweets and Instagrams often trump old-fashioned professionalism.

BEYOND THE REACH
(Blu-ray)
Lionsgate Home Ent.

A cocky businessman and big-game hunter (Michael Douglas) hires an earnest young guide (Jeremy Irvine) to take him hunting in the Mojave Desert. Far from civilization, the unthinkable happens when another outdoorsman is mistaken for game and accidentally shot. Things take an even worse turn when the guide refuses to be drawn into the dishonest cover-up, and must now run for his life before the hunter — and the elements — do him in.

THE WRECKING CREW
Magnolia Home Ent.

Music lovers will be astonished at the influence The Wrecking Crew wielded over rock and pop music in the 1960s and early 1970s. These unsung instrumentalists were the de-facto backing band on hit records by The Beach Boys, Phil Spector, Frank Sinatra, Sonny & Cher, Elvis, The Monkees, and more. Dedicated musicians who brought the flair and musicianship that made the American “West Coast Sound” a dominant cultural force around the world.

IF THERE BE THORNS
(DVD)
Lionsgate Home Ent.

The Dollanganger saga continues with “If There Be Thorns,” based on the third novel in the V.C. Andrews best-selling “Flowers in the Attic” series. Although Christopher and Cathy have escaped Foxworth Hall and live together as man and wife in California, with Cathy’s two sons, Jory and Bart, the dark past is always lurking behind. When a mysterious woman moves in next door and befriends Bart, he begins a strange transformation. In fact, it is Corrine, and she introduces Bart to his evil great-grandfather’s diary. Bart accused his parents of being the “devil’s spawn” as the secrets of the past are held to the fire. Heather Graham returns as Corrine, Christopher and Cathy’s mom. Jason Lewis as Christopher, with Rachael Carpani as Cathy, and Mason Cook as Cathy’s son, Bart.

GUNSLINGERS: SEASON ONE (DVD)
Cinedigm

The Wild West lives on in unprecedented glory through the “Gunslingers” series — an irresistible mix of historical authenticity with the captivating appeal of cinematic storytelling. Wrangled together in one collection are your favorite real-life legends from the O.K. Corral — Billy the Kid, Jesse James, Wild Bill Hickok — along with other unforgettable heroes and villains. Vivid re-enactments are framed with expert commentary and little-known facts to recreate these infamous icons and the time in which they lived. With gunfights and manhunts, outlaws and gentlemen, and the fastest gun in the West, witness the frontier’s bravest and rowdiest men as they make their place in history in an epic battle for justice and survival.

COUNTRY BUCKS:
SEASON 1 (DVD)
Lionsgate Home Ent.

Owners of a 55,000-acre ranch and a prosperous hunting gear company — with goods ranging from deer feed to archery weapons — the Busbice family and their crew aren’t just a few Louisiana good ole boys: they’re a multimillion-dollar team. The “Country Bucks” get down to business tackling new projects and products, mixed with every day antics. When the Busbice boys and buddy Willie Robertson are out on a pre-hunting scout, Big Bill finds himself all abuzz in T-Carr’s mess while Hard Luck tinkers with yet another one of his infamous creations in “Sac-Attack.” Matt gets himself caught between the kids and an exploding target in “Fishing Crossbow,” while “Double Trouble” finds him roped in as Joe Buck’s wingman. When Hard Luck taste tests a new feed, will he cook up a winner or instead be burned by the wrath of Miss Beth in “Recipe for Disaster?”

BALLET 422
Magnolia Home Ent.

From first rehearsal to world premiere, “Ballet 422” takes viewers backstage at New York City Ballet, as Justin Peck, a young up-and-coming choreographer, crafts a new work. “Ballet 422” illuminates the process behind the creation of a single ballet within the ongoing cycle of work at one of the world’s great ballet companies. Commissioned to create a ballet for the Company’s 2013 Winter season, this documentary has Peck collaborating with musicians, lighting designers, costume designers and his fellow dancers to create “Paz de la Jolla,” NYCB’s 422nd new ballet.

KOREAN WAR MEMORIAL

Yesterday, the Quincy Veterans Council held its 65th Annual Korean War Memorial Service at the Korean War Memorial in Quincy. Guest speaker was Song Jun Ohm, Consul General of the Republic of Korea in Boston.

BIG DOINGS AT IRISH SOCIAL CLUB

This year, the Irish Social Club of Boston is celebrating its 70th anniversary and the 35th anniversary of the opening of the West Roxbury club site. Hard to believe, but some 70 years ago, some great people, including my uncle Neal Harrington, came together and recognized the need for an Irish Social Club. Since then, many have worked hard to preserve this place for Boston’s Irish-American community.

There will be a number of special anniversary events taking place this year. For more information, you can call 617-327-7306 or email isch1945@gmail.com.

ANNIVERSARY KICK-OFF EVENT

Tomorrow night, Saturday, June 27th, Anniversary Kick-off with Andy Cooney and Deirdre Reilly. MC will be Matt O'Donnell from WROL 950 AM of the Irish Hit Parade Show. It all starts at 7:00 pm.

40TH ANNUAL BASTILLE DAY

This year’s 40th Annual

Bastille Day celebration will be held in the Back Bay at the French Cultural Center. Once again they will be partying and dancing in the street. This event is sponsored by the Alliance Française of Boston. Contact the FrenchCulturalCenter.org for more information and tickets.

I’ve gone to this many times and thanks to some recent DNA testing by my nephew, I can now go as a part-French guy too.

SUMMER CONCERTS AT THE SEAPORT

The 2015 Summer Concert Series has been announced for the Blue Hills Bank Pavilion. Shows include, among others, Steely Dan on July 30th and 31st; Culture Club, August 2nd; Pink Floyd, August 13th; Santana, August 18th; Willie Nelson, August 21st and The J. Geils Band on August 27th.

For more information, call 800-745-3000.

LIKE I’M BUYING THESE SUNGLASSES, NOT

I was reading a monthly magazine here in Boston and on the back cover was an ad for some expensive sunglasses. They were called a new take on the classic Aviator. They looked real nice and you could get them in handcrafted fine metals and finishes such as 23K chocolate gold. Like I’m buying these. I would be afraid I would either lose them or step on them.

As for me, the Dollar Tree store is just fine and if I want an upgrade, I will go to CVS Pharmacy.

Big bust! In a divorce case in Hendersonville, Tennessee, Carol Ann Bennett asked Circuit Judge Thomas Goodall to award her custody of her breast implants. Noting that her estranged husband, Warren Woodrow Bennett, Jr., had the implants, she explained that she had them removed after contracting lupus, but left them behind when she moved out of their condominium. She told the judge that she wanted them for a lawsuit against their manufacturer, but feared Warren would destroy them. "Divorce granted to wife," Goodall ruled, "breasts to be returned to wife."

Reminder! Boston newspapers and television stations featured photographs of Massachusetts Port Authority Executive Director Stephen E. Tocco, wearing a hard hat and protective glasses, using a sledge hammer to smash a 25-foot-long cinder block wall to mark the start of a $1.2 billion modernization of Logan International Airport. The Port Authority later admitted that the wall was built two days before the ceremony, using donated labor, for $15.93. "We wanted a very dramatic visual," spokesperson Christina A. Cassotis said, explaining that the wall Port Authority officials wanted to knock down is made of solid concrete. "You would have had to have a bulldozer to knock it over, which didn't seem appropriate."

Congratulations! George Kirby, 103, and Doreen Luckie, 91, became the world's oldest newlyweds when they tied the knot in southern England. The lovebirds met in 1988 after Kirby got divorced and Luckie became a widow. "We got on straightaway," she said. "He liked the roses in my front garden. He was a real smooth talker." Between the two of them, they have seven children, fifteen grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren. Kirby popped the question during their Valentine's Day dinner. "I didn't get down on one knee," he said, "because I don't think I would have been able to get back up."

A California legislator reportedly blamed California's epic drought on the state's permissive abortion laws. In a speech to a pro-life group, Republican Shannon Grove suggested that Texas' recent prolonged drought didn't end until the state passed a strict anti-abortion bill. "It rained that night," Grove said. She later claimed she'd been misquoted, but said it's clear that "God's hand is in the affairs of man."

Huh? Police forced a pair of sisters in Texas to shutdown their lemonade stand because they didn't have a permit. Andrie Green, 8, and her sister, Zoey, 7, were raising money to buy a Father's Day gift, but cops told them they needed to apply for a permit "because of the bacteria that can grow in the lemonade" if it's not temperature-controlled.

Liberty, after the Iowa Supreme Court overturned a prior conviction and upheld a woman's right to be drunk at home. Police had charged Patience Paye, 29, with public intoxication after she blew a 2.67 on a breathalyzer test conducted on her front steps.

Decoys, London police engaged in a prolonged standoff with a venomous adder they were told was "lying very still on a patio," until they realized the snake was a garden ornament.

Shut your mouth! The circus, after Donald Trump launched his Republican presidential campaign in a rambling speech in which he vowed to beat ISIS by "taking back that oil," characterized many Mexican immigrants as drug dealers, criminals, and rapists; and mocked the other GOP candidates as "all talk, no action ..."

And from Rome, Pope Francis told the world's 1.2 billion Catholics they have a moral obligation to do what they can to mitigate climate change. In a highly controversial encyclical — an official announcement of church doctrine — the pontiff said there was "very consistent scientific consensus" that global warming is caused "above all by human activity" and will pose a serious threat to life on Earth. There is an "urgent and compelling" need for all countries to reduce greenhouse-gas emissions, he said, including by "replacing fossil fuels and developing sources of renewable energy." The pope has said he hopes his encyclical will spur countries to commit to the United Nations new climate pact, to be signed in Paris this December.

Moron? A doting Kazakh boyfriend was fined more than $2,100 after he dressed up as his girlfriend and tried to take an important exam on her behalf. When Ayan Zhademov's 17-year-old girlfriend told him she was terrified that she'd flunk her university entrance exam, he promised to take her place. Wearing a skirt, blouse, and a wig, Zhademov, 20, sneaked into the exam hall, and was only revealed as an imposter when school officials heard him speaking in an artificially high voice. Zhademov's efforts impressed the other female students. "I wish my boyfriend was this romantic," said one.

Proprio Stronzo, says, "Nothing chills a romance like a cold shoulder."

"Simone Signoret is a very patient woman. She has to be to stay married to me. I am so happy that she has never thrown me out. Very long ago, Edith Piaf threw me out, and for me it was a great tragedy, although I was not married to her." So claimed Yves Montand.

Weirdo! A Vermont man escaped jury duty by turning up in court wearing a black-and-white prisoner's jumpsuit. James Lowe said he bought the inmate outfit at a yard sale a few weeks earlier, and decided to wear it to court to see if he could provoke the lawyers and judge into excusing him. Sure enough, the presiding judge ordered Lowe to leave the building, warning that he was lucky not to be held in contempt of court. Lowe's wife, Sheri, insisted he had done nothing wrong. "The rules," she explained, "said nothing about what to wear."

Ireland may have legalized gay marriage, but we're still one of the most backward Western countries when it comes to abortion, said Alison O'Connor. After a woman died in a Galway hospital in 2012 because doctors refused to terminate her unviable pregnancy, Ireland legalized abortion in cases where there is "substantial risk" to a woman's life. But how much of a risk counts? A 50 percent risk of death? A 10 percent risk? A doctor deemed to have made a wrong decision to terminate can face 14 years in prison, and so can the woman. Of course, Irish women do seek abortions -- some 4,000 go abroad for the purpose every year.

Ladies, pay attention! The average American woman now weighs 166.2 pounds, about the same as the average American man weighed in the early 1960s. Over the same period, U.S. men have gained nearly 30 pounds, from 166.3 in the '60s to 195.5 today.

What? The two deadliest drugs in America are both legal. Tobacco kills more than 500,000 Americans a year. Alcohol is linked to 88,000 deaths a year (including those caused by drunk driving and violent behavior) and more than 4.6 million emergency room visits.

It was in 1849 when Father John Nobili, an Italian, arrived in San Francisco to establish a college. Two years later, with only $150 to start with, he laid the foundation for the present University of Santa Clara

A few interesting show biz bits from the stately musicologist, Al Natale. Singing bandleader Skinnay Ennis is best remembered for his breathless singing style on songs such as "Got a Date With an Angel" with the Hal Kemp Band. Skinnay and his band travelled with Bob Hope for many years, particularly during World War II. And Clare Boothe Luce, said, "Greta Garbo is a deer in the body of a woman, living resentfully in the Hollywood zoo. And according to Romy Schneider, Audrey Hepburn walked out on her thriving career in the late sixties, terminated it, for her second husband. An Italian — a philandering Italian. He left her for a younger woman. You see?

AMERICA IS A BEAUTIFUL ITALIAN NAME

Parla Come Mangi! (Speak as You Eat!)

by Alessandra Sambiase

Benvenuti! This week's recipe, torta caprese, ends our viaggio in Campania. The name itself indicates that this particular cake comes from the gorgeous island of Capri, known for being, along with Ischia and Procida, one of the top tourist attractions of the region. With its famous Faraglioni and Grotta Azzurra (blue grotto), Capri was already known by the Greeks and the Romans and the ruins of the many villas left us a tangible sign of the Imperial Roman presence in the area. The Romans called Capri, Capreae (island of the goats) and Insula Sirenussae (island of the siren). Roman Emperor Tiberius named it Apragopolis: the land of leisure. What identifies Capri the most, besides its stunning landscape and blue water, is its summer atmosphere where the very Italian dolce far niente gets a convivial twist in the casual-chic frame of the charming piazzetta where tourists, jetsetters and locals meet and enjoy together a caffè, aperitivo or granita, or indulge with a slice of torta caprese. According to the legend, the origin of this desert dates back to 1920 when Carmine Di Fiore, pastry chef from Capri, was called to prepare a cake with almonds and chocolate in honor of three of Al Capone's men visiting the island for "business." By accident, Di Fiore forgot to add flour to the recipe and the unintended result was very successful: a cake with a soft center and a firm crust that was named after the island of Capri where it originated.

Enjoy this delicious dessert with a glass of ice-cold Limoncello.

Torta Caprese

- | | |
|---|--|
| 2 cups almonds, skinned | 2 ½ leveled tsp baking powder |
| 8 oz. melting dark chocolate | 2 tbsp "Strega" liquor (substitute with cocoa flavored liquor) |
| ¾ cup + 1 tbsp butter (at room temperature) | powdered sugar |
| 1 cup sugar | |
| 6 eggs | |

Preparation: chop the almonds and chocolate very finely. Beat the butter with the sugar in a bowl until creamy. Beat the eggs thoroughly in a separate bowl and add to the butter cream mixture. Add the almonds and chocolate then stir in the baking powder and liqueur. Place the mixture in an 11 in. diameter springform cake pan greased or lined with parchment or silicon paper. Bake in a pre-heated oven at 350 °F for about 50 minutes. Turn the cake out onto a wire rack to cool then dredge with powdered sugar and serve.

Buon appetito!

Nanna & Babbononno

by John Christoforo

A Nostalgic Remembrance

July 4th is just a week away. To most, this means a picnic of some type and fireworks. For Bostonians, it also includes the Boston Pops Esplanade Concert, a tradition started by Arthur Fiedler, continued by John Williams and kept alive by Keith Lockhart. Back in the day, I remember Uncles Paul, Nick and Dad playing for some event on the 4th. As a child, Mom and I attended concerts that Dad played, that included locations like the bandstands at Revere Beach, Nantasket Beach, Houghton's Pond, Wood Island Park, Salem Willows and Boston Common.

I wonder if events like this still happen. As I pass through small Massachusetts towns today, I still see bandstands in the centers of many of them, and wonder if they are relics of the past or whether they are still used to present free music to the public.

The Musicians' Union used to have a fund that paid the musicians for the music which was free to the public and just for the asking. Back in the day, every time a record was played on the radio, a few cents went into a fund called the Radio and Transcription Fund, or R and T Fund, for short. It later became the Music Performer's Trust Fund, or MPTF. Today it still exists, but is a shell of its former self. When the money was never ending, most of the bands were Sousa-style concert bands, large brass ensembles that played a bit of classical, lots of marches and a few popular selections. Years later, when they evolved into dance or swing type bands, I played either bass or bass guitar for the leaders that included Bill Harding, Bernie King, Tony Bruno, Jr., Johnny Shea and Baron Hugo. I even had my own Dixieland combo and played at Shea's Beach in East Boston a few times. (It's Constitution Beach for those of you who pass the sign on Bennington Street in Orient Heights, but didn't grow up in East Boston.)

When I was a child, Dad was hooked up with a conductor who specialized in this type of music. His name was Max Cruley and Dad was the tuba player. Back then, Dad owned both a tuba and a sousaphone. He had marched in many parades carrying these instruments, but he preferred the bandstand-type concerts. They were easier on the back muscles. My favorite locations were the indoor bandstand at Nantasket Beach or the outdoor gazebo at Revere Beach. When the band was booked to play concerts at these locations, Dad would bring Nanna, Babbononno, Mom and me along. At times, a lunch would be packed ahead of time for the family to enjoy. I always wished that Mom would forget the food, because both beaches, Nantasket and Revere, had hotdog stands, pizza places, lots of cotton candy vendors, popcorn machines with hot-salted popcorn, and soft-serve ice cream shops that sold something called "frozen custard." The kick-off concert was always on the Fourth of July.

Days before the first concert, would take his sousaphone out of a hall closet and begin to shine it up. Seeing it was made of silver, it would have tarnished over the winter and he wanted it to be perfect. When I was old enough, he would pay me to shine the instrument. His only task was to make sure the valves were well-oiled and the mouth pieces were clean enough to blow through. If one of Max Cruley's concerts was to begin at noon on the 4th, Max, with baton in hand, would face the orchestra and give the downbeat just as the clock struck twelve. All of the musicians, Max included, would be dressed in band uniforms that included navy blue jackets and military hats. When the baton signaled the downbeat, all of the musicians would stand and begin to play the Star Spangled Banner. The audiences would stand at attention until the national anthem was over, applaud and then sit to listen to the rest of the concert.

I got to know most of the musicians as a child. Many of them were old-timers that Babbononno knew and he would greet them with handshakes and hugs during intermission. Babbononno would also have to acknowledge his sons, because more often than not, Uncles Paul and Nick were in the front line of musicians playing their clarinets. One of my favorite spots was the bandstand at Wood Island Park. This was a recreation center in the Day Square area of East Boston accessed by Neptune Road. Back in the 1960s, it became part of Logan Airport. But, by then, it had deteriorated. The only part of it that was used was the parking lot which became a lover's lane at night ... but, that's another story.

When the band played at the Wood Island bandstand, I was just a young kid, but knew most of the other young kids who accompanied their parents there, and we played an assortment of games while the musicians serenaded the crowds.

Years later, I was asked if I could put together a Dixieland band to play on the 4th of July in back of the original bath house at Shea's Beach (Constitution Beach in East Boston). I assembled a group of musicians that I knew could play Dixieland music better than most. Among them was a tuba player I called, "Dad." They advertised the event in the East Boston Times and the Free Press, the two East Boston newspapers back then. The names they listed were mine, Dad's, Uncle Paul's and a couple of other East Bostonians that I included in the band. My ensemble included banjo, tuba, drums, clarinet, trombone, and two trumpets. I brought my bass violin along, but I was there basically to conduct. Evidently, many East Bostonians who remembered the name, decided to come to the beach on that Fourth of July. As we began to set-up, we were greeted by throngs of well-wishers who remembered us from the old neighborhood.

Some were from Dad's generation and knew him and Uncle Nick. Others were my age, people I had grown up with who brought their young families with them to enjoy the day.

While preparing for the event, I decided to do something unorthodox. I used the melody of the song, Southie is My Hometown, and rewrote the title and words. Considering where I was, when I announced the song, it was called, Eastie is My Hometown. Throughout my career as a musician, I prided myself as being a good musician and a bad, a very bad singer. When I sang the substitute words, regardless of my lack of vocal qualities, the beach goers applauded and screamed as if I was a local hero, come home.

We played dozens of Dixieland favorites. I had assembled some of the best musicians I could dig up to be part of that band, and by the time intermission rolled around, they had proven themselves. One thing was missing. Dad whispered in my ear and I included his suggestion during part two of the concert ... Good old-fashioned Italian music. I even sang Oh Marie in Italian, ouch!

Those days are gone, but I wonder if those outdoor events still exist on the 4th, and MAY GOD BLESS AMERICA.

and a book by Tony Award-winning playwright Harvey Fierstein (La Cage Aux Folles, Torch Song Trilogy), Newsies is based on the popular 1992 Disney movie starring Christian Bale about a group of newsboys who take on a ruthless newspaper tycoon. Based on true events, the musical tells the captivating story of a band of underdogs who become unlikely heroes when they stand up to the most powerful men in New York. Full of high-energy physicality, it's a rousing tale about fighting for what's right and staying true to who you are.

With a loveable cast, this hit production is on stage through July 5th at the Boston Opera House, located at 539 Washington Street in Boston. For more information on tickets and times, you may visit www.boston.broadway.com or call 866-523-7469.

Patriots Mini-Camp 2015
Garoppolo Ready to Lead if Called Upon

Head Coach Bill Belichick meets

On a gray and damp June morning the New England Patriots began work on a title defense. After months of celebrating the franchises fourth world championship and all the fame that comes along with it, their jobs begin anew.

Since that glorious February evening in Arizona, the ensuing offseason has brought much change to the Patriot roster, most notably defections, primarily in the form of Darrelle Revis to the division rival New York Jets and 11-year team veteran Vince Wilfork who now is a Texan, calling Houston home. Conversely, the additions were slim and far between. Unlike last offseason when the team bolstered its secondary with the addition of the aforementioned Revis and Brandon Browner, players that helped transform the team's defense into one of the formidable units in the NFL, this offseason was about adding depth and plugging holes. With no clear prized free agent acquisition, that title may very well end up being Tight End Scott Chandler, a player that has been a Patriot killer in seasons past.

Following the Super Bowl, the Patriots focus was clearly on transitioning into the next great era in team history; a decision no doubt aided by futile negotiations in trying to retain Revis.

The team added Corner-back Bradley Fletcher, a six-year veteran with eight career interceptions who was a starter in Philadelphia. Make no mistake, Fletcher will not fill the coveted "shutdown corner" mold in New England. Should he survive camp and make the final 53-man roster, Fletcher's niche on the team will undoubtedly be in a rotational basis and on special teams.

At day one of mini-camp last Tuesday, the defense practiced without core starters from last season; End Chandler Jones and Linebacker Jamie Collins. Linebacker Jerod Mayo was also absent, having lost the majority of last season to a torn patellar tendon suffered in October.

With uncertainty surrounding the availability of Tom Brady to start the season, the team brought in Matt Flynn, a veteran of the understudy role for two of the NFL's pre-eminent quarterbacks, Aaron Rodgers of the Green Bay Packers and Russell Wilson of the Seattle Seahawks. Flynn is expected to serve as backup to Jimmy Garoppolo and as the third string QB once Brady returns to action.

If history repeats itself for a third time, Jimmy Garoppolo may be on the fast path to stardom.

All three quarterbacks on the roster participated in mini-camp drills, with Garoppolo seeing most of his work with the first team offense. For the most part he looked sharp, going nearly perfect on one particular drill while targeting the likes of Edelman and Gronkowski extensively.

There may be a different quarterback behind center, but the targets remain the same. Not much has changed.

Patriot fans may see more of Wide Receiver Brian Tyms in 2015. Tyms showed great speed and the ability to separate from his defender in slipping through the heart of the secondary to haul in a 40-yard pass from Garoppolo. "Naturally, the more reps you get, the better off, so every rep you've got to make it count. Even the ones you're not in, you've got to get the mental rep part in."

The quarterbacks settle in with passing drills.

Joe DeNucci and Johnny Dunn

I have gathered together a number of photos taken at the original and second New Garden Gyms on Friend Street in Boston. The New Garden was the Mecca of Boxing in Boston years ago. These photos were taken from the 1950s to the 1970s. I hope you recognize many of these faces and enjoy seeing them again.

HOOPS and HOCKEY in the HUB

by Richard Preiss

THE NBA recently announced that Charlotte will host the 2017 NBA All-Star Game, meaning that once again another year will pass without the league's best putting on their annual show in the Hub. Thus, 2018 is the earliest it could happen since the 2016 Game and its associated activities, officially known as NBA All-Star Weekend, will be held in Toronto. Boston has not hosted the NBA All-Star Game since 1964.

The last time the NBA All-Star event was held in Charlotte was 1991 and, even though it took place at a considerable distance from the Hub, there was a definite Boston backdrop to the contest that was won by the East 116-114. So much so, in fact, that one could forgive those watching on television who thought they might be viewing a Boston-based event.

Consider that two of the best players ever to perform on the parquet in Boston were playing in their final All-Star Game. That's right. Kevin McHale and Robert Parish would never play in the game again, although their respective NBA careers would extend a bit longer than that.

Kevin Edward McHale was a "Christmas Season" baby, born on December 19, 1957 but would eventually grow to a dominating 6-10, starring first at his hometown high school in Hibbing, Minnesota and then at the University of Minnesota where he played all four years. Yes, players did that then. They did not leave early for the pros as they do today.

Drafted by the Celtics in the first round (third overall) of the 1980 NBA Draft, McHale would go on to play his entire 13-year career for the Celtics. While here, he would be a member of three NBA Championship teams (1981, 1984 and 1986). That's right. He won an NBA Championship right out of the box as a rookie to cap the 1980-1981 season. He eventually would be named one of the 50 Greatest Players in NBA history in 1996 and be inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in 1999.

After his final season as a player (1992-1993), McHale returned to his native Minnesota where he served as assistant general manager of the Minnesota Timberwolves for one season (1994-1995) and then served as Vice President of Basketball Operations from 1995 to 2009.

Many consider that his greatest "gift" to the Celtics as a front office executive came in the summer of 2007 when he traded Kevin Garnett to the C's. The Green would win Banner 17 some 11 months later in June, 2008. McHale also coached the Timberwolves for a couple of seasons and then took over as the coach of the Houston Rockets. He just finished his fourth season with the Texas team this spring.

Robert Lee Parish was born on August 30, 1953 in Louisiana and, like McHale, would star at his local high school (Woodlawn in Shreveport) and play his college ball at an in-state institution (Centenary). Drafted by the Golden State Warriors in the first round (eighth overall) of the 1976 NBA Draft, Parish would play there before being traded to the Celtics in June of 1980.

The trade cemented in place the famous Big Three trio of Larry Bird, Parish and McHale that would become famous throughout the 1980s and early 1990s. He was a member of three NBA Championship teams—the same three as McHale plus another in 1997 with the Chicago Bulls. Like McHale, he was named one of the 50 Greatest Players in NBA History and was elected to the Hall of Fame (2003). He remains the Celtics all-time blocked shots leader (1,703 in a 14-year career with Boston).

The game also featured Patrick Ewing who represented the New York Knicks. Ewing lived in Cambridge and had played for Cambridge Rindge and Latin during his high school years. He played all four years at Georgetown before becoming the first pick in the 1985 NBA Draft.

Over the course of a stellar 15-year career with the Knicks, he went on to become their leading scorer (23,665 points), their leading rebounder (10,759), the all-time steals leader (1,061) and all-time blocked shots leader (2,758). He was named to the 50th Anniversary All-Time Team in 1996 and has also been inducted into the Hall of Fame. He also won Olympic Gold Medals in 1984 and 1992).

Following the conclusion of his playing days, he entered the coaching ranks, serving first as an assistant with the Washington Wizards before moving on to the Houston Rockets. He presently is an assistant with the Orlando Magic.

And finally, even before that 1991 game took place there was a Boston angle. Celtics rookie Dee Brown, all 6-1 of him, won the dunk contest the night before the game. He went on to be named to the All-Rookie team that season after playing in all 82 games and averaging 8.7 points per contest.

Brown played for the Celtics for seven and a half seasons before being traded to Toronto in 1998. He later played with Orlando. After his playing career concluded, Brown served as head coach of the WNBA's Orlando Miracle and later he San Antonio Silver Stars.

He came back to Massachusetts for two seasons as head coach of the Springfield Armor in NBA's Developmental League before moving back to the NBA as an assistant with Detroit and later with Sacramento.

A memorable weekend that was in Charlotte in 1991 with all those Boston memories.
