Own Worst Enemy

President Donald Trump recently tweeted he has complete power to pardon. Why he even brings this up is beyond me. Nobody has of yet found any crime committed by him and probably never will. The Fake News media may be talking foolishly about impeachment, as are some whacko progressive liberal types in and out of public office.

Sit back wait for the investigations to run their course. That is still a long highway exit away.

Meanwhile, however, I do not believe a president can ever pardon himself. Even President Nixon received his pardon from President Gerald Ford after he left office in disgrace back on August 9, 1974. Don't even bring up the subject. It only feeds the Fake News peddlers into talking more nonsense.

DISHONOR THY MOTHER

Nero finally came to the end of his resources and became so utterly impoverished that he was unable to pay the soldiers or the benefits which were due the veterans. This financial condition caused him to make new laws which were designed to replenish his treasury. Any persons who bore Nero's family name or were even remotely related were required to will five sixths of their estate to him. Anyone who was accused of being ungrateful to the emperor by not remembering him in his will was required to forfeit his entire estate to the empire, and lawyers who had written such wills were punished. He demanded the return of all rewards that he had previously given, and even stripped temples to melt down their gold and silver images.

He began his career as a murderer with Claudius, and often referred to mushrooms as the food of the gods. Later he succeeded in poisoning his half brother, Britan-nicus. His attempts to do away with his own mother and beyond comprehension. She offended him by strict surveillance and criticism. Nero responded by depriving her of all honors, her guard of soldiers, and he evicted her from the palace. He bribed men to annoy her with lawsuits while she remained in the city. She retired to a kind of beach house and was still harassed by land and sea with abuse and mockery at all hours of the day and night.

He attempted to poison her at least three times but she was thought to have made herself immune to taking antidotes. He even had the ceiling of her bedroom rigged with a device to loosen the panels so that they could drop on her while she slept. After this scheme failed he devised a collapsible boat to destroy her by shipwreck or by the falling-in of its cabin and she even escaped from this ordeal by swimming to shore. He killed an ailing aunt by giving her an overdose of a strong physic, then nullified her will and seized her property almost before she was cold.

After tiring of living with his wife Octavia, he tried to strangle her several times. Having no success with these efforts he had her put to death on a trumped-up charge of adultery. Historians tell us that he dearly loved his mistress Poppaea Sabina, but he kicked her to death while she was pregnant because she complained about his coming home late from the races (a strange kind of love). He then offered to marry Antonia, the daughter of Claudius, but she refused this great honor so he put her to death on a charge of attempted revolution. He then put to death all other persons who were related to him by blood or by marriage, in an attempt to wipe out any potential successor. He even ordered a stepson to be drowned because he liked to play at being a general and an emperor. He banished his nurse's son because he bathed in some baths which were built to honor Nero's visit. He harassed his tutor to the point of suicide, and poisoned all who had helped him to the throne. As a precautionary measure he even condemned the children of those whom he had put to death. A number of these children were slain together at a group meal along with their attendants.

After committing all of these heinous crimes, and encouraged by a lack of censure or condemnation, he put to death whoever he pleased without discrimination or mercy. He never gave a poor victim more than an hour of life after pronouncing sentence and even held a physician in readiness to quickly finish off any who lingered. He often boasted that no prince had ever known greater power.

All of the indignities, abuses and criminal acts heaped upon this unfortunate civilization were still not enough to satisfy the fates and the destines. Dame fortune threw in her lot and provided a plague which took thirty thousand lives in the short time of one autumn, then two towns in Britain were sacked and great numbers of their citizens were butchered while during this same time many Roman legions were sent from Armenia to the orient where they were almost wiped out.

Spc. 5 James C. McCloughan distinguished himself during 48 hours of close-combat fighting against enemy forces, May 13-15, 1969. At the time, then-Pfc. McCloughan was serving as a combat medic with Company C, 3rd Battalion, 21st Infantry, 196th Light Infantry Brigade, Americal Division, in the Republic of Vietnam.

President Trump awarded the nation's highest military honor, the Medal of Honor, to retired Army medic James McCloughan at the White House on Monday, July 31st. Drafted into the Army, McCloughan was a young private first class and medic who in 1969 was part of the Battle of Nui Yon Hill during the Vietnam War when he entered the "kill zone" to rescue injured comrades despite his own serious wounds.

McCloughan was in attendance this past April 27th in Quincy, MA, at the 30th Anniversary of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower to remember the names of all the Quincy military personnel whose names are remembered for their valor and sacrifices.

They Can Go Jump in Massachusetts Bay

Back in late June, President Trump's Advisory Commission on Election Integrity requested the voter list from each State. Most refused, citing privacy concerns. According to some news accounts, 44 of the 50 States refused. Massachusetts Secretary of the Commonwealth, William Galvin, was one of the State officials who rebuffed the Commission. I'm a conservative and a Trump voter (yes, I know Trump is not conservative, but compared to Clinton he's Jesus Christ), and I believe Secretary Galvin was justified and correct to say no.

In the Bay State, the central voter list is not a public document, it is not intended to be widely disseminated, and the Secretary of the Commonwealth has discretion over who gets to see it. The relevant law is Mass. Gen. Laws, Chapter 51, Section 47C, which states:

"[T]he state secretary shall maintain a central registry of voters … The names and addresses contained in said central registry shall not be a matter of public record; provided however, that they shall be available to state party committees, statewide candidate committees, state ballot question committees, the jury commissioner, adjutant general and any other individual, agency or entity that the state secretary shall designate by regulation consistent with the purposes of this section … "

1. The law is clear; the voter list "shall not be a matter of public record."

2. However, it "shall be available to state party committees, statewide candidate committees, state ballot question committees," in other words to those who need it to communicate with potential voters.

3. It is also to be made available to two specific State agencies, the jury commissioner and adjutant general. By enumerating two specific state agencies, the regulation, by inference, excludes others, unless additional provision is made for them.

4. Such addition provision is made at the discretion of the State Secretary.

So, as a matter of law, the Secretary has the right (authority) to withhold the list. I further say that he was right (correct) to withhold the list. My friend Bradford E. White, former Chairman of the Boston Republican City Committee, stated the issue well when he wrote, "There are no federal elections, period. There are only state elections for federal offices. All elections are at the sovereign state level and so long as the franchise is available and not denied in a discriminate fashion, there is no federal purview."

Perhaps the best, and certainly the most colorful, response to the Commission was from Mississippi Secretary of State Delbert Hoseman, a Republican, who, in a press release said:

"They can go jump in the Gulf of Mexico and Mississippi is a great State to launch from. Mississippi residents should celebrate Independence Day and our State's right to protect the privacy of our citizens by conducting our own electoral processes."

Boston Celebrates Bastille Day

Bastille Day returned to Marlboro Street on July 14th for a celebration of Francophone cultures. The street party filled the entire block with a stellar concert, dancing, and festive food and drink. Bastille Day, France's national holiday, commemorates the birth of French democracy.

The line-up, programmed by World Music/CRASHarts, showcased two phenomenal francophone acts: Ben l'Oncle Soul, a French singer with a unique retro style, and Daby Touré, who never fails to astound audiences with his ethereal voice, masterful guitar work, and original songs.

Back Bay's beautiful Marlborough Street was blocked off between Berkeley and Clarendon Streets to accommodate 2,000 revelers dancing in the street. Delicious French food from some of Boston's best French restaurants and drinks, including beer and wine, were available for sale. There were also activities for the children so the whole family could enjoy the party.

L'Anno Bello: A Year in Italian Folklore

Welcome, Warm and Sunny August!

by Ally Di Censo Symynkywicz

The month of August is like a sunflower for me: big, bold, warm and colorful. Indeed, I know that August has arrived when I see these cheerful flowers carpeting the fields of the small farm near my home, or beckoning happily from behind white picket fences on someone's front lawn. Just like the butter-hued sunflower, August is a month where the light seems more golden and the sky bluer. However, August also brims with bittersweet nostalgia. I know that soon school will start again, and I will need to readjust myself to the order and rhythm of my teaching job. Store shelves begin to sport decorations of scarecrows and hay, and even pumpkins for Halloween, signaling the commencement of fall and the busy nature of the harvest season. For these reasons, August truly teaches us to live in the moment, to enjoy the beautiful weather that accompanies the end of summer and the early autumn, and to revel in the bounty of Mother Earth. We can take a cue on how to celebrate August from the Italians, who honor the month with a plethora of feasts and proverbs that highlight the pleasures of this special time.

August in Italy contains several unique festivals that emphasize the communal spirit of summer. Many of these festivals are actually medieval tournaments and jousts, hearkening back to the days of old when Italy was a collection of city-states and such pageantry served as a means of displaying the power and might of one's city. At the Medieval Palio in Felire, Veneto, held on the first weekend of August, spectators can watch a parade of costumed locals and participate in an archery competition. Those who wish to witness an exciting joust can head to the La Quintana tournament at Ascoli Piceno, a city in Italy's Le Marche region, or the Giostra di Simone at the Tuscan town of Montisi, where "knights" representing the four neighborhoods of the village compete. When I spent an August in Italy eleven years ago, I saw a similar medieval parade at my father's hometown of Sulmona in Abruzzo. As I watched noblewomen float by wearing elaborate dresses of crushed velvet and stately knights in glistening chainmail, I felt as if I had been transported to the early days of my ancestors, when life was harsh and people clung to the bounty of the Earth for survival. However, the most famous August holiday in Italy is Ferragosto, which occurs on August 15th, the day of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary. Many Italians take the whole month off for Ferragosto, and visitors to the country will find the cities largely deserted as nearly everyone has flocked to the beach or mountains.

Italians also reference a wide array of proverbs relating to the weather or agricultural conditions of August. These bits of folklore are remnants of the past, dictums left over from the epoch when society was dependent on agriculture and people's survival depended on the quality of the harvest. However, these nuggets of wisdom still find a home among Italian farmers and folklorists who preserve them for generations to come. Many of these proverbs refer to specific crops, as August is a month of abundant harvest. One such saying intones: "Acqua d'agosto, olio, miele e mosto." Translated, this means that the rains of August prepare the important Italian staples of olive oil, honey, and must, or the juice of grape skins and seeds which comprises the first step of winemaking. Another proverb declares: "Agosto matura, Septembre vendemmia," referring to the fact that grapes ripen during August in order to be ready for the vendemmia, or grape harvest, the following month. Other maxims allude to the fact that August serves as the entry point for autumn and the colder period of the year. "Agosto annunzia il inverno" means that August announces winter. Meanwhile, the proverb "Alla Madonna di Agosto si rinfresca il bosco" roughly translates to the fact that after the Feast of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary (August 15th), the forest becomes chillier. These types of truisms are well known to my grandmother, who often admonishes that the first rain of August ushers in the winter. Of course, much of Italy remains very warm throughout August and into September and October, yet these aphorisms brim with the readiness and knowledge of a people aware that they must prepare their crops and livestock early in order to weather the difficult winter months.

So there you have it: a folkloristic compilation of feasts, holidays and proverbs relating to August. This cultural heritage can teach us a lot about how to enjoy this beautiful month. Let us revel in its warm weather and its sunflowers, in the last burst of summer before we step into our fall routines once again. Let us pay homage to harvest and prepare ourselves for whatever life has in store. These are the timeworn and much honored lessons of August, a month which even today bridges two seasons with abundance and a wealth of lore.

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Sal Giarratani

Nothing Wosrse Than Medic Rx from a Dr. Politician

No, I am not talking about real doctors who get elected to public office, I am talking about politicians who think answers to medical-related public crises are so simple to fix. They act like they actually know what they're talking about and wonder why someone hasn't seen their solution earlier.

Governor Charlie Baker thought holding drug overdose victims taken to an emergency room involuntarily for up to 72 hours would put a big dent in this current opioid crisis.

Over a year, ago when state legislators up on Beacon Hill passed a comprehensive law to address the opioid epidemic, these pretend doctors once again thought they had a great plan to fix everything. All they needed was the co-operation of the addicts to make it work. However, very few patients at ERs seem ready to take advantage of a provision designed to get them addiction treatment.

The law's final version says emergency rooms must offer such treatment on a voluntary basis. However, most of those waiting to get discharged out of the ER don't even want to talk to anyone about that idea.

The mental health evaluation would only take 10 minutes, but over 50 percent just say no to the mental health clinician. As Dr. Nathan MacDonald, chief of emergency medicine at Lowell General Hospital, opined, "You can try ... but patients who are addicted to opiates are in denial a lot."

Of course, what no one really wants to say is that hospital emergency rooms don't need any state law to hold anyone for their own good as long as that person is a danger to themselves or others. They call this a "Section 12." However, no one in an emergency room is going to start Sectioning drug overdose patients. You can't just section someone who recently overdosed. Patients get discharged in better shape than when they came in, but soon after are no better off than when they arrived.

Politicians need to get out of the way. This isn't an episode of "Saving Grace" and none of them are, to date myself, Marcus Welby, MD. This new law from last year could only fail as written.

Our best hope for the future is more education in the schools and more talking between children and parents. Sadly, for many addicts, they are living in a death spiral. Maybe someone can get through to them. We can only hope.

THEATRE NOTES

Commonwealth Shakespeare's
Romeo and Juliet
on the Boston Common

Kario Marcel and the cast of Romeo and Juliet

Unfortunately, I haven't yet had a chance to see the Commonwealth Shakespeare Company (CSC) production of Romeo and Juliet that is playing through August 6th on the Boston Common. Word I get from my spies is that it is a wonderful event. The CSC presents the works of Shakespeare outdoors in the midsummer. In the past, I have found it to be just a wonderful to experience these fine productions in the open air with the sounds of the city in the distant background. I do intend to see Romeo and Juliet before it closes. In the meantime, I thought I would share these production photos with my readers. I did have the opportunity to attend a rehearsal and that experience certainly whetted my appetite to see the full production.

I think it is safe to say you will enjoy watching Shakespeare done out in the open under the stars. Oh, and it is free.

As you watch, you can glance up at the envious moon and also think how the brightness of Juliet's cheek will shame the stars.

Shellac ... the nail color you cure professionally has come out with a divine New color that glistens in the light, called "Safety Pin!"

I've seen Frosted and Glittering Eyeliner from "Pat McGrath Labs." The Gold and Bronze liners are out of this world. As soon as a batch is made... it's sold out! All their products come packaged in a clear-sided pouch with one side Gold and filled with Gold sequins. Hard to come by!

Charlotte Tilsbury is a wonderful make-up line. Very classy and a well-made product. I bought a marvelous Frosty Powder "Skin Gliding Highlighter" that brings out the smoothness of any complexion. I'd almost say it's an illusion-type look! It defies fine lines. Amazing!

Then there are other Highlighters called "Haloscope" from Glossier ... coming in 3 shades. The newest one is Moonstone ... a white frost, great on brow line. Topaz ... I use as a blush and blend in with a brush. Then there's Quartz ... a wonderful highlighter for temples, Cupid's bow, and De Colletage! Always blend!

Cailyn has a Rose Gold "Just Mineral Eye Polish" that's quite different from the same old colors!

Also in a Rose Gold is a product from tarte ... tarteist Pro...a double-sided eyeliner with one side a Glitter Rose Gold and the other side a Frosted Rose Gold!! Night and day!

jane iredale "Skin Care Make-up" ... has out a Frosty eye-shadow/primer called Smooth Affair that I have in a creamy Lemon ... I just adore it. Smooth and easy to apply! Great for Brow Line.

Bobbi Brown has out an "Illuminating Powder" in Nude Finish ... works great over make-up or alone. Always apply with a brush! So from experience, these are some of my fave brands and colors. So get in a Frosty mood and get Frosted this summer!

Buona Giornata.

Keep your dog safe in the summer heat!

Whether you see summer as a time to have fun in the sun or take a nap in the shade, it's important to keep the health and safety of your dog in mind. The warmest months of summer can be a dangerous time for your dog. Here are some tips to make sure your dog enjoys the summer as much as you do.

On the go with Fido: make sure your dog has access to plenty of cool, fresh water 24 hours a day. There are many inexpensive and collapsible bowls (usually plastic or fabric) that you can take with you anywhere and refill at water fountains. If you are going to be out for a long period of time, freeze a bottle of water or bring ice cubes in a Tupperware container so that you will have cold water when you reach your destination.

Be aware that asphalt and sand can quickly get hot enough to burn the pads of a dog's paws and that your dog's entire body is much closer to the ground than yours. In hot weather, walk your dog on the grass or dirt where it is cooler.

Never leave your dog in a vehicle. When it's only 80 degrees outside, a car can heat up to over 120 degrees in just minutes; leaving a window cracked does little to prevent heat build-up. Many vets say that this is the most common cause of heat exhaustion.

Tying a dog outside a store while you run an errand is never a good idea, but it is especially dangerous in the summer since he may be exposed to direct sunlight. If you can't bring your dog inside the store, it's best to leave him home.

Avoid strenuous exercise on extremely hot days. Take walks in the early morning or evenings, when heat and humidity are less intense. Remember that if your dog is spending most of its time in air conditioning, the intense weather outdoors will be even harder for it to acclimate to.

Many dogs like swimming, but some cannot swim (bulldogs, for instance, are too large-boned) or may not like the water. Be conscious of your dog's preferences and skills before putting it in the water. Always supervise your pet while swimming. Dogs can become easily disoriented in swimming pools and may not be able to find the stairs.

Chlorine from pools and bacteria from streams, lakes, and ponds can be toxic for a dog's system. Always rinse your dog with clean water after swimming and never let her or him drink water from these sources.

Know the signs of heat exhaustion: There are many factors that can make dogs more susceptible to heat exhaustion: physical condition, age, coat type, breed, and the climate it is most acclimated to. Very young and very old dogs are at the most risk. Brachycephalic dogs (those with short muzzles), such as pugs and bulldogs, are also at greater risk.

Symptoms of heat exhaustion or stroke can include excessive panting, disorientation, and obvious paleness or graying to the gums due to a lack of oxygen. A dog's natural 102-degree body temperature should never exceed 105 degrees.

If you feel your dog is suffering from heat exhaustion or heat stroke, act immediately by submerging it in cool water (not ice cold) or by placing ice packs on its neck. Once the dog has been stabilized, get it to the vet.

Keeping Cool: If you keep your dogs outside, it's critical that they have access to shade, and remember that dark-colored dogs absorb more heat than dogs with lighter coats. Doghouses are not good shelter during the summer, as they can trap heat.

There are various products that can keep pets cool, such as fans that clip onto crates and mats with cooling crystals that stay up to 20 degrees below room temperate. These can be used as crate liners or as beds. Collars, vests, and other items are also available. For an immediate and inexpensive option, try placing your dog on a wet towel on a concrete or tile floor in front of a fan or air conditioner.

Dogs do not sweat and their only means of reducing body heat is by panting. Although it seems incongruous, trimming your dog's coat will not make him significantly cooler, and you should never shave your dog because its coat helps regulate body temperature and protect from sunburn!

I hope some of these ideas have helped you keep my pooch friends comfortable in the hot weather.

Remember it's ALL about THEM, not YOU. Keep your pet safe.

That' all for now ...

VIDEO VIEWS ... more than meets the eye

by Bob Morello

ALIVE AND KICKING (DVD)
Magnolia Home Ent.

Alive and Kicking showcases the dynamic culture and cathartic power of swing dancing from its historic origins to its impact today. Originating in Harlem during the Great Depression, swing was created to alleviate the economic and social stressors of the 1930s. Boiled down to its core, swing dancing is the pursuit of happiness. The film follows professionals and enthusiasts as they find joy through dance, giving an insider's view into the exhilarating world of swing.

THE CIRCLE (Blu-ray)
Lionsgate Home Ent.

When Mae (Emma Watson) is hired to work for the world's largest and most powerful tech and social media company, she sees it as the opportunity of a lifetime. Mae rises through the ranks, and is encouraged by the company's founder, Eamon Bailey (Tom Hanks), to engage in a groundbreaking experiment that pushes the boundaries of privacy, ethics, and, ultimately, her personal freedom. Her participation in the experiment and every decision she makes begin to affect the lives and future of her friends, family, and all of humanity. Capturing the phenomenon of today's social media and the consequences of being permanently checked in, The Circle is a modern day, gripping thriller.

TEEN WOLF: SEASON 6 - PART 1 (DVD)
20th Century Fox Home Ent.

Storm clouds gather as Scott and the pack head into their final months of high school. But the best days of their lives turn bleak when they lose their closest ally. Before the end, Scott and his friends will stand alone against the growing darkness and fight to stop the destruction of everything and everyone they love. Special features include "Behind the Scenes of Beacon Hills," a VFX Reel, and a Gag Reel.

FREE FIRE (Blu-ray)
Lionsgate Home Ent.

Bold, breathless, and wickedly fun, Free Fire is an electrifying comedy-thriller about an arms deal that goes spectacularly and explosively wrong. Set in colorful, gritty 1970s Boston, Free Fire follows Justine (Brie Larson) as she brokers a black-market weapons deal between IRA arms buyer Chris (Cillian Murphy) and shifty South African gunrunner Vernon (Sharlto Copley) in a deserted warehouse. What starts as a polite, if uneasy, exchange soon goes south when tensions escalate and shots are fired, leading to a full-on battle royale where it's every man (and woman) for themselves.

DEVIL'S DOMAIN (DVD)
MVDvisual

Lisa Pomson, a troubled, social media-obsessed teen, is conflicted with her sexuality and her parents misunderstanding of her. When Lisa gets secretly filmed binging, purging, and being out of line, the video goes viral and she suffers extreme cyber-bullying. Suicidal and on the brink of insanity, she strikes up an online relationship with a beautiful, mysterious stranger (the Devil). They grow close and meet and the stranger offers to help in exchange for a favor. The devil will rid her of the bullies and give Lisa fame and fortune in exchange for a baby. Lisa agrees and, as the bullies die one by one, Lisa's conscious kicks in and she regrets doing the deal. In the climactic finale, the Devil threatens eternal suffering and the death of her loved ones until she finally succumbs and gives the devil a baby that will grow to reign terror upon the world.

BEHIND THE MASK: THE BATMAN DEAD END STORY (DVD)
Candy Factory Films

Behind the Mask launched a nationwide craze when all eight minutes were unveiled at Comic Con in 2003. In a Hollywood system where Batman movies are huge-budget, mega-merchandised projects, this low-budget short shattered all expectations, garnering an incredible amount of buzz outside of the Hollywood system. With appearances from The Joker, Alien, and Predator, the film was a hit with die-hard comic fans and modern action film lovers alike. Considering the amount of buzz surrounding the film, cinematographer Sandy Collora was expected to be propelled into the Hollywood stratosphere. Instead, his career sputtered. Behind the Mask gives audiences an insider's behind-the-scenes look at the buzz-worthy short and the people who helped to create it, including Collora, comic book legend Neal Adams, and convention all-stars Sean Clark, Shawn Reeves, and Jordu Schell.

PRETTY LITTLE LIARS: THE SEVENTH AND FINAL SEASON (DVD)
Warner Bros. Home Ent.

In the seventh and final season, the troubled PLLs band together to unearth answers to the ultimate questions. Hanna is scarred from her kidnapping, Aria is haunted by Ezra's past, Spencer makes an impulsive decision, Ali's life hangs in the balance, and Emily turns to an ex for comfort. Romantic upsets entangle "Ezria," "Spaleb," and "Haleb," while the list of "Uber A" suspects is growing. And who, pray tell, is "A.D.?" After making the deadliest mistake of their lives, the PLLs are desperate to end the game before it ends them. Past lies and dirty secrets come to light in the final 20 episodes of the crush-worthy suspense series that transformed entertainment, fashion, and fandom.

TOMMY'S HONOUR (DVD)
Lionsgate Home Ent.

Tommy's Honour is the inspirational, true story of "Old" Tom and "Young" Tommy Morris, the real-life father-and-son team that revolutionized the modern game of golf. Set against the early days of the sport, the film follows the challenging and complex relationship between the two as they grow into golf legends. A compelling drama featuring standout performances from Peter Mullan and Jack Lowden, who play the father-son golf champions who grow together in their fame, fortune, and misfortune.

BAKER'S SWITCH ON MASS HEALTH?

In her recent Boston Globe commentary, Joan Vennochi was pretty critical of Governor Charlie Baker's decision to remove 140,000 nondisabled adults age 21 to 64 from MassHealth, the state's Medicaid program, to commercial insurance through the Commonwealth Connector. They would have to pay premiums like the rest of us and be responsible for co-pays also like the rest of us. However, House Democrats are opposed to this reform proposal.

Something has to be done with Medicaid, as it has been expanded again and again until the price tag now amounts to 43% of the state budget*, according Vennochi's commentary. Democrats are crying the usual refrain about how the governor wants to balance the budget on the backs of the working poor.

When first implemented, Medicaid had strict eligibility benchmarks to reach. As more and more are added to the MassHealth rolls, soon that program could represent nearly 50 percent of the budget and who knows when it makes the push over that mark. It's at a tipping point now. To do nothing, like liberals want, is simply irrational.

Editor's note: This is before federal reimbursements of more than half.*

NEW FOE FOR WARREN

Some Republicans are now backing longtime Republican operative Beth Lindstrom, a former senior aide to Mitt Romney who managed Scott Brown's challenge to U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren in 2012. She is now exploring the idea of a political run, saying, "I am a wife and mother of three kids who cares deeply about our state and where we are headed as a country. So much of our politics is pointless bickering."

St. Joseph Society member Rosemary O'Brien and her granddaughter Audrey Sears had a great time during this past weekend's procession of St. Joseph. Rosemary and I worked together for almost 30 years at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center in Boston. (Photo by Sal Giarratani)

Right now, the odds on favorite to win is State Rep. Geoff Diehl, R-Whitman. He has a strong base within the party's conservative activists.

The state Republicans need to find the best possible candidate, the one with the best chance of taking on and defeating Warren, who appears to be using 2018 as a springboard to a 2020 try for the Democrat presidential nomination. She says that ain't so, but few are buying that answer.

CONNOLLY TO STAY PUT

It appears that disgraced FBI agent John Connolly won't be getting out of prison any time too soon. He just turned 77 years old the other day, but now it looks like he will stay behind bars until at least 2039 when he will be 99 years old.

Florida officials did the right thing. When you play with fire, you get burned. The path he took was of his own making. He had choices in life and will now most likely do life for those reported bad deeds. He got convicted in the John Callahan murder in 1982. Justice was served in the Callahan case and continues to be served.

Lining up for the first pitch.

The North End Athletic Association (NEAA) capped off it 9- to 12-year-old program on Saturday, June 24th, with its annual Youth Majors Baseball All-Star Game. The game honors the best of the 9- to 12-year-old players, as well as two members of the community that have supported the NEAA over the years. The 2017 honorees were Pam Donnaruma, publisher of the Post-Gazette newspaper and the late James Pallotta. The players and their families were treated to pizza, soft drinks, snacks, Italian slush, a face-painter, and balloon-maker. The All-Star players all received special hats to wear for the game as well. At the end of the game, awards were given out to all of the players in our Junior, Minor, and Major League Program. Special awards were given out to League MVP Carlo Crocini; Playoff MVP Joe Everett; Pitcher of the Year Eamon Vraible; Rookie of the Year Max Howard; Sportsman of the Year Vinnie O'Bryne; and Coach of the Year Michael Martignetti.

Game Action

We also gave out trophies to one player from each team who most represents the ideals of Uncle Fred Carangelo. The Carangelo Award Winners were: Cardinals, Lucca Orlandi; Cubs, William White; Indians, Sonny Blazo; and Tigers, Joe Broderick.

Lastly, MVP awards were given out to the stars of each AllStar team for this game: Sonny Blazo for the Pallotta All-Stars and Joe Broderick for the Donnaruma Allstars.

Opening Ceremonies began with an awesome rendition of the National Anthem by Chiara Occipinti Haskel, who takes voice lessons at the North End Music and Performing Arts Center (NEMPAC). The First Pitch was thrown out by Pam Donnaruma.

Special Thanks go to our MAJOR SPONSORS, the Larson Family and St. Mary's Housing Corporation. Thanks also go to our other sponsors: Louie Graffeo & Pam Donnaruma, Vincent & Denise Sablone, Julie and Kyle McHugh, and Tresca Restaurant.

The game was exciting with great plays made by both teams. But after being way behind early, the Pallotta All-Stars made a late inning comeback and won the game 11-10.

BREADED CUTLETS

(Veal, Chicken or Turkey Slices)

2 pounds thinly sliced meat (approx. 1/4-inch in thickness)*
*(Use veal, chicken breast, chicken tenders, turkey breast, or sliced beef)
2 cups flavored bread crumbs
1 or 2 beaten eggs
1/2 cup of olive, canola or vegetable oil
3 paper plates

Place prepared bread crumbs in a bowl. Beat eggs in a separate bowl. With a fork, dip a slice of meat of choice into the beaten egg. Then place it in the bread crumbs. Thoroughly cover both sides of meat with bread crumbs. Place breaded meat in a separate plate. Continue in this fashion until all meat slices are breaded.

Heat one-quarter cup of oil in a skillet. Carefully place breaded meat slices in heated oil and cook to golden brown on both sides. Remove from skillet and place on paper plate to absorb excess oil. Continue frying in this fashion. Add more oil to skillet if needed to complete the frying.

FOR BAKING*: Preheat oven to 350°F. Spread a small quantity of oil on a cookie sheet. Place the breaded meat slices on the cookie sheet. Sprinkle a small portion of oil over each meat slice. Cover with aluminum foil and place in heated 350°F oven. Check after fifteen minutes. Turn over slices as bottoms brown and cook uncovered until fork tender. Depending on thickness of meat, some meat slices may take longer than others.

NOTE: I remember Mama making use of the remaining bread crumbs in the plate by adding them to any leftover beaten eggs. She then shaped the mixture into one or two bread patties.

When I was a child, I stood at the stove watching with a watering mouth as she fried the cutlets and the bread patties. I waited for her to give me the bread treat to enjoy before supper. Today I smile quietly when I see one of my grandchildren standing beside me, waiting for that special treat before supper.

Saint Marko Stjepan Krizin

by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari

Marko Stjepan Krizin was born in Križevci, within the diocese of Zagreb in the Kingdom of Croatia, in the year 1588. He began his studies in the Jesuit College in Vienna and continued them later at the University of Graz, where he became a Doctor of Philosophy.

He then studied at the Germanicum in Rome. As a student, he was smart and considerate. He studied in Rome from 1611 to 1615.

Krizin was ordained a priest and returned to his Diocese of Zagreb, where he performed pastoral work. Shortly after, the Archbishop of Ostrogon and Cardinal Petar Pázmány summoned him to Hungary. Later, they also gave him the task of heading the Benedictine abbey of Széplak, near Košice. At that same time, the Prince of Transylvania, Gabor Bethlen, who was a Calvinist, led an uprising against the Habsburg monarchy.

Košice was a stronghold of Hungarian Calvinism. To strengthen the position of the Catholic minority, the city mayor, Andrija Dóczi, appointed by king Matthias, called two Jesuits to Košice: Stjepan Pongrácz and Melhior Grodziecki. They helped the Catholics, which caused unrest among the Calvinist majority of Košice.

The Calvinists then incited a rebellion, falsely accusing the Catholic minority of arson, on July 13, 1619. At that time, Krizin was in the company of the other two Jesuits as they all struggled to help the Catholic minorities. When the commander of the Calvinist arm, Juraj Rákóczi, came to Košice with his guards on September 3, 1619, they arrested the three priests at once. They went without food and water for three days. The commander promised Marko Krizin a church estate if he renounced the Catholic Church and converted to Calvinism. Marko refused. All three were tortured and then beheaded.

They were canonized in 1995 as the Martyrs of Kosice by Pope John Paul II. The Feast Day of Saint Marko Stjepan Krizin is celebrated on September 7th.

A Nostalgic Remembrance

Last week, on two or three occasions, I thought about how my family moved from the cellar kitchen to the back yard for dinner when the temperature was oppressive. Well, last week, we had oppressive temperatures and, although the cellar-based kitchen doesn't exist for us, I decided to cook and eat dinner in the back yard. Today, we call this a barbecue. I told Loretta that I wanted to have just a few people over and fire up some steak tips which could be consumed along with a couple of cold beers. Of course, she refined my menu to meet the taste buds of the ladies that would be present. As a result, my steak tips became shish kabob, skewered chunks of meat interspersed with onions and peppers. My couple of beers became bottles of room temperature red and chilled white wines. Just plain chips evolved into little scoop shaped objects that could hold salsa and guacamole. After she added in the fixin's for a garden salad, ears of fresh corn, slices of watermelon and assorted fruit, I lost out on my primitive barbecue.

All of the ingredients for this restructured menu came about when we went shopping for the things we needed for the cookout.

I didn't want to have a large crowd, just my closest friends joining me in the back yard; so I invited Dean Saluti, John Silva, and Bill Strachman, and all were free on last Friday night. Of course, I didn't exclude the ladies, but we had a segregated crowd. Their significant others, the ladies, stayed in the kitchen with Loretta and the guys joined me in the back yard. So, Margie, Stephanie, and Jane sat around the table in an air-conditioned kitchen and we guys sat around one of the tables in the back yard sipping drinks and smoking cigars. When all of the food was ready, we guys chowed down in the back yard and told war stories. The ladies dined in the kitchen and told war stories. It was a fun afternoon until dusk and the unwanted neighborhood mosquitoes joined us. When we all lit our after-dinner cigars, the mosquito squadron flew away and we were saved from a night of scratching their bites.

Later, when everyone left, I returned to the back yard with a cup of coffee and finished my cigar. As I looked around, I reflected back on the backyard at 70 Eutaw Street in East Boston and how Nanna and Babbononno had it arranged. Their yard was rectangular in shape like the yards behind most of Boston's three deckers. Babbononno had built a tiny picket fence about three feet in from the fence that surrounded the yard. Within the sectioned off area, he and Nanna grew their vegetables. To get into the yard, we had to walk under an arch-shaped trellis interlaced with grape vines. Once in the middle of the yard, there were flowers that Nanna had planted. Babbononno thought they were useless. His comment was, "If you grow it and can't eat it, it ain't worth it." But she grew flowers anyway.

Our backyard is a bit different than the one designed by Babbononno. The main area has sidewalk brick as the base. As a matter of fact, they are the bricks that used to be part of North Square in Boston's North End. When North Square was done over about 25 or 30 years ago, I bought the bricks from the contractor that excavated the square.

Beyond the brick-lined part of the back yard is a low wall, about a foot or so high, and above this is a rock garden that ascends upward in several tiers. Interspersed among the rocks are objects that reflect different cultures on the planet. In one corner, Loretta has a statue of Buddha and a couple of brass Chinese lanterns. In another area is a working Roman fountain with a lion's head that spits water into a small shell-shaped bowl that spills into a lower large shell-shaped bowl. This is surrounded by ancient Mediterranean statues and relics that celebrate the glory days of old Rome. In yet another area, she has a birdbath and a dish that she fills with birdseed every morning so the neighborhood critters won't starve. Interspersed with all of these things are flowers of all different types that bring her designs to life. I love the atmosphere and have my morning coffee al fresco when the weather permits. In a way, this is the modern version of the cellar kitchen and back yard living that I remember as a child in East Boston. Sometimes it's so comfortable out there I hate to come in. During the morning hours, several different animals come to the dish with the birdseed and take their turn having breakfast. First are the squirrels, next the chipmunks, and then the birds. First in the bird category are blue jays, then cardinals, black birds, mourning doves, and then starlings or sparrows. They take their turns in twos or threes, and when one group is done, the next group takes over. This morning activity of ours might sound strange, but it is actually quite interesting and relaxing to watch.

Growing up in the city, you don't see many animals in the backyards. They are often kept away by stray cats that roam the neighborhoods at night. With the windows open in the summer, the only animal noises I could hear at night were the squealing of a couple of cats that got into a fight. Other than that, the nighttime noises might be the planes landing at Logan, an occasional dog barking, and the whine of either police car or fire truck sirens. With everyone's windows open in the summer, these noises were often joined by loud conversations or family arguments in English, Italian or Ingliano.

When we moved to Belmont in 1961, we couldn't sleep for the first couple of nights due to the silence! No jets flying overhead, no sirens, no loud families, and no catfights. I guess families are quieter and cats don't fight in the suburbs. As a matter of fact, there was a brook running through the back yard when we first bought the house, and at night, when all of us were asleep, the wild animals of the neighborhood would come to the brook to drink. It was fascinating, especially for a city kid like me. Unfortunately, as the neighborhood became more developed, the town covered the brook with a culvert and that rustic atmosphere came to an end. Civilization had attacked.

Earlier this morning, as I sat in my backyard sipping my morning coffee, I wondered if the backyards and summer cellar kitchens from Nanna and Babbononno's day still existed. The reason I wondered was the various phases my backyard had gone through. When the kids were infants, we had a playpen out there, along with a sandbox, a kiddy pool, and a child-sized picnic bench. These were always surrounded by toys. Later, I put up a metal pole with a basketball net. I built a small skating rink for winter skating, added in a putting green nearby, and an area for baseball. My backyard became a magnet for all the neighborhood kids and I was happy with this because my house was where they all gravitated to when they were young. Recently, my son Michael came home for a few days. He is doing a movie in Rhode Island, and traveling to Providence takes less time from Boston than New York City. We sat in the backyard for a second cup of morning coffee, and the story you just read was told to him, word for word. (He loved it.)

landed in the high court concerned a woman who tried to get a protective order against her former fiancée, also a woman. The current law refers to "household members" but did not include unmarried, same sex couples.

The High Court got it right. The current law was "pretty clearly unconstitutional," stated Acting Justice Costa Pleicones, who wrote the majority opinion.

That Ship has Sailed

Recently, President Trump went to his Twitter account and threw yet another log on the fire. This time he called for a ban on transgendered persons enlisting in the U.S. military. He wants to undo former President Obama's executive order to open up the military to the transgendered community.

Doesn't our president already have enough logs on a growing fire without adding yet a new log? While I believe President Obama's decision was all about pandering to the LBGT community, I think Trump's most recent decision just keeps on creating more disruption in government. Transgendered members of the military? That ship has sailed, just like the recent departure of the Amerigo Vespucci from our harbor.

Trump can't win on this issue and it will just waste his time and energy. Folks like Jeff Kuhner on WRKO radio need to move on, too, rather than keep scaring their radio audience.

Steve Bannon is Right

I have never been a big fan of Steve Bannon, Trump's closet political advisor outside his family. Bannon wants to tax the super rich to pay for tax cuts for the working and middle classes most in need of a tax break. He wants to raise the current tax rate on the super rich from 39 percent to 44 percent.

How can the Democrats and progressives not support this idea? After all, they always talk that talk in their class warfare strategy, don't they?

EXTRA Innings

by Sal Giarratani

NY Post Sports Writer Said it Best

While reading the NY Post this past weekend, I found Joel Sherman's commentary on the current turmoil on the Boston Red Sox right on target.

First, on a positive Red Sox note, Sherman agrees that Chris Sale is the best pitcher and Craig Kimbrel the best closer in the American League.

Now getting to the negative stuff! The Red Sox were stupid to sign free agent Pablo Sandoval just before the start of the 2015 season. The Red Sox finally dumped him on July 19th while still owing him over $40 million. This was a bad move all around.

But Sherman's best comments came over the big to-do between David Price and Dennis Eckersley. He called the signing of this pitcher "a horrible free agent signing," adding that David Price "temperamentally fits Boston like skinny jeans on Sandoval." The unfortunate actions and words of Price wouldn't have mattered as much if he was pitching like "a $217 million man."

But given his record to date? If Price allegedly hates Boston so much, why did he sign here?

Judge Gets Back into Action

Following the All-Star break, Aaron Judge looked a little tired and had his troubles at home plate. But he recently hit his 33rd home run, which also was his 37th home run in his first 125 games in the biggies going back to late last season. This is the third most homers in this time span. Only Mark McGwire (42) and Rudy York (38) are ahead of him.

Rick Porcello Repeating 2015 Season

Last season, Rick Porcello was a 20-game winner and won the Cy Young Award, but this season he appears not so Cy Youngish. He seems to have gone back to his 2015 pitching stats. Most people forget that last season he had amazing luck. The team hit for him quite consistently. This year, not so much! Also, he has given up an incredible number of home runs. If they had an award for that, he would win it hands down.

Hopefully, he will rebound next year or just be the latest one-season wonder for the Sox.

I Just Don't Like Farrell

Is he a manager in charge or is he just a good guy for players to be around? Without a captain in the clubhouse, the manager is of most importance in maintaining order in the clubhouse. But Farrell is little better than Tito Francona was at the end of his stay in Boston. You can't lose control of the team.

David Ortiz was not just a great player, he was also a respected team leader. He was John Farrell's ace in the hole. Without him, Farrell's not so good in the leadership department. Maybe I am wrong but I don't really think so.

Remember, Dick Williams? His kind ain't around anymore. He took no BS from anyone. Lots of players disliked him but he got the job done, starting in 1967 when he helped do the impossible in Boston and turned the franchise around.

Day in Sox History

On July 25, 1941, Lefty Grove won his 300th game; it was his last major league win.

21 Strikeouts Perfect Game

A New Jersey high school softball pitcher recently pitched a true perfect game. Cedar Grove High School sophomore Mia Faieta struck out all 21 players she faced in a state playoff game. She played the biggest role in her team's 4-0 victory. No one has ever seen anything like this before and may never again. During the 2017, season she struck out 321 batters. Wow!

Red Sox Invite Boston Students to Fenway Park

For less than the cost of movie ticket, Boston students can enjoy the magic of Boston Red Sox baseball at Fenway Park this summer. The Red Sox are offering young fans affordable tickets to games through the team's Student 9s program, which provides high school and college students the opportunity to purchase tickets with a valid student ID at every home game.

"We want to make sure that this new generation of fans finds Fenway Park accessible, affordable, and enjoyable. It's essential to the future of our game," said Red Sox President Sam Kennedy. "We introduced the Student 9s to remove cost as a barrier for students, and allow for the spontaneity of deciding to come to a game last minute. Students can now come to Fenway Park for less than the cost of a movie ticket and with little advance planning."

Student 9s are the lowest priced tickets at Fenway Park and provide access with guaranteed standing room tickets and the potential for an upgrade pending availability.

Young fans can register to receive student offers by visiting redsox.com/student or texting "students" to the Red Sox at 23215 to sign up for alerts at any time.

Student tickets will be delivered to mobile devices or be available through the Ballpark App. Students can scan their ticket directly from their phone when they arrive at the ballpark gates, and are asked to bring their student ID for verification to gain entry.

HOOPS and HOCKEY in the HUB

by Richard Preiss

There he is, a symbolic giant of a coach, pictured upon the shoulders of a physical goliath of the game, surrounded by his players and, yes, ordinary fans. It was a time when those in professional basketball were accessible and walked freely among those who followed them with fervor.

Still photography was made for days like this. The day — April 25, 1952 — is preserved in history, showing Minneapolis Lakers head coach John Kundla perched atop the shoulders of the NBA's first superstar — George Mikan — in the joyous aftermath that followed the Lakers victory over the New York Knicks to win the NBA championship.

It's a picture that more than justifies the story of one of the several key figures involved in the early history of photography. As the story goes, he burst out of the doorway of his laboratory in the 1830s shouting, "I have stopped light, I have stopped light."

There were many other days of triumph for John Kundla, but none with such a fond remembrance. He kept a framed copy of that "stopped light" moment in basketball history in his residence for the rest of his life — and it was a long one. You see, George Kundla, who coached those Lakers to five titles in the early years of the league, was 101 at his passing on July 23rd. That meant he had literally lived long enough to witness the entire history of the NBA.

And he remembered it all, for John Kundla was a man able to hold his own in a media interview at his 100th birthday party last year. He was a man able to recall and discuss in detail many of the highlights of the NBA's earliest years. He was also a mentor who would coach five future Hall of Fame players during those title years of the Lakers — Mikan, Jim Pollard, Vern Mikkelsen, Slater Martin, and Clyde Lovellette.

He joined them in the Hall in 1995. However, long life does have its price. Not only did he coach them, he outlived all of them and thus experienced the heavy heart that came with the passing of each one.

John Kundla's NBA was far different from the one that exists today. It was a world of cool, drafty gyms, smaller crowds, and little publicity. Even in season, it had strong competition. The college game was the version preferred by fans in many places. Professional basketball was the newcomer and had to battle to earn the interest and respect of fans across America. The 24-second shot clock did not exist and the three-point shot was decades away from becoming a reality.

The season was also much shorter. When the Lakers defeated the Knicks in 1952, it was April 25th and that was the seventh game of the NBA Finals. Today, playoff teams would only be in the first round of action by that date.

The Lakers are not named after the slogan closely identified with Minnesota, "the land of 10,000 lakes." Rather, the team is named after the cargo ships that plied the waters of the five Great Lakes — Superior, Huron, Michigan, Erie and Ontario. Such vessels were known as "lakers," and it is after them that the franchise took its name.

Kundla played his college ball at the University of Minnesota in his "hometown" of Minneapolis — his family had moved there from Pennsylvania when he was 5. After military service in World War II, John returned and became the men's basketball coach at the College of St. Thomas in the Twin Cities.

When the Lakers came calling for a coach at the start of the 1947-1948 season, Kundla originally turned them down and held out for a more money. He was eventually signed for the rather lofty figure of $6,000 a year for three seasons — twice the size of his yearly coaching salary at St. Thomas.

From there on in it was full speed ahead. Much like other modern leagues, the modern NBA is the product of a merger. Kundla won right away as the Lakers captured the 1948 National Basketball League Championship. The following season, Minneapolis joined the Basketball Association of America and won the 1949 title in that circuit, downing the Washington Capitols — a team coached by Red Auerbach — in the playoff finals. That 1949 title is considered an NBA Championship.

It was shortly after that the two leagues formally merged to form the NBA. But no matter, on the court things remained the same. Kundla's Lakers won the NBA Championship in 1950, 1952, 1953 and 1954, making him the first NBA coach to win three consecutive titles. Some 35 years later, another Lakers coach — Pat Riley — would coin the term threepeat.

Kundla continued to coach the Lakers until 1959 — the year they were swept in the NBA Finals by the Celtics and Auerbach. His coaching days continued at his alma mater, the University of Minnesota, where he presided from 1959 until 1968. He then joined the faculty of the physical education department, where he taught until his retirement in 1981.

And although he spent his entire life in basketball, it was a different winter activity that presented him with another form of exercise. He and his wife Marie would go ice skating every Tuesday night during the decades they were raising their six children in their suburban Minneapolis home. A nice touch for a man who touched so many lives.
