Harrisburg Bishop Has "Profound Remorse"

Last week, Bishop Ronald Gainer from the Diocese of Harrisburg, PA, attended Mass at the Cathedral of St. Patrick. He was named in a grand jury report on rampant sexual abuse by Catholic clergy and told those in the congregation that he has "profound remorse," and offered his "heartfelt apology" to all the victims. Forty-five priests present were from his diocese.

As a Catholic, I cannot express, once again, how angry I am about the news out of Pennsylvania. I am reminded just how angry I was following the news in 2002, about the Archdiocese of Boston and Cardinal Law.

How long will it be before the Catholic hierarchy world-wide get their act together? Didn't anyone learn anything after what was exposed in Boston 16 years ago? Seemingly not! An institution that loses its moral authority has a hard time getting it back, if ever. Look at Massachusetts, see all the empty pews, see the lack of money being collected at Mass?

It is time for the Vatican to clean itself up before it's too late. Time the hierarchy of the Church to get it, and clean their mess up.

Tacky Move on President Trump's Part

President Trump recently signed a $716-billion military spending bill named in honor of U.S. Senator John McCain, R-AZ. However, standing in front of soldiers and military leaders at Fort Drum in New York, he made no mention of McCain's name anywhere in the 28-minutes of the signing. That was a tacky snub. A few hours later at an upstate New York fundraiser he mentioned the same bill sans McCain again.

Blessing of the Fishing Waters

The Fisherman's Feast is an annual event that began in Boston in 1910 and is based on a tradition that goes back to the 16th century in Sciacca Sicily. The Feast is based on the devotion of the fishermen from Sciacca to the Madonna del Soccorso (Our Lady of Help). When the fishermen immigrated to America in the early 1900's, they brought their traditions with them. Today's Feast is much the same as it was over 100 years ago.

The Feast traditionally starts on Thursday when the statue of the Madonna is moved from her home in the Fisherman's Club to a chapel at the center of the feast. This is her home throughout the weekend. Thursday is also when the fishermen that founded the Feast are remembered with a blessing of the fishing waters. The Feast culminates on Sunday night with the spectacular "Flight of the Angel."

A weekly column highlighting some of the more interesting aspects of our ancestry . . . our lineage . . . our roots.

FUCUS

Fucus is the name that was given to the cosmetic which the Greek and Roman ladies used to paint their cheeks and eyebrows. The use of cosmetics became very general among the Greek ladies and probably came into fashion because of their sedentary life style, which removed much of the natural color from their complexions. We are told that the practice of using cosmetics is one of great antiquity and probably started with the ancient Ionians, where it prevailed from the earliest times. They didn't paint their faces when at home, but reserved it for times when they traveled, or wished to appear more captivating.

The cosmetic that was used to provide a fair complexion was made from white lead, while the rouge was made from vegetable reds. Red lead and mineral alkali were also used. The eyebrows and eyelids were stained black, with a kind of burnt solution that is still being used by some ladies from other countries. A soot preparation was also used but this could never hold up against tears or perspiration and at times generated some very humorous situations.

Among the Roman ladies, the art of painting the complexion was carried to a greater extent than with the Greeks. The Romans even used a blue color to paint the veins on their temples and their favorite rouge was made from a variety of moss. All of the above is mere child's play compared to the following preparations or remedies which are taken from authentic sources, so help me Hannah (or henna).

Ass's milk was used to remove wrinkles from the face and make the skin white and soft. Poppaea, the wife of Nero, always kept enough she-asses around for her bath supply. White lead and butter was used for skin eruptions and ulcers on the face were treated with the afterbirth of a calf (yuck). Another good remedy to give whiteness to the skin and smooth away wrinkles was to boil the hoof of a white bull-calf for 40 days, then apply to the face with a linen cloth. Bull's dung was used to bring a rosy color to the cheeks, as did an extract made from crocodile's intestines. Red spots and discolorations of the skin were removed by using calf's dung kneaded by hand with oil and gum.

Any kind of skin fungus was cured by the application of the gooey substance made from the genitals of calves, dissolved in vinegar and native sulphur. The whole mess was stirred with a fig branch before application ... and folks, that's my tip for the day.

In this presentation, we'll take a look at some of these places and see where we came from and where we might be going.

Saint Jeanne-Antide Thouret

by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari

Jeanne-Antide Thouret was born on November 27, 1765, the youngest of five children, three brothers and one sister came before her. Her father worked as a tanner and her mother died in 1781, causing Jeanne to care for her siblings and aid her father.

At the age of 22, she entered the Daughters of Charity of Saint Vincent de Paul to serve those who are poor, first in Langres and then in Paris. Her father objected greatly, but eventually gave her his permission.

The French Revolution suppressed all religious congregations; Jeanne-Antide was consequently forced to abandon the Daughters of Charity after being badly beaten. The injuries she sustained, took eight months to heal, at which time, she teamed up with other exiles to tend to the poor. In 1795, she moved to Germany and in 1797, she left Germany and reached Einsiedeln in Switzerland before making the trip to Landeron where she met a highly anti-Catholic prejudice. In Landeron, she met her order's vicar general from Besançon who asked her to return to France with a number of young girls, and train them in the same manner she was trained, in order to be able to teach children and tend the sick. Upon accepting this offer, on August 15, 1797, she opened in Besançon a school for poor girls plus a dispensary as well as a soup kitchen for the poor.

On April 11, 1799, she founded a new congregation in Besançon known as the Thouret Sisters of Charity with the support of Letizia Ramolino (Napoleon's mother). The Order of Nuns spread quickly. In a few years, they extended their houses to twenty six countries, serving schools, hospitals and prisons. The institute received papal approval in 1819, when Pope Pius VII accepted the "Rule of Life" written by the foundress. Sister Thouret moved to Naples in her later years, where she passed away in 1826 after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage. Pope Pius XI beatified her in 1926, and canonized her on January 14, 1934. The Feast of Saint Jeanne-Antide Thouret is celebrated on August 24th.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS PART 1

CHRISTOFORO COLOMBO His Era and Legacy

by Prof./Cav. Philip J. DiNovo

There are ideologues and revisionists all over the United States who would like you to think very badly of Christopher Columbus and all he stands for. It is hard to believe that the governing board of the National Council of Churches declared that Columbus' arrival to America was a beginning of invasion by Europeans, not a discovery. The Council is not alone in fostering such guilt-inducing views. Indictments from many Native Americans to environmentalists want us to believe that Columbus was a villain.

Columbus was a great man, but he wasn't a saint; we know he wasn't perfect. In the beginning Columbus treated the Indians benevolently and I am sorry to say, later tolerated and even encouraged violence and oppression of them. While some Indians were peaceful, others were not. One of the misleading statements made about Columbus was that he introduced slavery to the new world. Before Columbus, the rulers of Mexico were Aztecs, a warrior tribe that had conquered and enslaved all other tribes in the area. Their chief duty was the demonic Huitzilopochtli, who each year demanded the sacrifice of over 50,000 men, women and children. These victims had their living hearts torn out by Aztec priests. Europeans dethroned all the Aztec's diabolical gods and stopped human sacrifices in order to convert the Indians to Christianity. The romanticism of the noble savage myth doesn't help to right the ancient wrongs done to Native Americans. In my opinion, the impact of Columbus was not entirely for the worse

It has been said that Columbus brought not religion but genocide, greed, slavery, and cruelty. Missionary zeal and Christian charity were an important part of the Columbus story. Most Native American Christians will tell you their Christian Faith is the most important thing they have. That faith, in part, came as a result of Columbus. Columbus' failings are more obvious with the advantage of hindsight. It is inhistorical — no less an abuse of the truth — to depict Columbus' discovery in exclusively negative terms. His achievements are simply stupendous. Historian Samuel E. Morison said that Columbus did "more to direct the course of history than any individual since Augustus Caesar." It is up to us to educate those who want to smear Columbus. Read about him and then educate. Please write letters to the editors when criticism of Columbus is simply off-target.

For me, Columbus is a hero! I hope you are looking forward to celebrating Colunbus Day. Let us make it a celebration that America won't forget; Christoforo Colombo, the discoverer of America deserves it!

Saying Good-Bye to Father John

by Sal Giarratani

On Thursday evening, August 16th, a huge crowd of family, friends, and neighbors filled the upstairs hall at the Winthrop Lodge of Elks in honor of Father John Nazzaro as he moves on to his next assignment in his Salesian Mission work.

Father John and I became friends almost instantly. The work he has done for the youth of East Boston and surrounding areas has been a tremendous blessing to all who met him and the children he helped guide through their lives. As someone who did not grow up in Eastie I cannot speak to this haven for young people but when I grew up in Lower Roxbury, I had the Emmanuel House staffed by Graymoor nuns who helped make the lives of young people better by their service to the community.

The Emmanuel House is now gone but the Salesians Boys & Girls Club continues on here. These havens for young people are needed now more than ever. God's work is done here.

Children's lives are built here. It will have an impact on the rest of their lives as the Emmanuel House had on me.

I will miss Father John at the helm as he moves on to Chicago first and then New Jersey. As Father John told those at the gathering, "We should be better people because we know each other. We should strive for this everyday of our lives."

Father John has been there. He's made a difference in this world. He's made something of your life. Humorously, I add, congrats you've won a free trip to the South Side of Chicago for four months and then you get to escape to your next assignment in Jersey.

We all will miss you!

L'Anno Bello: A Year in Italian Folklore

Amazing Almanacs

by Ally Di Censo Symynkywicz

If you stepped in to my parents' old home on any given day, you would most likely have heard the television tuned in to the Italian language channel. I no longer batted an eye, for I have been used to this since practically the day I was born. Due to my father's love for the Italian channel, practically every day of my life has consisted of some variation of a silly variety show, hour-long quiz game, soccer match, Italian soap opera, or news program. While I used to find these shows rather goofy when I was little, I now appreciate them for helping me learn the Italian language and about Italian culture — I especially love the travel and science programs, and I now subscribe to this channel myself. However, my favorite show on the Italian channel has not aired for seven years, though I watch it regularly online. It is called Almanacco di Domani, or Tomorrow's Almanac, and like most good things in my life, it was introduced to me by my dad. This quaint little fifteen-minute show provided folkloristic, astronomical, and fun fact information pertaining to the upcoming day — birthdays, history, recipes, notable quotes, you name it! Even saying the name in my mind conjures images of cozy dark evenings spent curled up on my couch at home, listening to the zany music announce the details of the next day.

I just love almanacs because they celebrate seasonal time and tradition, which anyone reading this column knows I wholeheartedly embrace. Italian almanacs, whether in the form of the aforementioned television show or quick write-ups in local newspapers, are especially useful for anyone trying to find out more about the customs, beliefs and values that characterize his or her heritage. In Italian almanacs, you will almost always find the following:

1) The Saint of the Day: The calendar of saints is very important to Italian culture. Until not too long ago, this calendar often determined the name of the child born on a particular day. In this month of August, for example, you could have babies named Lorenzo (St. Lawrence's Day, August 10th), Assunta or Maria (Assumption of the Virgin Mary, August 15th), Elena (St. Helen's Day, August 18th), Bartolomeo (St. Bartholomew's Day, August 24th), or, as is the case in many a family, Rocco (St. Roch's Day, August 16th). The feast days of saints are also interesting for the holiday and seasonal lore associated with them. The Assumption, for example, acquired many customs related to the start of the grain and first-fruits harvest, which, like the feast day, occurred around mid-August.

2) The Sun and Moon: Like American almanacs, Italian almanacs will also tell the rising and setting times of the sun and the moon. In olden times, farmers would have found this information very useful. Superstition parceled out various agricultural tasks to certain phases of the moon, such as planting crops during the period when the moon grows in the sky to ensure a similar result. Of course, nights with a full moon promised magic and mischief of all kinds. I like checking the rise and set of the sun in order to gauge seasonal changes. When the sun no longer sets after eight o'clock, as is happening now, I know autumn is on its way. Similarly, I love watching the sunset time progressively grow longer after the winter solstice with the anticipation of the coming spring.

3) Household Hints: Trust me, Italians seem to have more practical uses for everyday household items like rubbing alcohol, baking powder, lemon juice, and candle wax than I have ever heard. These little hints are cheap, environmentally sound and just like having a wise grandmother next to you dishing out advice! They definitively represent the more whimsical side of almanacs, true to the Italians' tradition of never taking themselves too seriously.

I love almanacs because they remind me that every day is special. Each day arrives laden with its own lore, history and curiosities. Almanacs teach us to always look forward, to keep hope and to always count even the smallest pleasures that a day can bestow. Now that the almanac bug has bitten me, I know that I will continue to pore over these olden bundles of wisdom and humor, whether in the form of Almanacco di Domani or The Farmer's Almanac website. So thanks to my dad for introducing me to these cultural curios, and happy (almanac) readings to all!

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Sal Giarratani

The Housing "Glut" Remains Unaffordable to Many Residents Wanting to Stay Put

This billboard down at the corner of Porter and Bremen Streets says it all.

I recently read a commentary on the Business pages of The Boston Globe telling readers, fear not, parks mean we won't end up like the Seaport over in Southie. Yeah, we have Piers Park, the proposed Piers Park II, and the even newer proposed Piers Park III, but all the parks in the world, as nice as they are, aren't going to help keep East Boston a livable community for all. Few will be able to afford the booming growth of Eastie. Most will be on the outside looking in as the community gentrifies poor and working folk elsewhere.

As an East Boston resident, the issues of housing, affordable housing, and serious over-development is always on my mind. How could it not be otherwise for residents of this community? In the past few years East Boston has been swamped with development, especially the waterfront area of Jeffries Point, but also across all the neighborhoods of East Boston. Look around, it hits you everywhere.

All over and you will see new housing popping up like weeds. Brand new structures and rehabbing of older structures. With all this comes overcrowding, only making parking issues loom larger. Much of East Boston has become so crowded that driving becomes overwhelming as does finding available parking spots.

As this "glut" of new housing units continues, the cost of living here becomes more and more tenuous for non-wealthy folks, which is much of this community.

Demographically, as the building boom continues here, many will be priced out of this community. The only folks safe are those that own property, everybody else could be headed for the cliff — falling off the housing grid.

Oh yes, I repeat, there is a glut of more and more expensive housing out of the reach of most folks in the neighborhood. Every time they rehab or build, the cost of the property goes up so does rent and condo sales prices. A glut for the wealthy but what of ordinary folks and families being priced out? Chelsea is turning. Revere is turning. The region will look like Latin America where there is only the very wealthy or the very poor. Not good news for the neighborhood's future. City Hall seems unable or unwilling to go beyond press releases on this issue.

Mrs. Murphy . . . As I See It

Cries for help are coming from the senior citizens and disabled residents of the Lyman Assisted Living Building on Paris and Gove Streets. According to a source, seniors' complaints are being ignored by HUD and the City of Boston. Sources allege that the building is a dumping ground for political favors! Despite being controlled by HUD there is a group of alleged hard-core (described as disabled) residents that smoke in a non-smoking building, allegedly use and deal drugs. Sources also reveal that allegedly there are people living with girlfriends that are not on the lease. According to some elderly, they will not attend building functions for fear of trouble. Some residents in the building have installed security systems and cameras inside their units at added costs to them. There are 45-units within the building and as many as 36-units want HUD to act on their behalf to make this beautiful building safe and rid of alleged undesirables that don't deserve to live among elderly and disabled people. According to sources, residents of the building do not hold Section 8 certificates, they PAY low income rent, and cannot afford to travel to other buildings. Some Lyman residents who have reported illegal activity are blaming the Mayor's office for not looking into these allegations! ... Eastie Woes! Despite heavy traffic problems due to construction at the tunnel, there are also inconsiderate drivers that continue to double-park at will, adding to the traffic chaos! Didn't law enforcement announce these bums were supposed to get huge fines for double-parking? How many double-parking fines has the city of Boston handed out to date? ... Revere News: Ninety-two ($92) grand missing in parking meter money in the city of Revere is a mystery. A recent audit also found $2.2 million in unused funds sitting in 86 dormant city accounts. It's outrageous that in 18 of the last 24-months no money was recorded in the city's parking meter account. It took an outside audit to figure this out. It doesn't look good for Revere's Parking Department and the Mayor that failed to do his job. A simple review of monthly reports by the Mayor (this practice has been customary for decades) may have prevented this! So why didn't the mayor do his due diligence! What happened? Nothing adds up! After much discussion, Revere Councilors Dan Rizzo and George Rotondo insisted on bringing in the Feds to investigate where the missing $92 G went! ... The summer is coming to an end, and schools will soon be opening. This means drivers have to be aware of children crossing. Also, school bus drivers need to be a little more courteous and not drive like they have special privileges! ... Election time will soon be here! I believe Congressman Mike Capuano is in trouble, as is Gov. Charlie Baker. Both men have become too liberal for moderates. Charlie Baker was a big disappointment to voters when he began cow-towing to Democrat's every request ... Approximately 20 white nationalists held their rally in Lafayette Square in front of the White House recently and were joined by hundreds of uninvited leftie loony counter protesters chanting "No Borders, No Walls, No USA at All." These protestors are true *ignoramus*es with no self-respect and nothing better to do but chant and rant! ... Parents send their children to expensive colleges to be taught, but instead many students are brainwashed by ultra-liberal professors. Some people can be sold the Brooklyn Bridge, and professors know this, so they pass their warped thinking onto the gullible students ... The Director of Massport announced his retiring a year ahead of time. Does this means Charlie Baker gets to name a new Massport head before he could be voted out? Rumors on Eastie streets think that Sal LaMattina could get the position, but rebutters believe Carlo Basile is more likely. It could be neither! ... The summer has drawn to an end, and so has all the great outdoor summer activ-ities East Boston offered their youth ... Enjoy Labor Day, and the last vacationing time of the summer. Have fun! ... Till next time!

Harvest and Preserve Herbs for Flavorful Meals Year-round

by Melinda Myers

Add a flavorful boost to any meal with garden-fresh herbs. You'll quickly discover the difference fresh herbs make when preparing any meal or dessert.

Harvest herbs whenever you need them for cooking or garnishing a favorite dish. Adjust the quantity of herbs used to allow for variations in flavor intensity and your family's preference.

In general, you will need two to three times more fresh than dried herbs. So, if the recipe calls for one teaspoon of dried parsley use one tablespoon (three teaspoons) of fresh parsley leaves.

Use a pair of garden scissors or pruners for harvesting. Make your cuts above a set of healthy leaves. The wound will close faster, and the remaining plant will look better. Rinse off the clippings and remove tough stems and any discolored or damaged leaves and start cooking.

Store the extra, unwashed leafy herbs in a vase of water and loosely cover with a plastic bag. Keep basil on the kitchen counter and cold-tolerant herbs like parsley and cilantro in the refrigerator.

Wrap thicker-leaved herbs like sage and thyme in a paper towel, set inside a plastic bag and place in a warmer section of the fridge.

Don't be afraid to keep harvesting. Regular picking encourages new growth for future harvests. Just be sure to leave enough foliage to maintain plant growth. You can harvest as much as 50 to 75% from established annual herbs and one third of perennial herbs at one time.

Clip off leaves and stems before the plant begins flowering to encourage more tender growth. You'll get the greatest concentration of flavor when the plant has formed buds, but before they open. However, don't discard the flowers if you've waited too long. Enjoy the beauty and added flavor of basil, lavender, lovage, monarda, oregano, Rosemary, sage, sweet marjoram and thyme blossoms in salads, soups and other beverages.

As the season winds down, consider preserving some of your favorite herbs to use all winter long and to give as gifts.

Drying is one of the easiest ways to preserve your herbal harvest. Collect large amounts of basil, rosemary, marjoram and sage just prior to flowering. Cut the plants back about

LaFesta Baseball Exchange NORTH END STYLE

Councilor Edwards with John Romano, George Canales, and the North End Dodgers and LaFesta All-Stars from North Adams

The North Adams Crew outside Mangia Mangia on Endicott Street with Owner Gary Forziati in back.

Dinner arrived from Avellinos and approximately 60 participants of the LaFesta Exchange continued our tradition of having a meal together. Players, coaches, NEAD board members, and trip organizers from both cities feasted on a nice dinner.

After dinner, NEAD President John Romano presented each player and coach with a souvenir medal. Romano also presented a certificate to Mr. Canales and his family from Representative Michlewitz who

City Councilor Lydia Edwards with George Canales of North Adams

The baseball teams from the North End and North Adams did their best to carry on the tradition of friendship and sportsmanship. After their long trip to Boston, our good friends from North Adams were greeted by heavy rain and thunderstorms last weekend.

However, the rain was not going to stop North End Against Drugs from providing a fun weekend for their friends in our sister city. Our original plan to have lunch at the Mirabella Pool was not possible with the heavy rain so we went to Plan B — which was developed on the fly!

A quick call to Gary Forziati at Mangia Mangia had us set up for a fabulous lunch.

Our next adventure was to the movie theaters in Revere where the movie of the day was

MVP's from the North Adams Game on 7/21

MEG! While our friends from North Adams stayed dry and enjoyed the movie, plans were set in motion for a basketball showdown at the Nazzaro Center. Thanks to a NEAD Acting Director Laurie D'Elia, the baseball players from both teams packed away their gloves and put on their sneakers and played several games of basketball.

Before they finished playing, the players and coaches from North Adams were greeted by City Councilor Lydia Edwards who was one of the Major Sponsors of NEAD's Family Festival. Councilor Edwards presented a citation to George Canales and his family, commemorating the 100th game of the exchange, played on July 21st in North Adams, and for their generosity and hospitality to the youth of the North End over the last 28 years.

was unable to attend. Also, a special acknowledgment was given to Ralph Martignetti of the NEAA and his family for all of their hard work to ensure the youth of the North End have a great baseball program each year.

Luckily the rain stopped, and after dinner, the group from out west got to enjoy the Feast of Madonna Della Cava before heading back to their hotel.

Sunday morning brought more rain, so the finale to the trip was a hearty breakfast at Mangia Mangia. Owner Gary Forziati opened up the place on his day off so that we could send our friends back home with a full belly. Cooking breakfast was Joe Blazo, who actually played in the very first game of the Exchange 29 years ago. Also stopping by was Massimo DiMeo who also played in the first game. A special guest appearance was made by John Pagliuca, who jumped into his rightful place behind the grill to help Blazo bang out all of the food. Senator Boncore, who could not attend due to another commitment, sent along a citation in the mail to the Canales family.

So, despite the rain the spirits of the group and the purpose of North End Against Drugs' Family Fun Festival was not dampened, not even a little! "It's All About Family" and what a Family we have both in the North End and way out west in North Adams!

WAKEFIELD GETS PLASTIC BAG BAN

The town of Wakefield has gone to a single-use plastic bag ban and now the city of Revere is taking a closer look at Wakefield's ban. Revere has been considering a ban since last year. Personally, I am all for such a ban. I once was a skeptic but after my many trips to Austin, Texas, I have seen the ban in use for several years now and all is looking good. People quickly became use to it and now bring their own bags like clockwork. Works for the environment and customers, too!

Also, if Austin can do it, I am waiting for Boston to follow suit. It won't be the end of the world for customers. Once you start not looking for those plastic bags, you won't regret the ban.

SAINT GENNARO

I Caught up with Ales Romano from Naples, Italy with her family at the Fisherman's Feast and she was happy to see the St. Gennaro poster who came from Naples, too

We've seen the posters all over the North End. We are getting a St. Gennaro Feast next month (September 21st-23rd) at Hanover and Battery Streets. All this is happening thanks to Frank DePasquale and Nicky Varrano and is a fundraising effort to fight autism. I hear the St. Gennaro's statue will be traveling here ffrom Italy for this feast.

The family of Ronald Yonuss recently remembered Ron on what would have been his 35th birthday. He was murdered in Chelsea when he was only 24 years old. He is a cold case to law enforcement, but still remembered very much by his family, especially my friend and Ron's granddad Dickie DeNardo.

Hopefully, one day his murder will be solved, but he will always be remembered by his family as a life not forgotten.

A Nostalgic Remembrance

Just a few days ago, I called Sal Meli's sister to see how he's doing. If you remember the name, it is because I've mentioned him over the years as a friend who traveled the world with me. We met at the beach in East Boston in 1960, both waiting our turns to play handball. Our first venture was to the Newport Jazz Festival, and for the next fifteen years, we traveled to Europe, Africa, Asia, and Latin America. The only places I can think of that we didn't hit were Australia, Oregon, and Alaska.

Sal is now residing in a suburban assisted living complex dealing with dementia. From my conversation with his sister, he seems to be happy and is content with his living arrangements. Several months ago, my son, John, wanted to see his Godfather. I set up a luncheon with Sal's sister, and John and I brought them to a restaurant on a Sunday afternoon. Sal played a great verbal con game, but I am not sure if he knew who we were.

On the way home from that luncheon, my son John, asked as to why I was so quiet. My response was, "I guess I was just reminiscing about some of the things your Godfather and I did when we were young and single. Most of the friends I made as a youngster have gone their own ways, some into the military, some into the trades, and some into trouble. Sal, I discovered when we met, we had similar tastes in life ... he liked to travel, he liked opera, Broadway productions, music from Symphony to Salsa, and we both liked Latin looking women. He was able to carve out vacation time that corresponded to my school vacations and we traveled in February, April, and the summer months from 1960 to 1975. I was to be his best man when he was to be married, but the relationship ended and I became his crutch until he was on his feet again emotionally. He was the best man when I married your mother, and keeping with Italian traditions, he became the Godfather of my first born son, you."

As I continued, John listened to stories he had heard parts of over the years. As we drove home, I elaborated on some of them, "Your Godfather worked for Polaroid in the area of quality control. He wrote his own work schedule around mine and was able to take off when I could. The first time we headed anywhere was to Puerto Rico and St. Thomas. Now that Fidel Castro controlled Cuba, P.R. took up where Cuba left off: fancy restaurants, international entertainment at the tourist hotels, and gambling at the larger hotels.

Within the next year or two, we explored about three-quarters of the islands in the Caribbean. Back then most weren't geared for tourists, so we roughed it much of the time. From there, we began to head to Latin America (Mexico, Central America, and South America). In most places, we went native, hoping to meet locals and intermix with the cultures and societies. We didn't want to stick out like tourists and we always tried to counter the image of the "ugly American."

John understood, as he developed wanderlust as a young man, and before he had graduated college, had visited several countries in Europe, hoping to blend in with the locals to better understand the cultures.

At one point in the mid-1960s, Sal and I decided to see the pyramids in Egypt. We traveled to Cairo in the middle of the summer. You don't know what hot is until you try a desert atmosphere in July. When it was time to leave Egypt, we tried to go to Israel, but this wasn't long after the Six Day War between Egypt and Israel. The war was in June of '67, and we landed in Cairo in July. There was no way we could travel from one to the other. We had to settle for Beirut back when they called it the Paris of the Mideast. From there, we visited Tunisia, Algeria, and Morocco. The only North African country we missed was Libya.

At other points in time, we tried just about all of the western European countries. With the political situation of the day, we didn't want to try our luck traveling in any of the Communist countries, so I've never visited Russia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, what was Czechoslovakia, and the Balkan countries. We did leave a few dollars behind in England, France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and many of the northern countries that were and are our allies.

Sal had a fascination with Latin America and we began planning trips to all parts. What I didn't know then, that I know now, is that most of the DeCristoforo's that left Italy after the unification in the late 1800s, headed to Latin America. The only one to come to this country was my father's father, Nunzio. John, while living in Zurich, Switzerland, actually discovered family there, and when I met them, discovered that most of my paternal side left Avellino and headed for Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Puerto Rico, and Cuba. I wish I had known this when Sal and I were traveling, as I would have looked up as many as I could find.

When I began knocking on doors in Hollywood, Sal was by my side helping me with everything I needed to make my way. I just had to keep him out of trouble due to some of the ladies he chose as companions. Other than one or two relationships in the fifteen years we hung out together, most of his lady friends left something to be desired. When I chose to close the Hollywood part of my life and return home, he was just as supportive as I rejoined the music scene in Boston and New York.

When I followed Dean Saluti's advice and applied to Boston University for entrance to a doctoral program, Sal was next to my folks applauding me all the way. In 1977, when Loretta and I were married, he was my best man. With my schedule, teaching in the Boston schools, playing with my band and those of other leaders, and attending classes, I had little time for hanging around. The one place that had been home was a nightclub called The Cave located off Boylston Street near the Colonial Theater. By this point in time, it had closed and the Cave crowd had dispersed.

When I finally received my doctorate in 1981, it was a month or so after son John was born and Sal was there for his Christening to act as his Godfather. This was 37 years ago and Sal is under someone's care due to his assisted living circumstance. So, a salute to an old friend. Even Babbononno liked him!

ArtsEmerson Presents the U.S. Premiere of HAMNET
By Ireland's Dead Centre

ArtsEmerson, Boston's leading presenter of contemporary world theatre, proudly welcomes Dead Centre's (Ireland) Hamnet, co-directed and co-written by Bush Moukarzel and Ben Kidd. Hamnet opens September 20th and runs through October 7th. A multimedia theatre experience, Hamnet brings Shakespeare's only son, who died at age 11 without knowing his famous father, to the stage. A riveting performance carried chiefly by a solo young actor confronts what it means — and what it costs — to be great. ArtsEmerson and Dead Centre will provide Boston audiences a final chance to see Ollie West perform in the role of 11-year-old Hamnet who The Guardian calls "riveting [and] completely poised." The companies celebrate West's farewell performance as well as welcoming the young and talented Aran Murphy to take over the role of Hamnet in the final week of performances at the Emerson Paramount Center.

"Hamnet is an entirely ArtsEmerson show in the way it upends convention," shares ArtsEmerson Artistic Director David Dower. "It's a completely surprising, and deeply moving, contribution to the world of Shakespeare. In focusing on his son, a whole new portrait of the man emerges. And it's audacious, entrusting this emotionally complex story to the care of its young star. Dead Centre is a fresh and rising voice out of Ireland that is emerging on the world stage with this piece. It makes a perfect opening to our 9th season."

Shakespeare's only son takes center stage. William Shakespeare had one son: Hamnet. While William was away working in London, Hamnet died at 11 years old without ever knowing his famous father. How do our dreams impact our families? Do adults really have it all figured out? Or are we blind to what we could have done better until it's too late? In Hamnet, a tour-de-force performance from a young actor confronts what it means — and what it costs — to be great and how living in the shadow of that greatness can keep one in the dark. In this moving, meticulous, multimedia wonder, ambition clashes with family responsibilities in a way that rivals the stakes of a great Shakespearean tragedy. Running time: 60 minutes.

The production runs three weeks at the Emerson Paramount Center's Robert J. Orchard Stage, located at 559 Washington Street in downtown Boston. For more information go to www.ArtsEmerson.org, or call the Box Office at 617-824-8400.

Molina escapes from the terrifying reality of prison life by sharing his fantasies about a mysterious 1940s movie star who takes on the role of a Spider Woman who can kill with a kiss.

The cast includes: Bernie Baldassaro, Johanna Carlisle-Zepeda, Eddy Cavazos, Arthur Cuadros, Taavon Gamble, Arthur Gomez, Ricardo Holguin, Diego Klock-Pérez, Davron S. Monroe, Luis Negron, Felton Sparks, Lance-Patrick Strickland, Lisa Yuen, and Katrina Zofia.

halfway in the morning after the dew has just dried off the leaves. Rinse — do not soak — the clippings and then remove any damaged or dried leaves.

Gather the herbs into small bundles and secure with a rubber band. As the stems shrink, so does the rubber band. Use a spring-type clothespin to hang the bundles from a clothesline or hanger.

Store the bundled herbs in a warm, dry, airy place out of direct sunlight for drying. Some gardeners cover the drying herbs with a paper bag to keep them clean.

You can also dry herbs in the microwave. Remove the leaves from freshly harvested herbs. Evenly spread two cups of washed herb leaves on a double thickness of paper towel. Microwave on high for four to six minutes, depending on your microwave.

Fully dried herbs will be brittle and rattle when stirred. Store dried herbs in an airtight container for later use. Label the container with the name of the herb and date preserved.

Then add these flavorful additions to your meals throughout the winter. You're sure to savor the flavor and memories these homegrown preserved herbs add to every meal.

Worcester Woos Paw-Sox Out of Rhode Island
In a few years when the city of Worcester finishes its planned stadium, The Boston Red Sox Triple A team will take to the road, get on 95 to 93 before hitting 90 west bound to Worcester. Baseball is coming to Central Massachusetts. This city actually had a National League team called the Worcester Worchesters from 1880 to 1882, playing their home games at the Worcester Agricultural Fairgrounds. Imagine being called the Worchesters, at least this time around the team will be called the Woo Red Sox, but what kind of an animal is a Woo? At least in Pawtucket, they had a great looking Polar Bear. Hold on, I think Polar Beverages will be sponsoring the new Worcester team. Maybe, the polar bear can come along for the ride, huh? I can see the new emblem right now, can't you?
Fitzgerald on Warren Spahn
On a recent Saturday morning, I was reading a piece by Joe Fitzgerald in The Boston Herald

Warren Spahn in 1952

where he wrote about legendary MLB pitcher Warren Spahn, who started his long career as a member of the Boston Braves. When he was pitching at Braves Field, I was in kindergarten. I did get to see him pitch in Boston, but not at Braves Field, it was in the mid-sixties when the Red Sox and Braves played in the Jimmy Fund Exhibition Game at Fenway Park. I also seen Hank Aaron and Eddie Matthews, too, but that's a story for another column.

As I read Fitzzy's piece, he once interviewed Spahn on a hot summer day and they ended up talking about durability in the heat. Spahn won 363 games — a record for lefties — and hit 35 home runs. (Eat your heart out Rick Porcello!). He understood everything about pitching. He once said, "Hitting is timing. Pitching is upsetting timing." He also offered this bit of wisdom, "A pitcher needs two pitches; one they're looking for and one to cross them up."
Ah, durability. When Spahn played, starters were supposed to be their own closers. They started a game and then finished it. No pitch counts, no middle relief, no closers. Then Spahn said to Fitzzy "Air conditioning came along and changed everything."
Spahn and the rest expected to pitch in the heat maybe throw 150 to 200 pitches, too. They played double hitters and wore hot woolen uniforms, too. Today's pitchers can't take the heat; they're too used to air conditioning to survive too long on the mound. Most of the guys on the mound today wouldn't have survived baseball in the '50s or '60s. and maybe even into the '80s. They are not as strong and durable as guys like Spahn.
I love reading Joe Fitzgerald. He used to be exclusively a sports writer before going wide on subjects but he is still the best when talking sports and lessons learned from it.
Happy Birthday To ...
Chris Capuano (40), and Gary Gaetti (60).

Pete Rademacher

Olympic Champ Was Only Man to Challenge for the Heavyweight Title in His First Pro Bout

Pete Rademacher had an outstanding amateur career culminating with a Gold Medal in the heavyweight division at the 1956 Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia. Rademacher won all three of his bouts by knockout and won the final in first round for a very impressive finale to his performance.

Pete had a very successful amateur career leading up to his Olympic victory. He won numerous titles including the Seattle Golden Gloves, the Chicago Golden Gloves, the All-Army Championship, and the National AAU Title in Boston in 1953. He had a final amateur record of 72 wins against 7 losses.

After winning the Olympic Gold, Rademacher got it into his head that he was ready to fight for the world heavyweight championship. Rocky Marciano had just retired and Floyd Patterson and Archie Moore were signed to fight for the vacant title. This bout would take place in November of 1956, just months after Pete competed in the Olympics. He was convinced he could beat either man.

When Patterson won the title Rademacher he approached Cus D'Amato, Floyd's manager, with the idea. Cus, always looking for a soft touch for Floyd, agreed, but told Pete he had to raise $250,000.00 for Patterson's end of the purse, plus put an additional $100,000.00 into escrow in order to ensure a rematch if the unthinkable happened and Floyd lost.

Pete found two backers and they set up a company called Unlimited Enterprises a small manufacturing firm. The idea was for the fight to publicize the new company and Pete's purse would be his salary as vice president.

The fight was set in Rademacher's home state of Washington both because it was the only place it would draw a crowd and the commission there was the only one that would sanction such it would be his one moment of glory in the bout. Later, Pete would say it was his biggest mistake as it only made the champion mad.

Patterson would score six knockdowns before sending Rademacher to the canvas for the seventh time for the full count in round six. After the fight referee Loughran said about Pete "He is the most courageous fighter I have ever seen."

Patterson would continue ducking the top contenders after this fight facing the likes of Brian London and Roy Harris before losing the title to Ingemar Johansson. He would go on to win the title back from Ingo and then fight him a third time. After that he would take on the unranked Tom McNeely before losing the title for the final time to Sonny Liston.

Rademacher would continue fighting and in his next bout was stopped by Zora Folley. He and Folley had been opponents in the amateurs where they traded wins over each other. Pete had a final professional record of 15 wins (8 by KO), 7 losses (6 by KO), and 1 draw. His biggest wins were over George Chuvalo and Bobo

Olson. He lost to such men as Brian London, Karl Mildenberger, Archie Moore, and Doug Jones. He would later become a boxing judge and referee.

Pete eventually went to work for the McNeil Corporation of Akron, Ohio. The company manufactured swimming pool products and Rademacher earned nine patents for products he invented, things such as kick-board training devices for competitive swimmers and wave-quelling lane dividers for pools. After retirement, he served as golf director for the American Cancer Society helping to raise over $1 million for cancer treatment.

The last I have been able to find out about him is he is living in a nursing home in Sandusky, Ohio.

While the fight with Patterson was something that never should have been allowed to happen, Pete Rademacher did show real courage in the bout. He was also pretty creative in how he made it all come about. He went on to do many good things for worthy causes, using his fifteen minutes of fame to good advantage, so some good did come from it all.

Patterson Floors Pete

a bout. Pete has said he was a 10 to 1 favorite not to show up. Truth is, the fight was thought to be so one sided that the odds of 10 to 1 in Patterson's favor were meaningless as no one was taking bets.

The fight took place on August 22, 1957 in Sick's Stadium in Seattle. Former light heavyweight champion Tommy Loughran was the referee. A crowd of 16,961 showed up producing a gate of $243,030 far short of the anticipated sell out that would have brought in $400,000.00. There was no live home TV or closed circuit broadcast of the fight.

The United Press called the match "weird" and Rademacher a "sacrificial lamb." It is not an exaggeration to say this fight was an embarrassment to boxing. The two leading contenders for the title at that time were Eddie Machen and Zora Folley, and they were both being passed over in favor of an amateur getting a shot at the title. The heavyweight championship had now sunk to perhaps its lowest point ever with this circus. What's really crazy is that Rademacher managed to come up with the $250,000.00 to pay Patterson.

As for the fight, it went longer than anyone expected and Pete showed plenty of courage. He even managed to floor Patterson for a count of four in the second round. The plodding challenger landed a right hand that did the job, but

by Richard Preiss

DEVIN BOOKER SCORES BIG AGAIN — He's not exactly a household name around these parts but some Celtics fans just might remember him for his performance again the C's back in the latter portion of the 2016-2017 regular season.

Booker, who was then playing in his second season as a point guard for the Phoenix Suns, proceeded to score 70 points against the Celtics during the C's 130-120 victory at the TD Garden on March 24, 2017.

Even though it came as part of a losing effort, the Friday night game was still the talk of the town over the weekend. Booker, who was only 20 at the time, was 21 of 40 shooting overall, hit four of 11 three point shots and, perhaps most importantly, went 24 of 26 from the foul line. He also came away with eight rebounds and six assists while playing 45 minutes of the 48-minute contest.

Booker, who had played for John Calipari at Kentucky, accomplished all of this while earning "just" $2,223,360 during the second year of his four-year rookie contract. That worked out to "only" $6,091 a day, a rather small sum by NBA standards.

Booker's feat catapulted him into an elite echelon of NBA stars. After all, only five other players in league history had scored 70 points or more in a game — with Wilt Chamberlain, David Robertson, David Thompson, Elgin Baylor and Kobe Bryant comprising that group.

And it turned out that Devin, the 13th overall pick by Phoenix in the 2015 NBA Draft, was not a one night wonder. During the 2017-2018 season when the third year salary under his rookie contract increased to $2,319,360 ($6,364 a day) he averaged career-high marks in several important categories including points per game (24.9) three point percentage (38.3), rebounds per game (4.5), assists per game (4.7) and foul shooting percentage (87.8). At one point during the 2017-2018 campaign he hit 60 consecutive free throws. He also won the three point shooting contest on All Star Weekend.

How outstanding was that third year for Booker? Well, since 1985 he is just one of only six players to average 24 points and four assists in their third season. As the Suns stated in a press release "each of the previous five would go on to win either NBA (regular season) MVP or NBA Finals MVP" at some point during their playing days. Their names: Allen Iverson, LeBron James, Michael Jordan, Derrick Rose, and Wayne Wade.

Speaking of LeBron, King James had this to say about Booker while seated in his new throne out in Los Angeles. "I'm going to be honest. If it's someone who is under the radar right now that I believe is going to be a really, really, really good all-star player — it is Devin Booker."

Well, with a blessing like that, from a superstar averaging just over $105,000 a day by way of his new contract with the Lakers, there was only one thing left to do.

Thus it was that the Suns management decided to reward Devin for a job well done. They recently awarded him a five-year, $158 million contract extension. Now, there will be a delayed start to all of this. Devin first has to play out the final year of his rookie contract that will pay him $3,314,365 for the 2018-2019 season. I know it might be a challenge, but somehow he'll have to get by on $9,080 a day through June 30, 2019.

But then on July 1, 2019 much more than a new day will dawn. That's when the terms of his new contract will kick in. Let's see — that will be $27.25 million for the 2019-2020 season, some $29.43 million for 2020-2021, another $31.61 million for 2021-2022, plus $33.79 million for 2022-2023 and (of course, saving the best until last) a healthy $35.97 million for 2023-2024.

Over the course of the five-year deal it all averages out to $86,575 a day on a year round basis.

"I am humbled and honored to commit to the Suns organization long term," said Devin in a post to his Twitter account. "I loved calling Phoenix home for the past three seasons as the team and community are special to me. Thank you to the Suns for drafting me and believing in me. I look forward to the future and pursuing a title as a Sun."

That last comment about a title is interesting given that Phoenix finished the 2017-2018 regular season dead last in the entire 30-team NBA with a dismal 21-61 record. Somehow, the Suns actually won more games on the road (11) than they did at home (10). That record included a 116-111 defeat at the hands of the Celtics in the Garden last December — a contest in which Booker scored 38 points.

By the way, if you want to see Booker in action at the Garden this season, your only chance will come on December 19th, when the C's face the Suns in a 7:30 pm contest.

And yes, as Devin stated, I think we would all be humbled and honored if we had an employer who was willing to pay us such a stratospheric amount for our services. Plus, it is true that any workplace willing to compensate a salaried employee at that level would indeed be "special." But remember that this is now and there is no guarantee in the NBA that a star player will remain with the same team for the length of his career — or continue to perform in a stellar manner.

If someone offers him even more money starting in the 2024-2025 season (when he will be only 28) there's a chance that Devin just might be singing the praises of a different franchise.

Until then though, much more than the sun is shining brightly in the Valley of the Sun for Devin Booker — the man that the Celtics would just as soon have you forget but the one that Phoenix hopes continues to perform so well that you will always remember.
