Republicans on Cruz Control?

A conservative Texan by the name of Ted Cruz is running for office down in Texas. He's hoping to win the GOP nomination and go on to replace outgoing US Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison when she rides off in the saddle at the end of this year. He's picking key endorsements from all the right conservative groups in the Lone Star State and the most conservative rival for the GOP is running for a US House seat instead. On all the important conservative issues, Cruz is right there. Many are calling him a future Hispanic Reagan. He is only 40 years old and comes from the same generation of new Republican leaders such as US Senators Mike Lee, R-Utah and Marco Rubio, R-Florida.

The Republican future needs Hispanic support. One in six Americans is Hispanic. In 37 states, Hispanic populations increased by 50 percent since 2000. California, Texas, Florida and New York have the largest population of Hispanics and also have 151 electoral votes. Cruz believes Texas Hispanics have shown "a willingness to be a swing vote."

Have I said how much I enjoy going to Texas? I love the state. The weather, politics and people are to my liking. I started going there as an 18-year-old when I enlisted in the USAF and now have family to visit down there. I'm getting an itching to get back down there before year's end.

Texas and the Southwest is the future of America and its future is conservative. We are the aberration up here in the Northeast. The country continues to go red while I survive in the blue.

On Sunday, June 25, 2011 the first annual St. Pio procession took place in Boston's North End. A large crowd of devotees followed the statue around the streets of the North End. The statue, a gift from Anna Sirignano, was shipped from Italy to Boston and it will remain at St. Leonard's Church on Hanover Street.

On Obamacare and So Much Else Maybe Next Debate We Can Answer the Questions

by Herman Cain

During the New Hampshire presidential debate last week, a lady named Sylvia asked, "What would the Republicans do about health care if they repealed ObamaCare?" Her question never got answered. I even pointed that out to the CNN host, John King, and offered to answer her question, but he never got back to me.

If I could have answered the question, I would have told her about patient-centered and market-driven solutions. Most of these ideas are contained in H.R. 3400, which was introduced in 2009, but virtually nobody heard about it.

I don't believe in re-inventing the wheel. Nor do I believe in re-inventing good ideas. If I could have answered her question, I would have offered some of the following ideas to replace ObamaCare:

- Individuals choose their health insurance (no mandates)
- Deductibility of health insurance premiums regardless of who pays
- Employers to provide flexible insurance options to employees
- Federally subsidized vouchers to help low-income individuals (up to three times the poverty level) buy

health insurance

- Health insurance for high-risk and pre-existing-condition individuals, which could be handled through Medicaid, high-risk insurance pools or other options
- Sale of health insurance across state lines (more competition!)
- Increased deductibility amounts for Health Savings Accounts (HSAs)
- Association Health Insurance Plans
- Medical lawsuit "loser pay" laws

These ideas would allow individuals to make their

A weekly column highlighting some of the more interesting aspects of our ancestry . . . our lineage . . . our roots.

THE END OF THE LINE

I wrote that Julius Caesar was a dictator but not an emperor. As a ruler with absolute power he made such a favorable impression on the Roman people that the Senate bestowed upon him the honor of dictator for life, the forename of imperator, and the surname of father of his country. Through Octavius (Augustus) he was offered a crown of olive leaves and the position of king of the Roman world, which he modestly refused, but it set the people up, or ripened them, to accept an emperor in the near future. Julius Caesar designated his grandnephew Octavian as heir to his fortune and to his name. After the death of Julius, Octavian accepted his inheritance, was elected emperor, and changed his name from Octavian to Augustus. During his 41 years of reign, Augustus received the admiration, respect, and affection of the Roman people, while history praises him for his restraint, patience, and true concern for the Roman tradition.

Both Julius Caesar and Augustus Caesar left such an indelible mark on the history of the world up to that time that the Senate conferred the title of Caesar on many succeeding emperors. This is the part of imperial history that is confusing to so many of us today. Some emperors were voted the title of Caesar by the Senate and some were not, while still others did not remain in office long enough to be evaluated. Some of them were gentle, kind, and very considerate, while many others were nothing more than brutal bastards.

Nero's death ended what is commonly referred to as the Julio-Claudian line of Roman emperors, and these were five in numbers, that followed after the death of Julius Caesar. All five were in some way related to Julius through the female members of their families.

We know that Tiberius, who followed Augustus, made such a bad impression on the people that at the first news of his death many people ran about the city shouting "Tiberius to the Tiber," while others prayed to their gods to provide him no everlasting home except among the damned. Caligula, the succeeding emperor became an insane tyrant who did more harm than good, and is regarded as the most grotesque figure ever to serve as emperor of the Roman Empire.

Although I avoided commenting on the negative side of the reign of Claudius during previous columns, there are credible historians who claim that he was treated as a buffoon in his younger days, his selection as emperor of Rome was made by the fickle finger of fate, and that his campaign which supposedly gained great victories in Britain was the greatest sham ever to be perpetrated upon the Roman populace.

Nero, the last of the Julio-Claudians became one of the most cruel, depraved, and despotic emperors that ever ruled Rome. His own father said "Only that which is abominable and harmful to the public could be born of Agrippina and myself" and Nero certainly didn't disappoint his dear old daddy.

An interesting comment by one ancient historian tells of an eagle that flew to Livia, the wife of Augustus, who was sunbathing at her villa. The bird dropped a white hen in her lap and it in turn was holding a sprig of laurel in its beak. Livia raised the hen and it hatched a great brood of chickens. She also planted the laurel, which grew into such a large grove that all of the Caesars gathered their branches from this place before going to celebrate their triumphs. We are told that after celebrating, each of the Caesars returned to the grove to plant their laurel branches in the same spot, and these also flourished. The story goes on to say that just before the death of each of the Julio-Claudian Emperors, the laurel that each had planted

The Long Struggle for Independence

The American Revolutionary War began April 19, 1775, a date celebrated as a public holiday — Patriots' Day — in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the State of Maine. The war became a fight for independence with the July 1776 adoption, by the Americans' Continental Congress, of the Declaration of Independence.

As you celebrate American freedom this Independence Day weekend — culminating in the free concert and fireworks spectacular at the Charles River Esplanade — remember that independence did not come easily. The war took seven years, with major battles as late as 1781. When, on July 18, 1776, two weeks after the signing, the Declaration of Independence finally completed the long trek on the roads of the day from Philadelphia for the first public reading in Boston, it was not at all inevitable that we Americans should win independence from Great Britain. No one had heard of such a thing as a colony throwing off its mother country. And the idea that untrained volunteer farmer/soldiers would defeat the best professional army and navy in the world was nearly inconceivable.

Coming to aid of the American cause were the Kingdom of France, the Dutch Republic, and the Kingdom of Spain. Provisional Articles of Peace were signed at Paris on November 30, 1782. The final Treaty was signed September 3, 1783. It was ratified by Congress on January 14, 1784, and by the King of Great Britain on April 9, 1784. Ratification documents were exchanged in Paris on May 12, 1784.

The American negotiators, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, and John Jay, secured, from one of the largest and most sophisticated world powers, a treaty which contained not only an unconditional acknowledgment of American independence, but also important provisions establishing the territory of the United States as stretching from Canada to Florida and from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. American commercial interests were protected by a provision for Americans to continue to fish the waters of the Atlantic off Canada.

The Revolution began with noble sentiment — We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness. It ended with a legal agreement over boundaries and fishing rights. Such is the unchanging course of human events. Noble sentiments are good, even necessary, but they have to be backed up by practical texts. So, having ended the war with the Treaty of Paris in 1783, the next big step for the young nation, in 1787, was to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty — by drafting and adopting our Constitution.

GUEST EDITORIAL

WHAT EVER HAPPENED TO THE WAR POWERS ACT?

by Sal Giarratani

The US Congress passed the War Powers Act in 1973 in direct reaction to the Vietnam War and Presidents Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon. The Vietnam War was never officially a war but it lasted years, killing over 58,000 Americans. Capitol Hill decided it was time to hold the president accountable to Congress for military actions taken. The law prohibited the military from being involved in actions for more than 60 days without congressional authorization, plus a 30-day extension.

The 60-day dateline passed in May with the White House saying it is in compliance with the law. The 90-day mark was Sunday, June 19. The White House says if the mission in Libya continues until September, it will cost the American taxpayers another $1.1 billion. Claims by the White House that the 1973 law isn't being violated have only further inflamed the Congress. Speaker John Boehner threatens to withhold money for the mission, saying, "We're part of an effort to drop bombs ... It doesn't pass the straight-face test, in my view, that we're not in the midst of hostilities." US Senator Jim Webb, D-Virginia, a combat veteran on the Armed Services Committee adds, "Spending a billion dollars and dropping bombs on people sounds like hostilities to me." US Senator Tom Rooney, R-Tennessee thinks the White House is telling us "that this is not a war insults our intelligence. I won't stand for it and neither will my constituents."

If the US Congress thinks President Obama is in violation of the 1973 law then it should do its part by cutting off further appropriations for the Libyan action. Talk is just talk but actions always speak louder than words.

The Betrothed — A Huge Success

By Elena Lucco Borlera

Betrothed Director and Performer Massimiliano Finazzer Flory, Dante Alighieri Society President Spencer Di Scala with his wife Laura and Consul General Giuseppe Pastorelli.

The performance of The Betrothed (I Promessi Sposi) was held on the evening of Saturday, June 18, in collaboration with the Italian Consulate. The event was a huge success. Over 175 were in attendance and treated to a sophisticated and emotionally powerful performance describing the repression in Italy before the country's unification. The performance dramatically illustrated how literature and music combined to impress on the minds of Europeans the state of Italy before the Risorgimento and how social and political conditions set the stage for the liberation that culminated in 1861.

The Betrothed is the most renowned Italian historical novel. First published in 1827 (inspired by Walter Scott's Ivanhoe), it is considered a basis for the modern Italian language and it is widely studied in Italian secondary schools. Manzoni settled his novel in northern Italy in 1628. He did a strict historical research and, at the same time, he described Italian society of every age, with all its strengths and weaknesses that are still alive nowadays.

The director and performer Massimiliano Finazzer Flory, the prima ballerina from the Italian theatre La Sacra Gilda Gelati and Giuseppe Verdi Orchestra's violinist Elsa Martignoni came from Italy for this U.S. tour including Washington, Chicago, Miami, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The Dante Alighieri Society in collaboration with the Italian General Consulate organized the event also in order to celebrate the anniversary of the 150th Italian Unification.

The public was enchanted and at the end they did a long standing ovation. Many thanks go out to Consul General Giuseppe Pastorelli for his continued collaboration with the Dante on high-level cultural events, cooperation that will continue in the future. Thanks to Vice-President for Cultural Affairs Luisa Marino for doing such excellent work as the liaison between the Dante, the Consulate, and the artists on the organization of the event, and to Charlyn Warrick for her usual efficient support of all events. Also a big thanks to Sal Bramante who promoted the event.

Special thanks to the performers and the staff from Milan who were responsible for the event: Massimiliano Finazzer Flory (Director, Actor, Writer), Gilda Gelati (Prima Ballerina, La Scala, Milan); Elsa Martignoni (Violinist, Giuseppe Verdi Orchestra, Milan); and to Rossella Farinotti and Alessandro Santi, David Gibbons, and Paul Terassi.

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Sal Giarratani

The Town of Braintree made the news recently when its brand-new state representative got himself into an embarrassing situation getting caught by a House Officer allegedly inside the House Chamber near the Speaker's podium getting a little active reportedly with the aid of another state representative. According to the news reports, Rep. Mark Cusack, 26, ended up in the area "after a late night budget session led to an alcohol-fueled gathering in House Speaker Robert A. DeLeo's office," stated a June 15 Boston Herald news story.

Cusack apologized to Speaker DeLeo and hopefully Cusack learned something from it all. He is still a new member of the House Transportation Committee and surely now knows traveling over to the Speaker's office is a big no-no. The reputation of the Great and General Court has been well documented in the media and tarnished by the general public over the years.

It is more than enough to snicker at but it is relatively small potatoes and hardly a story with legs beyond this column. I'm sure Cusack has learned a valuable lesson about being in the wrong place at the wrong time. He isn't US Rep. Anthony Weiner, D-NY who's dug himself into a Big Dig-like hole. Cusack was unquestionably dumb but Weiner has proven himself both dumb and a liar. Weiner can no longer serve in the US House but Cusack remains a member in good faith of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. We all make stupid mistakes and wish we could re-do things over again. Cusack in fact may be a better state representative for his Braintree constituents by coming across as a regular kind of guy who makes mistakes and owns up to them.

I remember when I was 26 years old too. The world seems endless. Life looks effortless. Cusack got himself elected to office at a young age. He will continue to mature as surely as he matured over this quite documented incident.

Ah, to be both young and restless. He may never live down this incident and the jokes may forever haunt him but mostly in good nature. There's no mean-ness in this corner. I just laughed when I heard about it and knew the unnamed state rep would turn out to be someone in his twenties and I was absolutely "correcto."

Considering the likes of Newt Gingrich, John Edwards and Anthony Weiner, Rep. Mark Cusack looks like a saint, eh? Eventually, the young and restless turn into the rest of us, a little boring and not so young either.

Old Friends

by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari

It was about three weeks ago when Helen called the house and asked if we would like to get together with some former co-workers for dinner. Helen must have read our minds for it had been a year since we last saw our friends and we were anxious to catch up with them and see what they had been up to. We immediately agreed leaving it up to Helen to choose the restaurant for our get together, knowing from past experience, that she never fails to find “just the right place”.

On Friday of last week we made our way to Park Square for dinner with our friends, Helen, in a very short time, was able to pull the whole thing off successfully finding an evening when we all were free to spend a few hours together. We arrived to find all four ladies seated in a small cubicle just large enough for six people. After kisses and hugs we took our seats and now the conversation really got going. We seemed to begin where the conversation left off a year ago; it was as if a year had not passed. Everyone wanting to know what the others had been up to, we spoke of family and mutual friends, vacations and health, all with a light touch that has characterized our friendship right from the very beginning, and of course there were those amusing stories from that

are Healing

Ciao Bella,

So what's in your garden? Besides the usual herbs for culinary necessity there is peppermint.

Peppermint is a hybrid mint which is a cross between spearmint and water mint. The plant can now be found all over the world but its roots were in Europe and Asia.

While producing purple flowers the peppermint plant contains menthol, considered to be a volatile oil. The menthol's enticingly cool and spicy fragrance can be used in aromatherapy known to relieve exhaustion, stress and anxiety. When the oil is applied to skin it can brighten and cool it.

The oil can also be diluted with jojoba oil and when applied topically will prevent acne and clogged pores. If you experience a flaky scalp, add a few drops of oil to your shampoo.

Peppermint is also mentioned in the Bible to relieve pain. Doctors will tell you to soak your achy part in warm water and peppermint oil. You can find peppermint in lip balm with its cooling effects to soothe sunburned, windblown and chapped lips.

It's heaven when peppermint bath salts are used to relax cramped muscles and ease respiratory illnesses. Even just a whiff of a fresh brewed cup of peppermint tea will have its aromatic value. Drinking it aids in digestion.

Peppermint is also a common ingredient in toothpaste and mouthwash for its antiseptic properties.

My Nana and Nano grew an amazing garden every summer including mint. Nano always smelled of the mint which emanated from his shirt pocket! He would always say “It's good for you! I can't ever remember him without that mint his shirt pocket.

You can find various products containing peppermint such as creams, footbaths, hair products and lotions. So “feel the heal” and do it minty!

Wishing all my Post-Gazette colleagues and my loyal readers a safe, healthy fun-filled 4th of July! Buona giornata and God bless the United States of America!

Freeway
Says ...

You can email your questions to postgazette@aol.com to the attention of Freeway. Don't forget folks, Freeway is not a vet, so please keep the questions light-hearted! Thanks.

The 4th of July is not far off so here are some safety tips for my pooch friends and their human companions for ALL the pooches that are out there that don't like fireworks because they hurt our ears. For many people, nothing beats lounging in the backyard on the Fourth of July with good friends and family including the four-legged members of the household. While it may seem like a great idea to reward Freeway with scraps from the grill and bring him along to watch fireworks, in reality some festive foods and products can be potentially hazardous to your pets.

Never leave alcoholic drinks unattended where pets can reach them. Alcoholic beverages have the potential to poison pets. If ingested, the animal could become very intoxicated and weak, severely depressed or could go into a coma. Death from respiratory failure is also a possibility in severe cases.

Do not apply any sun-screen or insect repellent product to your pet that is not labeled specifically for use on animals. Ingestion of sunscreen products can result in drooling, vomiting, diarrhea, excessive thirst and lethargy. The misuse of insect repellent that contains DEET can lead to neurological problems.

Always keep matches and lighter fluid out of your pets' reach. Certain types of matches contain chlorates, which could potentially damage blood cells and result in difficulty breathing or even kidney disease in severe cases. Lighter fluid can be irritating to skin, and if ingested can produce gastrointestinal irritation and central nervous system depression. If lighter fluid is inhaled, aspiration pneumonia and breathing problems could develop.

Keep your pets on their normal diet any change, even for one meal, can give your pets severe indigestion and diarrhea. This is particularly true for older animals who have more delicate digestive systems and nutritional requirements. And keep in mind that foods such as onions, chocolate, coffee, avocado, grapes, raisins, salt and yeast dough can all be potentially toxic to companion animals.

Do not put glow jewelry on your pets, or allow them to play with it. While the luminescent substance contained in these products is not highly toxic, excessive drooling and gastrointestinal irritation could still result from ingestions, and intestinal blockage could occur

East Boston’s Senior Leaders Honored by Trinity House

by Sal Giaratani

Judge Joseph V. Ferrino (ret) was among those honored as “Trinity Treasures” by NOAH.

Though the event was held outside under a tent due to the inclement weather, those gathered saw only sunny skies ahead for the East Boston community. Trinity House has been serving the needs of East Boston for generations since its start in 1917 and as new leaders in the community evolve today, NOAH has decided to honor those who over years past did more than just reside in East Boston actually live here and for this community they called home.

Evelyn Morash was honored at the event for her service over the years to the community. Here she is with her son Stephen Morash.

Trinity House, on June 22, 2011 honored a number of East Boston’s senior leaders and Mayor Tom Menino for their strong civic values and exceptional contributions to community building and social service. Those honored as “Trinity Treasures” included Fran Riley, Evelyn Morash, Mary Cahalane, Judge Joe Ferrino (ret) and Dr. Edith DeAngelis.

NOAH (the Neighborhood of Affordable Housing) took the time to celebrate those folks who shaped the community and its values which are essential for community — building. These leaders were recognized for building up East Boston and keeping it strong for generations to come.

In last week's "The Socially Set" column we featured Boston Health Care for the Homeless Program's "Medicine that Matters Gala" at the Seaport Hotel. This week we share three more Roger Farrington photos from that very special event.

..... The Milton Historical Society recently held its annual dinner at the Quincy Neighborhood Club. After a cocktail reception and delicious dinner, noted antiques dealer and former Milton Academy library director Henry Callan spoke on "The Romance of Tea."

His presentation, which included a slideshow, focused on how the ancient Chinese "medicinal herb" changed social life in Europe and political life in America.

Callan followed the tea trail from early Colonial days through the Boston Tea Party and the Revolution, followed by the China Trade in tea, silk and porcelain. Especially fascinating was the major part that opium played in the drama as recounted by Mr. Callan. A great time was enjoyed by all.

For information about the Society and its upcoming events, be sure to visit www.miltonhistoricalsociety.org.

..... Incidentally, The Boston Tea Party Ships and Museum is beginning construction of a new state-of-the-art facility that will tell the story of the historical Boston Tea Party. The Boston Museum is scheduled to open in the Spring of 2012.

The Museum will include interactive exhibits, actors dressed in period clothing, a Tavern, and Tea Room, as well as a gift shop for guests to explore.

The new Boston Tea Party Ships and Museum will feature three traditional tall ships, which will replicate the ships that took part in the original Boston Tea Party: the Beaver, the Dartmouth, and the Eleanor.

Historic Master Shipwright Leon Poindexter is currently building the ships in Gloucester.

To celebrate this monumental event, a press conference was held in April on Atlantic Wharf, at the corner of Congress St. and Atlantic Ave. Present were Mayor Thomas Menino, a number of State and City officials, members of the business community and actors participating in the reenactment of "the dumping of the tea."

Shawn P. Ford is the Executive Director of Historic Tours of America, the owner of the Boston Tea Party Ships & Museum. Historic Tours of America, Inc. is an entertainment company that provides historically oriented vacation experiences for guests through the operation of trolleys, street trains, high speed ferries, themed retail stores, festival marketplaces and other historic tourist attractions in Boston, Key West, San Diego, Savannah, St. Augustine and Washington, D.C.

Bidder Sweet Filene's Site?

The Filene's site was put up for sale months ago but the Downtown Crossing site still is facing an uncertain future since the New York owners refuse to unload the property at a big loss. Many of the bids have been around $450 million but that is about one-quarter of the purchase price that Vornado Realty Trust and its partners paid for the former Filene's Department Store. City Hall is far from satisfied with the lack of information coming from the owners. A BRA spokesperson reported that Vornado has not provided any updates in months.

Said the B.R.A's Susan Elsbée, "We have been talking with other people interested in the property, but nothing has materialized. We're a long way from the goal line." Among the bidders is Robert Druker, a luxury property builder. Druker presently owns the Corner Mall, the former Gilchrist building right across from the Filene's site. Thomas J. Hynes Jr., CEO of Colliers International has said, "My bet is that you'll see construction begin there by the end of the year. It's really more a matter of the price, but it's too good a site to sit there. One of the principals on the project is his nephew John B. Hynes III who is aggressively trying to sell the site.

City Hall officials are saying that several retailers have expressed interest in the site, including Target, Whole Foods, Au Bon Pain and Nordstrom Rack. Even Filene's Basement is still interested in its former site. File this one under: Build on the Big Hole in the Ground.

Downtown Crossing Borders to Close

Downtown Crossing will be losing the downtown Borders bookstore site at the corner of Washington and Bromfield streets leaving another empty storefront in the suffering business district. The city keeps trying to revitalize Downtown Crossing which has become a shadow of its former self. However, Rosemarie Sansone, president of the Boston Downtown Business Improvement District stated that nearly $200 million in investment have been thrown into the area since 2010 near the bookstore site proving the area is not in decline.

Two months ago, Mayor Tom Menino celebrated the openings of a number of downtown businesses including CVS Pharmacy and Chipotle. Mike Murphy of Clarendon Group USA, which leased the property site to Borders said, "You never want to have a space where a tenant has difficulty. Sometimes (a closure) can be an opportunity and sometimes not."

Susan Elsbée, BRA spokesman says, "The district hasn't looked better." Now, there's a positive spin on bad news, huh?

Taps Never Stops
for this Guy

A.J. "Buddy" Madden stands proud as he plays the 24 haunting notes of "Taps." At 92 years old, he has played the tune over 3,500 times at funerals, ceremonies and endless cemeteries. He says, "I still get emotional." He had a 27 year career in the US Army that ended in a 1971 retirement ... Along the way, he played or led 19 Army bands in countless parades.

Madden said the highlight of his career happened in 2010 when he was invited to Arlington National Cemetery to play during a memorial honoring the 3rd Infantry. He became the oldest bugler to ever play there. He currently lives in Massachusetts down on the Cape with his wife and says, "We have a wonderful life." Sounds like his wonderful life has no final chapter yet as the bands play on and he toots that horn of his.

AMERICAN: THE BILL
HICKS STORY (2-DVD)

American: The Bill Hicks Story brings to life the amazing true story of one of modern culture's most iconic figures. Much more than just a comedian, Hicks has become an inspiration to millions around the world. As a rebellious teenager, he discovered that comedy was a way to break all the rules, but then found it could also open people's minds. Hicks' comedy challenged the injustices of life head on, but his uncompromising approach met with conflict in America, and it was instead on the international stage where he found fame. Sadly, in 1993, on the verge of wider success he fell ill with terminal cancer. His timeless material has lived on, as the man who changed comedy forever. (1 hr. 41 mins. and 5+ hrs. of extras).

Oliver Platt and Gabourey Sidibe shine in this talented ensemble. Brutally honest, unapologetically funny and perfectly profound, The Big C is a surprisingly different comedy that reminds us that life is always worth living on our own terms. (6 hrs. 3 mins.)

LEGEND OF THE FIST:
THE RETURN OF CHEN
ZHEN (Blu-ray + DVD)
Well Go USA Entertainment

In 1920s China, the nation is divided by infighting. Japan has become the most powerful force in Asia, taking over Northern Shanghai. With the city torn in half by international conflict, the popular nightclub Casablanca has become a hotbed of spies, mobsters, English officials and the Japanese military — all looking to gain control of the country, with little regard for its citizens. Into this den of intrigue enters Chen Zhen (Donnie Yen), who has returned to China after fighting alongside the allied forces in Europe. During the day he's known as "Ku," and appears to be just another wealthy playboy, but at night he takes to the streets as a masked warrior, determined to subvert the Japanese invasion. A film that combines today's martial arts and a spy thriller. (1 hrs. 46 mins.)

own decisions about health care and health insurance rather than a bureaucrat, and they would allow the free market system to bring down the costs of both. ObamaCare does not do that, which is why over 1,300 companies have asked for and received waivers from the law.

It may shock the liberals out there in la-la land, but if ObamaCare would have saved those businesses money, they would have implemented it in a heartbeat. It won't!

Answering Sylvia's question probably would have answered the same question that millions of Americans were asking. But I could not squeeze the answer in during the presidential sound-bite derby.

The health care question was not the only question that did not get answered during the presidential debate that night, because the format for questions and answers left a lot to be desired. Nevertheless, I will be right back in there slugging it out at the next debate also.

Next time, I hope we get a genuine chance to express our respective points of view on the big issues. In that way, viewers are able to learn something, and discover the differences that distinguish the candidates from one another.

John King's last question to all of us was a good one and unexpected one. "What did we learn from the debate tonight?" I learned that the field of candidates seeking the Republican nomination for president is not a weak field as some people have tried to convince the public.

When six of the seven candidates on the stage that night hold or have held a major public office, along with one problem-solving businessman, most people do not consider that a weak field. With six of the participants having held the position of Speaker, Senator, Governor or Representative, that's not a weak field. And I was just happy to be there as Mister Cain.

Maybe that's why I wanted to answer the questions.

Set in New York City in the mid-1950s, the musical explores the rivalry between the Jets and the Sharks, two teenage street gangs of different ethnic backgrounds. Bernstein's score for the musical has become extremely popular; it includes "Something's Coming", "Maria", "America", "Somewhere", "Tonight", "Jet Song", "I Feel Pretty", "A Boy Like That", "One Hand, One Heart", "Gee, Officer Krupke" and "Cool". # Ray Barron's 11 O'CLOCK NEWS

Fashionable news! In 1930, the average American woman owned nine outfits. Today, thanks primarily to the lower prices of garments made abroad in low-wage nations, she purchases more than 60 pieces of new clothing per year.

Giuseppina, la coscia storta, claims, the women who are first to wear the latest fashions are usually the ones who shouldn't.

Carlo Scostumato, says, "The reason men's suits look the same year after year is that most men are wearing the same ones."

Huh? 50 percent of American households are so "financially fragile" that they say they certainly could not or probably could not come up with $2,000 to pay an unexpected expense, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research.

According to the astute "Mona" Lisa Cappuccio, on average, each American uses and discards, about 500 plastic bags a year.

Busted-up! It has been reported, Crystal Harris, 25, the latest large-breasted blonde to be courted by Hugh Hefner, after she called off their marriage just five days before she was to wed the Viagra-fueled 85-year-old creator of Playboy. "Crystal has had a change of heart," sighed Hef.

The proper British! Fifteen percent of people admitted in a British survey to serving guests food that had fallen on the floor.

Gee, Australian police have caught a one-legged burglar by following a trail of one-legged footprints. David Phillips, 44, was tracked after burglarizing a series of homes. "It was not the hardest series of crimes to solve as he cut a pretty distinctive figure with one leg," said a police spokesman. "By the time he left a trail in the mud, even Inspector Clouseau might have managed to collar him."

The staff at a Goodwill store in Fenton, Michigan, is trying to find the person who donated an urn containing grandma's ashes. In a pile of donations, the staff recently found a box labeled "Grandma's Urn," and in it a sealed vase containing human remains. "It's got to be the No. 1 or 2 weirdest item we've ever received," said manager Allen Ryckman. He suspects the ashes were donated inadvertently as "part of a house clean-out."

Poll watch! 57% of Americans say politicians get caught in sex scandals because they are under greater scrutiny. 19% say it's because politicians have "lower moral standards than ordinary Americans."

What wrinkles reveal: A glance in the mirror may be enough to gauge how likely you are to suffer bone fractures as you age. A new Yale University study shows that the deeper a middle-aged woman's facial wrinkled appear, the weaker her bones are. The reason may turn out to be that firm skin and strong bones are both built by collagen, a protein our body begins to lose as we get older. Study author Lubna Pal tells ABCNews.com that confirming a link between wrinkles and bone health could help doctors identify and treat osteoporosis among older patients. The condition currently requires an expensive diagnostic test, so it often goes unnoticed until a person breaks a hip or a leg. But "if things on the outside of us can indicate a risk to things inside," Pal says, "osteoporosis may not be such a silent disease."

Italian wines are enjoying a renaissance! Among the many "ancient" grapes that are contributing to a renaissance for Italian whites, "the most interesting to me is the fiano," said Eric Asimov in The New York Times. Fiano is unusually versatile. "At base, it has smoky, nut-like, spicy quality that I find very attractive, along with winning mineral flavors." Yet it can also provide "clean, cold refreshment" when the occasion calls. One of the wines mentioned is 2009 Feudi di San Gregorio Fiano di Avellino. Well, all of you who have roots in Avellino should purchase a bottle of the wine. We plan to!

Robyn Waters of Swampscott, says, "Age improves all wines except the whine of a man."

Like we have continuously said, "Women are better managers than men!" For the first time, IBM may name a woman to its chief executive post. She is sales chief Virginia M. Rometty, a 53-year-old who has spent three decades at the company. Remember, our mothers were good managers! They managed to feed us, keep us healthy, educate us, keep us from harm's way, etc. And of course, our wives continued to "manage" the family! Bless them!

Ah, Father's Day! Trusting all of you fathers enjoyed the day! Well, on Father's Day, we always gifted the loving wife for making it possible for us to become a father. She deserved the gift and more! So what did we receive for Father's Day? The usual! Jars of orange marmalade! Yummy!

Good news! Wal-Mart is launching an online grocery-delivery service called Wal-Mart to Go that will sell food, health and beauty products, medicine, and other grocery items. Delivery fees are around $5, and the minimum order is $49.

Gee, remember when grocery stores used to make free home deliveries? If you do remember, then that indicates you are a seasoned individual. Ha!

Ah! The Bruins! Just remember, a hockey puck is one inch thick. Canada imports about 850 Russian-made hockey sticks on an average day. Professional hockey players skate an average speeds of twenty to twenty-five miles per hour.

In the four professional major North American sports (baseball, basketball, football, and hockey), only eight teams' nicknames do not end with "s." These teams are the Miami Heat, the Utah Jazz, the Orlando Magic, the Chicago White Sox, the Colorado Avalanche, the Tampa Bay Lightning, the Minnesota Wild, and the Boston Red Sox.

So begins the summer season! Well, according to the brilliant Lucille A. Monuteaux, Office Manager of East Boston Social Centers, "Summer is the season when it is sometimes hard to tell whether a man is wearing shorts or merely forgot his pants." The sociable John Roch, Business Manager of the Centers, says, "Summer is here when the chair you're sitting on gets up when you do."

The great, knowledgeable, Peter Beatrice of sunny Swampscott, says, "Summer is a season divided into three parts: anticipation, vacation, recuperation." How true!

One more time! The popular news anchor Jack Williams of WBZ-TV began broadcasting at the age of 13, when he built his own radio station at home in Idaho. Two years later, he was hired by an Idaho radio station KYTE as an announcer. Jack joined WBZ-TV in 1975.

Some interesting show biz stuff by the stately musicologist Albert Natale. According to Sal Mineo, Boris Karloff was a good actor because he was a kindly man and in no way scary. Bela Lugosi was not a good actor because he was not a pleasant man and he was plenty scary, as is! Mia Farrow, after wedding Frank Sinatra and hearing Ava Gardner's quote about her boyish appeal, responded, "I can match bottoms with anyone in Hollywood!" Robert Mitchum claimed John Wayne had four-inch lifts in his shoes. "He had the overheads on his boat accommodated to fit him. He had a special roof put in his station wagon ... The son of a bitch; they probably buried him in his good dam lifts." Vivien Leigh revealed love scenes with Clark Gable in Gone With The Wind was not that romantic. His dentures smelled something awful And the noted film director Otto Preminger claimed directing Marilyn Monroe was like directing Lassie. "You needed fourteen takes to get one right." Yvonne De Carlo, says, "Everybody in Hollywood has had Tony Curtis!" In response, Tony Curtis says, "Everybody in Hollywood has had Yvonne De Carlo!"

BROILED LAMB CHOPS

4 lamb chops	2 fresh tomatoes sliced (optional)
2 garlic cloves chopped or crushed	Chopped mushrooms (optional)
3 tablespoon olive oil	Salt and black pepper
1 teaspoon oregano
1 large onion sliced (optional)

In a bowl, mix chopped or crushed garlic with oil and oregano. Using pastry brush, spread the mixture onto both sides of each lamb chop. Marinate lamb chops in extra marinating mixture in a dish for at least thirty minutes.

TO BROIL: Lightly spray broiling tray with oil before placing chops on the tray. Place tray with chops in oven at least two inches under the broiling coils to broil fifteen to twenty minutes, depending on thickness of chops. Turn chops occasionally in order to cook on both sides. Broil chops until they reach the consistency desired. Before serving, brush extra marinating mixture over chops. Salt and pepper to taste.

OPTIONAL: Place tomato slices over marinated lamb chops in broiling tray. Then spread onion slices over tomato slices. Sprinkle a little oregano and oil over the onions. Chopped mushrooms can also be added. Cover broiling tray with aluminum foil before placing in the oven at least two inches under the broiling coils. Broil about twenty to thirty minutes depending on thickness of chops. Check for desired tenderness. Remove cover to allow browning. Salt and pepper to taste.

Serves two.

NOTE: I have grilled marinated lamb chops many times on our charcoal gas grill following this recipe. When I add tomato and onion slices, I arrange everything in a throwaway broiling tray, cover it with aluminum foil and cook over the grill. Then uncover them and brown slightly on the grill.

now withered and died. Also, at the death of Nero, the entire grove died off, as did all the chickens. It's a great story but a little too ridiculous for me to swallow. The villa where all of this took place was given the name of "Ad Gallinas." I'll not dispute this name because it just happens to be the Latin expression for "hen-roost" or "chicken coop."

The second part of the story tells of lightning striking a temple of the Julio-Claudians after Nero's death. This one lightning strike is said to have caused the heads to fall from all of the statues at the same time, while the scepter (symbol of power) fell from the hand of Augustus. Additionally, this one story is said to have caused more flatulence (stomach gas) in more people than any other story to come out of Roman Antiquity, but don't dishearten folks, better times are coming. The Flavian and Antonine emperors produced some of the best rulers in Roman history, but first we'll have to sweat out Galba, Otho and Vitellius, "i tre pagliacci" (the three clowns).

A Nostalgic Remembrance

July 4 is just a couple of days away. To most, this means a picnic of some type and fireworks. For Bostonians, it also includes the Boston Pops Esplanade Concert, a tradition started by Arthur Fiedler, continued by John Williams and kept alive by Keith Lockhart. Back in the day, I remember Uncles Paul, Nick and Dad playing for some event on the 4th. As a child, Mom and I attended concerts that Dad played at, that included locations like the band stands at Revere Beach, Nantasket Beach, Houghton's Pond, Wood Island Park, Salem Willows and Boston Common.

I wonder if events like this still happen. As I pass through small Massachusetts towns, today, I still see band stands in the centers of many of them, and wonder if they are relics of the past or whether they are still used to present free music to the public.

The Musicians' Union used to have a fund that paid the musicians for the music which was free to the public and just for the asking. Back in the day, every time a record was played on radio, a few cents went into a fund, called the Radio and Transcription Fund, or R and T fund, for short. It later became the Music Performer's Trust Fund, or MPTF. Today, it still exists, but is a shell of its former self. When the money was never ending, most of the bands were Sousa-style concert bands, large brass ensembles that played a bit of classical, lots of marches and a few popular selections. Years later, when they evolved into dance or swing type bands, I played either bass or bass guitar for the leaders that included Bill Harding, Bernie King, Tony Bruno, Jr., Johnny Shea and Baron Hugo. I even had my own Dixieland combo and played at Shea's Beach in East Boston a few times. (It's Constitution Beach for those of you who pass the sign on Bennington Street in Orient Heights, but didn't grow up in East Boston)

When I was a child, Dad was hooked up with a conductor who specialized in this type of music. His name was Max Cruley and Dad was the tuba player. Back then, Dad owned both a tuba and a Sousaphone. He had marched in many a parade carrying these instruments, but he preferred the bandstand type concerts. They were easier on the back muscles. My favorite locations were the indoor bandstand at Nantasket Beach or the outdoor gazebo at Revere Beach. When the band was booked to play concerts at these locations, Dad would bring Nanna, Babbononno, Mom and me along. At times, a lunch would be packed ahead of time for the family to enjoy. I always wished that Mom would forget the food, because both beaches, Nantasket and Revere, had hot dog stands, pizza places, lots of cotton candy vendors, pop corn machines with hot-salted pop corn, and soft-serve ice cream shops that sold something called "frozen custard." The kick-off concert was always on the Fourth of July.

Days before the first concert, Dad would take his Sousaphone out of a hall closet and begin to shine it up. Seeing it was made of silver, it would have tarnished over the winter and he wanted it to be perfect. When I was old enough, he would pay me to shine the instrument. His only task was to make sure the valves were well-oiled and the mouth pieces were clean enough to blow through. If one of Max Cruley's concerts was to begin at noon on the 4th, Max, with baton in hand, would face the orchestra and give the downbeat just as the clock struck twelve. All of the musicians, Max included would be dressed in band uniforms that included navy blue jackets and military hats. When the baton signaled the down beat, all of the musicians would stand and begin to play the Star Spangled Banner. The audiences would stand at attention until the National Anthem was over, applaud and then sit to listen to the rest of the concert.

I got to know most of the musicians as a child. Many of them were old timers that Babbononno knew and he would greet them with handshakes and hugs during intermission. Babbononno would also have to acknowledge his sons, because more often than not, Uncles Paul and Nick were in the front line of musicians playing their clarinets. One of my favorite spots was the bandstand at Wood Island Park. This was a recreation center in the Day Square area of East Boston accessed by Neptune Road. Back in the 1960s, it became part of Logan Airport. But, by then, it had deteriorated. The only part of it that was used was the parking lot which became a lover's lane at night ... but, that's another story.

When the band played at the Wood Island bandstand, I was just a young kid, but knew most of the other young kids who accompanied their parents there, and we played an assortment of games while the musicians played away.

Years later, I was asked if I could put together a Dixieland band to play on the 4th of July in back of the original bath house at Shea's Beach (Constitution Beach in East Boston). I assembled a group of musicians that I knew could play Dixieland music better than most. Among them was a tuba player I called, "Dad." They advertised the event in the East Boston Times and the Free Press, the two East Boston newspapers back then. The names they listed were mine, Dad's, Uncle Paul's and a couple of other East Bostonians that I included in the band. My ensemble included banjo, tuba, drums, clarinet, trombone, and two trumpets. I brought my bass violin along, but I was there, basically, to conduct. Evidently, many East Bostonians who remembered the name, decided to come to the beach on that Fourth of July. As we began to set up, we were greeted by throngs of well wishers who remembered us from the old neighborhood.

Some were from Dad's generation and knew him and Uncle Nick. Others were my age. People I had grown up with who brought their young families with them to enjoy the day.

While preparing for the event, I decided to do something unorthodox. I used the melody of the song, "Southie Is My Hometown," and re-wrote the title and words. Considering where I was, when I announced the song, it was called, "Eastie Is My Hometown." Throughout my career as a musician, I prided myself as being a good musician and a bad, a very bad singer. When I sang the substitute words, regardless of my lack of vocal qualities, they beach goers applauded and screamed as if I was a local hero, come home.

We played dozens of Dixieland favorites. I had assembled some of the best musicians I could dig up to be part of that band, and by the time intermission rolled around, they had proven themselves. One thing was missing. Dad whispered in my ear and I included his suggestion during part two of the concert ... Good old fashioned Italian music. I even sang "Oh Marie" in Italian.

Those days are gone, but I would like to close wishing everyone a Happy and Safe 4th of July, and MAY GOD BLESS AMERICA.

LO SAPEVATE CHE ...

Dal primo gennaio 2011 tutti i turisti che pernoveranno a Roma saranno tassati un extra euro a testa, al giorno. E' una nuova tassa che i romani preferiscono chiamarla 'contributo', che porterà nelle casse del tesoro civico circa 80 milioni di euro l'anno, necessari per le spese di mantenimento dei servizi pubblici della capitale. E' stato il Consiglio Comunale di Roma ad approvare questo nuovo provvedimento, il primo in Italia. Questa tassa sarà aggiunta alla bolletta di un albergo e pagata dal visitatore prima di lasciare l'albergo.

Nell'anno 2010 ci sono stati a Roma un milione di turisti in più del passato, venuti nella capitale per visitare dozzine di chiese, musei nel Vaticano, ed altri posti interessanti nel patrimonio artistico di Roma. Leggendo il provvedimento comunale notiamo che anche gli alloggi 'B & B', i campeggi, gli stabilimenti balneari (di Ostia), devono far pagare la tassa, ai non residenti, di 'un euro'. Lo stesso vale per gli autobus turistici.

L'idea di far pagare un euro in più ai turisti che visitano una città ha attratto l'attenzione di altri sindaci, specialmente quelli di Firenze e di Venezia: anche loro hanno bisogno di un 'extra reddito'. Però ci sono delle eccezioni. Infatti chi alloggia a Roma per un familiare malato, e chi fa da guida a gruppi di più di 25 persone, sono esentati dal pagare la extra tassa. Naturalmente ci sono state vivaci proteste da parte dell'associazione alberghiera che chiede perché questa extra tassa, seppure di un euro, deve essere pagata da coloro che alloggiano negli alberghi. Inoltre loro chiedono anche perché questa tassa intesa a gravare sui turisti, non viene applicata anche ai ristoranti.

Prepariamoci quindi a pagare un altro euro ($1.35) quando andiamo ad alloggiare in un albergo, in Italia, non solo a Roma ma presto a Firenze ed a Venezia.

A proposito, c'è lo sconto ai pensionati? (uno scherzo!).

DID YOU KNOW THAT? ...

Effective January 1, 2011, all tourists with Rome as their destination will be charged an additional 'euro', a day. It is a new municipal tax which Roman residents prefer to call 'contribution'; it will bring into the city coffers about 82 million euro a year, much needed to upkeep the public services of the Italian capital. It was the City Administration to approve this extra tax, the first in Italy. It will be added to a hotel's bill and paid by the visitor before leaving. In the year 2010, an extra million tourists came to Rome to visit dozen of churches, museums, and the Vatican, as well as other interesting places that are part of the artistic Roman patrimony.

The new city law will also charge one euro a-day to the 'B & B establishments, to the beach places at Ostia (Rome's beach place), and to the tourists buses. The idea to charge one euro to the visitors/tourists who land in Rome, has attracted the attention of other Mayors, particularly those of Florence and Venice: they too can use some extra cash!

However, there are some exceptions: anyone visitor who spends some nights in Rome for a sick family member, or is a visitors' guide to at least 25 people, will not be charged the extra tax. Of course there have been loud complaints from the people running the hotels, who ask why, the extra euro, must be charged only to those who stay in hotels. Furthermore, they ask also why the extra tax, charged to tourists, isn't charged to those who eat in restaurants. Which is a fair question!

Thus, let's prepare ourselves to pay the additional euro ($1.35) when we decide to stay in an Italian hotel, not only in Rome, but soon also in Florence and in Venice.

By the way, is there a 'senior citizen's' discount? (Just kidding!)

past that we all shared in common that would mean little to anyone else but invoked gales of laughter from the group. It is those stories that speak of a shared experience that help bind us together in life.

Dinner was delicious, we were served slowly allowing us plenty of time to talk and reminisce. Three and a half hours later we were still talking and still having a good time. Waiters and waitresses kept drifting over to our table to see what was going on because we were laughing so much and at one point a customer sent a small bottle of wine to our table in appreciation for a group that knew how to have fun.

It was now 9:30 and everyone needed to get home but good friends never simply part, there were tears, hugs and more laughter as we made our way to the door and on to the sidewalk and as always came the mischievous voice of Helen, "I will call you all in three months, we will get together before Christmas". There was an immediate yes from all of us and we all went our separate ways, happy to have gotten together and ready to do it again. Thank heaven for Helen!!!

GANGPLANKS FOR LITTLE PRINCE STREET?

The City of Boston is in sidewalk mode as new sidewalks are being laid across the neighborhoods of our city. Over in the North End by Hanover and Little Prince Streets, all the establishments recently had gangplanks over the drying cement sidewalks so that no one would apparently sink into the new sidewalks. I felt like Johnny Depp crossing the gangplank into the Post-Gazette office. Last thing I want to be is a front page news story about newspaper columnist falling into an unfinished sidewalk.

NEW MASS MENTAL SLATED FOR NOVEMBER OPENING

The original Mass. Mental Health Center building over in the Longwood Medical Area closed in November 2003. The building was 91 years old at the time. All its services were transferred over to space within the Shattuck Hospital, on Binney Street where Mass. Mental continued on its mental health services. This coming November exactly eight years later, the new Massachusetts Mental Health Center will return to the Longwood area. The new site will actually be two sites. One of the buildings will be on Vining Street and the other on Binney Street. Both will stand in the shadow of the old M.M.H.C. site on Fenwood Road.

The Massachusetts Mental Health Center will be celebrating its 100th anniversary in 2012. It is also the first community mental health center in the country.

ROSLINDALE PARADE COMMITTEE SEEKS APPLICANTS FOR PRIZES

"Saluting Roslindale's Prized Pets" will be the theme of this year's Roslindale Day Parade. To celebrate this theme and raise money for the parade, the committee is inviting local pet owners to participate in the "Prized Pet Contest" which will run through mid-September. The winning pet will be honored with a float ride at the parade on Sunday, October 2, 2011. The committee is also looking for candidates for the "Mayor of Roslindale" Contest. For more info on both contests, call 617-327-4886 or email rosliondaleparade@aol.com.

CARDINAL STARTS NEW ORDER OF NUNS

Cardinal O'Malley is starting a new order of nuns here in the Boston archdiocese as the church here continues to try and move beyond years of upheaval with both the sex abuse scandal and church closings. The cardinal believes this new order of nuns could help bring the faithful back to the pews. However, if the goal is to get more folks back to church, shouldn't the archdiocese begin with the laity? There are still several parishes closed going back in 2004 that are still in parishioner vigils such as Our Lady of Mt. Carmel in East Boston. The cardinal, himself, needs to "take the church to the faithful. Passing the buck to a new order of nuns isn't the way.

CROSSROADS AT NEXT CROSS ROAD

The Crossroads Family Shelter usually holds an annual dinner at the Logan Hilton but this year this East Boston homeless shelter decided to hold an informal breakfast in the basement of Most Holy Redeemer church to discuss issues related to homelessness and offer a tour of the Havre Street shelter. Audrey Savikas, Crossroads director stated, "This 'no frills' gathering for our major donors and elected officials was an opportunity to be in honest dialogue about the social and economic challenges facing homeless families and service providers."

Former Senate President Bob Travaglini was there discussing ways to create a more sustainable future for Crossroads and families served. The gathering offered donors a firsthand look at how their contributions are put to good work.

BILL CHRISTOPHER RETIRES FROM SHATTUCK HOSPITAL

A good friend of mine Bill Christopher who has worked for the Department of Mental health for 20 years recently retired. I met him back in 2003 when I transferred to the Shattuck after the Mass Mental Health Center building closed. We became good friends and political allies. Christopher retired last month.

A retirement party was held in his honor and planned by Emilie Howard, the charge nurse on Nine North where Christopher worked.

His wife is the former Christine Mastrogiacomo up with me back in St. Philip's Parish in lower Roxbury. We attended school together at St. Rita's Grammar School before her family moved to Dorchester. The party was held on June 10 at Tony's Clam Shoppe on Wollaston Beach in Quincy.

Christopher lives in Hingham but is an OFDer coming out of Dorchester. A large turnout celebrated his work for the Department of Mental Health and wishing him the best in retirement.

DANA BLOCK PARTY JULY 26

QUINCY'S FLAG DAY PARADE FINALLY HELD

Quincy's annual Flag Day parade and fireworks was rained out on Saturday, June 11 and was rescheduled for June 18 under great weather conditions. The parade along Hancock Street and the fireworks at Pageant Field went off without a hitch. By the way, the weather was also great on the actual June 14 date for the Flag Day holiday. Quincy's parade is actually the largest Flag Day Parade in the country.

Keep citronella candles, insect coils and oil products out of reach. Ingestions can produce stomach irritation and possibly even central nervous system depression. If inhaled, the oils could cause aspiration pneumonia in pets.

Never use fireworks around pets! While exposure to lit fireworks can potentially result in severe burns and/or trauma to the face and paws of curious pets, even unused fireworks can pose a danger. Many types contain potentially toxic substances, including potassium nitrate, arsenic and other heavy metals.

Loud, crowded fireworks displays are no fun for pets, so please resist the urge to take them to Independence Day festivities. Instead, keep your little guys safe from the noise in a quiet, sheltered and escape-proof area at home.

EXTRA Innings

by Sal Giaratani

Tim Wakefield a Lifesaver Once Again

So far this season Tim Wakefield is 4-2 with a 4.26 ERA. However, since entering the starting rotation in May, he has gone 4-1 with a 3.60 ERA in six starts. We've hardly missed Dice-K, a big disappointment for his salary and time with the Red Sox since coming over from Japan. Wakefield now has 197 lifetime wins. He's also closing in on the Red Sox win list too.

Roby Home from Hospital

Brooks Robinson the Hall of Fame third baseman for the Baltimore Orioles has been released from the hospital and is home and doing reportedly well. Robinson, 74, had been hospitalized at Greater Baltimore Medical Center for what was supposed to be routine surgery but ended up staying two weeks due to a high fever and infection. In 2009, he was treated for prostate cancer and has remained cancer-free.

A New Gedman Signs Up

Framingham's Matt Gedman, the Red Sox' 45th-round draft out of UMass and son of former Red Sox catcher Rich Gedman, has reported to the team's minor league complex down in Ft. Myers. If he ends up in the Sox operation, he can play several in- field positions. He had a .334 career average in his four seasons at UMass. He was the starting third baseman in the recent New England Intercollegiate All-Star game. Most likely, he'll probably end up in the Sox' Gulf Coast Rookie League team.

That's More Like It

Red Sox pitcher Josh Beckett is back to his old great form this season to date. His stats are proving he's on a comeback season. At the moment he is 6-2 with a 1.86 ERA. On the night the Boston Bruins won the Stanley Cup, he was pitching one of his best games ever. He ended up with a one-hit shutout and almost threw a no-hitter but thanks to the Bruins, no one seemed to know what he was doing. This may be Red Sox Nation but not on the evening of June 15 when it was all about those Big Bad Bruins whipping those Vancouver Canucks in their own house.

Orlando Reaches Milestone

The shortstop for the Cleveland Indians Orlando Cabrera reached a career milestone on June 12 when he whacked his 2,000 career hit with a single in that second inning. Red Sox Nation well remembers his contribution to the 2004 World Series winning Red Sox team after getting traded here as Norma was no more in Boston. Two thousand hits is a big deal and congrats go out to Orlando.

HOOPS and HOCKEY in the HUB

by Richard Preiss

THINKING AHEAD — It's been just a short time since the Bruins made their triumphal way through the streets of Boston via the Duck Boats but already thoughts of next season have appeared on the horizon.

The Bruins released their 2011-2012 regular season schedule in what seems to be a record time — it's usually made public July rather than in the waning days of June — and as usual it contains dates to ponder during these summer months.

For example, the Bruins will face all three of their 2011 Stanley Cup Eastern Conference playoff opponents at the Garden in October, the opening month of the season.

Indeed, the schedule features two of them in the first homestand. The season will open on Thursday, October 6 at the Garden with the B's facing the Flyers, the team they swept in the second round of this year's playoffs and defeated in overtime in the 2010 Winter Classic at Fenway Park. But the Flyers, as we all know, got revenge several months later when they bounced the B's out of the 2010 playoffs, despite Boston being up 3-0 at one point in games and leading 3-0 during Game 7. Thus, there is a lot of rivalry in this one.

Two nights later on Saturday, October 8, Tampa Bay comes to town, just months after playing the B's in what many consider the best NHL game played in the Garden perhaps since its opening in 1995. It was the 1-0 penalty free thriller in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference Finals that propelled the Bruins into the Stanley Cup Finals against Vancouver.

Then, when Bostonians celebrate Columbus Day on Monday, October 10, Colorado will make its only visit of the season to the Garden.

Later, as the month closes, Montreal will make its first visit of the season to Causeway Street on Thursday, October 27. Remember, it was Montreal that nearly derailed the Stanley Cup hopes of the Bruins in the opening round, taking the B's all the way into overtime in Game 7 before Nathan Horton scored the game winner. Two nights later — Saturday, October 29 — Boston will travel north of the border and visit the Habs for a contest in the Bell Centre.

As far as a rematch with Vancouver goes, it will take place in the Garden on Saturday, January 7 at 1 p.m. in what promises to be one of the most anticipated contests of the season. The Bruins will not play a road game in Vancouver during the regular season, meaning the next matchup with the Canucks after the January game could only come in the Stanley Cup Finals. The Bruins will play the 2010 Stanley Cup Champion Chicago Black Hawks in a January 15 road contest. Ottawa will host the All-Star game on January 30.

Other games of note include the annual day-after-Thanksgiving game — this year featuring the Detroit Red Wings on November 25. A couple of additional holiday weekend contests of interest include the B's hosting the Florida Panthers on Martin Luther King Day (January 16) and the Flyers coming to Causeway Street once again on St. Patrick's Day night (Saturday, March 17). The B's will also host the New York Rangers on Valentine's Day night (Tuesday, February 14).

Winnipeg is an NHL city once again (after acquiring the Atlanta franchise) and the Jets will visit Boston on November 26 — one night after that game with the Red Wings — making for a rare set of back-to-back home games. The Bruins will play at Winnipeg on December 6.

The NHL's 1,230-game regular season will come to a close some six months after it begins (Saturday, April 7 with all 30 teams in action) with the Bruins hosting the Buffalo Sabres that day in a 3 p.m. start. Then it's on to the playoffs as the Bruins seek to successfully defend their Stanley Cup Championship.

B'S PARTIAL PRESEASON — Although the Bruins had not released their preseason schedule as of press time, Montreal and Ottawa had done so. Boston will play at Ottawa on September 21 and Ottawa will play at the Garden on September 29. The B's will meet Montreal in Halifax, Nova Scotia on September 25 with the two teams playing once again the next night (September 26) in Montreal.

BU SCHEDULE — Boston University has released its men's hockey schedule for the upcoming year. The slate features 13 Hockey East Conference home games and 14 HE road contests plus some non-conference games.

Regular season action will get under way on October 8 when the Terriers host New Hampshire at Agganis Arena. A week later BU will play a non-conference game against perennial powerhouse Denver (25 victories last season). Another highlight will be the Red Hot Hockey game against Cornell at Madison Square Garden in New York City on November 26.

BU will celebrate the coming of 2012 in South Bend, Indiana as it takes on Notre Dame in a New Year's Eve contest.

Other highlights include encounters with arch rival Boston College and the annual Beanpot Tournament. BU will play at BC on November 13 and December 2 with the Terriers hosting the Eagles on December 3.

BU will play Harvard in the opening round of the Beanpot on February 6 and will face either BC or Northeastern on Monday, February 13.

The Terriers will close the regular season at home against Northeastern on March 3.
